

Cambridge University Press

0521825946 - Research Genres: Explorations and Applications

John M. Swales

Frontmatter

More information

Research Genres

Cambridge University Press
 0521825946 - Research Genres: Explorations and Applications
 John M. Swales
 Frontmatter
More information

THE CAMBRIDGE APPLIED LINGUISTICS SERIES

Series editors: Michael H. Long and Jack C. Richards

This series presents the findings of work in applied linguistics which are of direct relevance to language teaching and learning and of particular interest to applied linguists, researchers, language teachers, and teacher trainers.

Recent publications in this series:

- Cognition and Second Language Instruction edited by Peter Robinson
Computer Applications in Second Language Acquisition by Carol A. Chapelle
Contrastive Rhetoric by Ulla Connor
Corpora in Applied Linguistics by Susan Hunston
Criterion-referenced Language Testing by James Dean Brown and Thom Hudson
Culture in Second Language Teaching and Learning edited by Eli Hinkel
Exploring the Second Language Mental Lexicon by David Singleton
Focus on Form in Classroom Second Language Acquisition edited by Catherine Doughty and Jessica Williams
Immersion Education: International Perspectives edited by Robert Keith Johnson and Merrill Swain
Interfaces between Second Language Acquisition and Language Testing Research edited by Lyle F. Bachman and Andrew D. Cohen
Learning Vocabulary in Another Language by I.S.P. Nation
Network-based Language Teaching edited by Mark Warschauer and Richard Kern
Pragmatics in Language Teaching edited by Kenneth R. Rose and Gabriele Kasper
Research Perspectives on English for Academic Purposes edited by John Flowerdew and Matthew Peacock
Researching and Applying Metaphor edited by Lynne Cameron and Graham Low
Second Language Vocabulary Acquisition edited by James Coady and Thomas Huckin
Sociolinguistics and Language Teaching edited by Sandra Lee McKay and Nancy H. Hornberger
Teacher Cognition in Language Teaching by Devon Woods
Text, Role, and Context by Ann M. Johns

Cambridge University Press

0521825946 - Research Genres: Explorations and Applications

John M. Swales

Frontmatter

More information

Research Genres

Explorations and Applications

John M. Swales

The University of Michigan

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge University Press
0521825946 - Research Genres: Explorations and Applications
John M. Swales
Frontmatter
More information

PUBLISHED BY THE PRESS SYNDICATE OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE
The Pitt Building, Trumpington Street, Cambridge, United Kingdom

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
The Edinburgh Building, Cambridge CB2 2RU, UK
40 West 20th Street, New York, NY 10011-4211, USA
477 Williamstown Road, Port Melbourne, VIC 3207, Australia
Ruiz de Alarcón 13, 28014 Madrid, Spain
Dock House, The Waterfront, Cape Town 8001, South Africa
<http://www.cambridge.org>

©Cambridge University Press 2004

This book is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2004

Printed in the United States of America

Typeface Sabon 10.5/12 pt. System L^AT_EX 2_ε [TB]

A catalog record for this book is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication data available

ISBN 0 521 82594 6 hardback
ISBN 0 521 53334 1 paperback

Cambridge University Press

0521825946 - Research Genres: Explorations and Applications

John M. Swales

Frontmatter

More information

Contents

Series editors' preface ix

Acknowledgments xi

Chapter 1 Toward a world of genre 1

Chapter 2 The role of English in the research world 33

Chapter 3 Theoretical and methodological issues 60

Chapter 4 "Getting done": The Ph.D. dissertation 99

Chapter 5 The Ph.D. defense 145

Chapter 6 Research talk and research talks 173

Chapter 7 The research article revisited 207

Chapter 8 Three remaining issues 241

Appendix 259

Notes 261

References 275

Author index 299

Subject index 304

Cambridge University Press

0521825946 - Research Genres: Explorations and Applications

John M. Swales

Frontmatter

More information

Series editors' preface

The field of genre studies entered applied linguistics in the early 1980s, blossomed in the 1990s, and looks set to flourish for many years to come. The rapidly growing interest has been due not only to the theoretical insights it offers into communication in academic, workplace, and other settings, but also to its relevance for major areas of language teaching, most obviously, but not only, languages for specific purposes.

One of the most distinguished genre scholars is Professor John Swales, of the University of Michigan. His 1990 book, Genre Analysis, is a benchmark in the field and remains one of the most widely respected and widely cited volumes in the Cambridge Applied Linguistics Series well over a decade since its appearance. Now, Research Genres: Explorations and Applications will assuredly appeal to an even wider audience of researchers, graduate students, and classroom practitioners in applied linguistics, and to scholars and practitioners in communication, rhetoric, and education, as a whole.

Professor Swales's new book focuses on research genres, in both the oral and written modes, at the graduate level in higher education, especially at U.S. universities. Issues discussed include the growing influence of English and globalization on today's research world; the potential for "non-native speakers" to be marginalized, as a result; the nature of genres; approaches to genre analysis; the impact of corpus linguistics, computers, and other technology on genres; and much more.

Research Genres offers insights for university administrators and faculty in almost any discipline. Most of their work, after all, at some stage involves a wide range of common events, procedures, and processes in higher education: from public relations brochures, development plans, and position announcements, through curriculum vitae, research talks, and conference presentations, to the Ph.D. dissertation, the Ph.D. defense, and journal articles. John Swales writes insightfully on all these and other genres, and does so in an erudite yet accessible style that will appeal to almost any reader. We are especially pleased to welcome this latest addition to CALS.

