Death, Grief and Poverty in Britain, 1870–1914

With high mortality rates, it has been assumed that the poor in Victorian and Edwardian Britain did not mourn their dead. Contesting this approach, Julie-Marie Strange studies the expression of grief among the working classes, demonstrating that poverty increased – rather than deadened – it. She illustrates the mourning practices of the working classes through chapters addressing care of the corpse, the funeral, the cemetery, commemoration and high infant mortality rates. The book draws on a broad range of sources to analyse the feelings and behaviours of the labouring poor, using not only personal testimony but also fiction, journalism and official reports. It concludes that poor people used not only spoken or written words to express their grief, but also complex symbols, actions and, significantly, silence. This book will be an invaluable contribution to an important and neglected area of social and cultural history.

Julie-Marie Strange is Lecturer in Modern British History at the University of Manchester.
Cambridge Social and Cultural Histories

Series editors:

Margot C. Finn, University of Warwick
Colin Jones, University of Warwick
Keith Wrightson, Yale University

New cultural histories have recently expanded the parameters (and enriched the methodologies) of social history. Cambridge Social and Cultural Histories recognises the plurality of current approaches to social and cultural history as distinctive points of entry into a common explanatory project. Open to innovative and interdisciplinary work, regardless of its chronological or geographical location, the series encompasses a broad range of histories of social relationships and of the cultures that inform them and lend them meaning. Historical anthropology, historical sociology, comparative history, gender history and historicist literary studies – among other subjects – all fall within the remit of Cambridge Social and Cultural Histories.

Titles in the series include:
1 Margot C. Finn The Character of Credit: Personal Debt in English Culture, 1740–1914
2 M. J. D. Roberts Making English Morals: Voluntary Association and Moral Reform in England, 1787–1886
3 Karen Harvey Reading Sex in the Eighteenth Century: Bodies and Gender in English Erotic Culture
4 Phil Withington The Politics of Commonwealth: Citizens and Freemen in Early Modern England
5 Mark S. Dawson Gentility and the Comic Theatre of Late Stuart London
6 Julie-Marie Strange Death, Grief and Poverty in Britain, 1870–1914
Death, Grief and Poverty in Britain, 1870–1914

Julie-Marie Strange

University of Manchester
Cambridge University Press
0521838576 - Death, Grief and Poverty in Britain, 1870-1914
Julie-Marie Strange
Frontmatter

This book is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2005

Printed in the United Kingdom at the University Press, Cambridge

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

ISBN-10 0-521-83857-6 hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this book, and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.
In loving memory of Sylvia Ann Bamber 1944–1993
Contents

Acknowledgements  viii
List of abbreviations  x

1 Introduction: revisiting the Victorian and Edwardian celebration of death  1
2 Life, sickness and death  27
3 Caring for the corpse  66
4 The funeral  98
5 Only a pauper whom nobody owns: reassessing the pauper burial  131
6 Remembering the dead: the cemetery as a landscape for grief  163
7 Loss, memory and the management of feeling  194
8 Grieving for dead children  230
9 Epilogue: death, grief and the Great War  263

Bibliography  274
Index  290
Acknowledgements

Lots of people have encouraged and supported the writing of this book either by reading parts of it, exchanging ideas over the topic or simply telling me to get a move on and finish it; I would like to thank all of them, especially Paul Johnson, including anonymous readers and referees. Thanks also to the British Academy who funded the thesis. To the students at Birkbeck College and the University of Manchester who took my Death and Bereavement course, thank you for sharing your thoughts on this subject and for making what could be a morbid topic to teach such a fun and enjoyable experience. Thank you also to the editors at Cambridge University Press for patience, feedback and support. It goes without saying that all the omissions, mistakes and opinions cited here are entirely my own. I would also like to thank the editors at Past and Present who published a version of chapter 5 and at Social History who published an essay which included versions of material here from chapters 3, 4 and 7.

In particular, however, I wish to thank Jon Lawrence and Andrew Davies who supervised the book when it started life as a thesis. Jon’s blunt and honest criticism and Andy’s more soothing, diplomatic critiques made an excellent pairing and I couldn’t have wished for better supervision. Added to this, the best food I ever ate throughout my thesis and some years afterwards was on account of Jon, Jane and Joe’s generous hospitality: thank you.

Bizarre as it may seem, I would like to thank the staff at Wavertree Sports Centre in Liverpool; classes here saved my sanity on more than one occasion. Geographical mobility means that many friendships shift shape as the years go by and I would like to thank the many friends, old and new, who have encouraged the writing of this book at different stages. I would especially like to thank old friends Jane Collins and Heather Ware. Special thanks also go to my sister Suzanne for friendship, love, humour and support – and also, more recently, for introducing me to the delights of being an aunt to a glorious Lily Rose. Special thanks to my parents David and Christina Strange who have supported me unstintingly throughout my academic career (and, of course, beyond); I owe a great deal to them. My husband George has lived with me and my book for the last five years, has sat in my office until the early hours of the morning when I wanted to finish something on numerous occasions and loved me regardless of my quirks and foibles: thank you sweetheart.
Abbreviations

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Abbreviation</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>BALS</td>
<td>Bolton Archives and Local Studies</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>BOHT</td>
<td>Bolton Oral History Transcript</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>GRO</td>
<td>Gloucester Record Office</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LRO</td>
<td>Lancashire Record Office</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>LVRO</td>
<td>Liverpool Record Office</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Man. OH</td>
<td>Manchester Oral History</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MOH</td>
<td>Medical Officer of Health</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PP</td>
<td>Parliamentary Paper</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PRO</td>
<td>Public Record Office</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WRO</td>
<td>Wigan Record Office</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>YRO</td>
<td>York Record Office</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>