MAKING WORDS SING

What makes a classical song a song? In a wide-ranging discussion, covering such contrasting composers as Brahms and Berberian, Schubert and Kurtág, Jonathan Dunsby considers the nature of vocal-ity in songs of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The essence and scope of poetic and literary meaning in the Lied tradition is subjected to close scrutiny against the backdrop of 'new musicological' thinking and music-theoretical orthodoxies. The reader is thus offered the best insights available within an evidence-based approach to musical discourse. Schoenberg figures conspicuously as both songsmith and theorist, and some easily comprehensible Schenkerian approaches are used to convey ideas of musical time and expressive focus. In this work of scholarship and theoretical depth, Professor Dunsby's highly original approach and engaging style will ensure its appeal to all practising musicians and students of Romantic and Modern music.

JONATHAN DUNSBY is Professor of Music at the University of Reading. He is the founding editor of the journal Music Analysis, and author of numerous articles on music of the past two centuries. His books include Music Analysis in Theory and Practice, co-authored with Arnold Whittall, and Performing Music: Shared Concerns.

In addition to more generations of undergraduate and graduate music students at the University of Reading than I care to count, other audiences have been subjected to parts of this book, to earlier versions of its ideas, to long or detailed analyses of which it contains samples and illustrations, and to the arguments that underpin it. These have included organizations to which I have been particularly grateful for significant opportunities for discussion and, it is hoped, improvement: the Caixa Foundation, Barcelona; the University of Cambridge; King's College, London; the Orpheus Institute, Ghent; the University of Oxford; Royal Holloway University of London; Trinity College, Dublin. I am grateful to the Arts and Humanities Research Board and to the University of Reading for funding research leave in 2000–1 without which this book would not have been possible. David Bretherton merits acknowledgement for his expert work in producing the music examples, but also my gratitude for his advice on a number of aspects of what the book says and how it says it, an influence of which I suspect he has not always been aware. And I thank Penny Souster of Cambridge University Press for her enduring confidence and gentle encouragement.