Michael H. Long
Jack C. Richards

Cambridge University Press

0521825946 - Research Genres: Explorations and Applications

John M. Swales

Frontmatter

More informationx Series editors' preface

Copyright acknowledgments

The author and publishers would like to thank the following for permission to reproduce copyright material:

In Chapter 1, Christine Räisänen for the flowchart entitled “The genre chain in crash safety” on page 112 of The conference forum as a system of genres (1999, Gothenberg, Sweden: The University of Gothenberg); in Chapter 2, David Wilson for Table 6 on page 10 of The Englishization of academe: A Finnish perspective (2002, Jyväskylä, Finland: University of Jyväskylä Language Centre); in Chapter 3, Wiley Publishers, Inc. for the extract (pp. 102–3) from H. D. White (2001) “Authors as citers over time,” Journal of the American Society for Information Science, 52: 87–108; in Chapter 4, Dr. Margaret Luebs-Goedecke for the extract (pp. 75–6) from her unpublished Ph.D. dissertation, “Frozen speech: The rhetoric of transcription” (1996, Ann Arbor: The University of Michigan), and the University of Michigan Press for the extract (pp. 216–18) from John M. Swales and C. B. Feak (2000) English in today's research world; in Chapter 5, Greenwood Publishing Group for the figure entitled “Inventory of significant stages” (p. 142) from R. Hasan “Situation and the definition of genres” in A. Grimshaw (Ed.) (1994) What's going on here? Complementary studies of professional talk (Norwood, NJ: Ablex Publishing Corporation); in Chapter 7, Botanical Society of America, Inc. for the extract (p. 435) from R. F. C. Naczi, A. A. Reznicek, and B. A. Ford (1998) Morphological, geographical, and ecological differentiation in the Carex willdenowii complex, American Journal of Botany 85: 434–47; and Pearson Education for the extract (p. 25) from C. Nickerson, and M. Van Nus (1999) “Teaching intercultural business communication research” in C. Nickerson and M. Hewings (Eds.), Business English: Research into practice (pp. 25–34) (Harlow, UK: Longman); and in Chapter 8, Dr. Roald Hoffman for the poem “next slide please” (pp. 51–2) from The metamict state (1987) (Orlando: University of Central Florida Press).

Ann Arbor
April 2004

Acknowledgments

This volume has been long in the making and I have accumulated many debts in the process. In the immediate past, as it were, I am particularly grateful to Jane Sunderland of Lancaster University for her very careful and incisive reading of a late draft, and to David Lee of the Michigan ELI for help with formatting and for resolving various kinds of inconsistencies. I also would like to thank the nine participants in my Research Genres seminar in the Fall 2002 semester for their lively commentary on the draft of that time. I also have benefited from feedback provided by the senior undergraduates taking “Discourse Analysis and Language Teaching Materials” in the Winter semester of 2003.

Next come my two closest working colleagues at the University of Michigan: Rita Simpson, the Project Director of the Michigan Corpus of Academic Spoken English (MICASE) and Chris Feak, my fellow instructor of the institute’s most advanced writing courses. To Rita, I owe what little I know about the technicalities of corpus linguistics, many lively insights into corporist matters, and the construction of the MICASE Research Sub-corpus. To Chris, I gratefully acknowledge many years of materials writing collaboration and many years of animated discussion about academic writing. To both, my gratitude also for their friendship and collegiality – and for preventing me from taking myself too seriously.

Then there are the some two hundred doctoral students who have taken my dissertation and research writing classes over the last decade. It is these groups that force me in my materials writing to try and match their high expectations, and it is members of these classes who provide me with their sharp and sharply divergent disciplinary insights. They also have demonstrated to me time and again that many non-native speakers of English can indeed learn to write impressive research prose.

I also am grateful to the two anonymous reviewers for pointing out certain lacks of balance in early draft chapters. Beyond them I have benefited from conversations (at times via e-mail) with many people on topics that appear in this book. Among these, I would especially like to single out Ellen Barton, Alton Becker, Carol Berkenkotter, Vijay Bhatia, Dacia Dressen, Ken Hyland, Ann Johns, Anna Mauranen, and Philip Shaw.

Cambridge University Press

0521825946 - Research Genres: Explorations and Applications

John M. Swales

Frontmatter

More informationxii Acknowledgments

In other ways, the current volume has not sprung suddenly out of nowhere but has its antecedent traces in earlier work with which I have been associated. Earlier versions of parts of Chapter 2 appeared in my 1997 Wei Lun lecture at the Chinese University of Hong Kong and in Swales and Feak (2000). The issue of repurposing genres (Chapter 3) was first discussed in an article with Inger Askehave published in 2000, while questions pertaining to textual silence were first aired in Dressen and Swales (2000). Aspects of my study of Michigan dissertation defenses were presented at the 2002 annual general meeting of the British Association of Applied Linguistics (BAAL). Various parts of sections in Chapter 7 on the research article have progenitors: The section on Methods owes something to Swales and Feak (2000), and that on Discussions to Swales and Luebs (2002). I have also used some pieces of a talk at the 2000 Hong Kong conference on “Research and Practice in Professional Discourse” in Chapter 8, and this chapter’s penultimate section on Corpus Linguistics is in part a rethinking of an essay published in the 2002 volume on Academic Discourse edited by John Flowerdew.

I am grateful to Benedette Palazzola and Wei Dai of the ELI Library for tracking down stubborn references, and to the Series Editors, and to Mickey Bonin, Julia Hough and the staff at Cambridge University Press for their encouragement and help. Finally, I owe the most to Vi Benner, who once again has been an invaluable support throughout the messy process of writing a complex book in a small house – even though I do now finally have my own office in the basement.