THE POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY OF COSMOPOLITANISM

In a period of rapid internationalization of trade and increased labor mobility, is it relevant for nations to think about their moral obligations to others? Do national boundaries have fundamental moral significance, or do we have moral obligations to foreigners that are equal to our obligations to our compatriots? The latter position is known as cosmopolitanism, and this volume brings together a number of distinguished political philosophers and theorists to explore cosmopolitanism: what it is, and the positive case which can be made for it. Their essays provide a comprehensive overview of both the current state of the debate and the different visions of cosmopolitanism with which we can move forward, and will interest a wide range of readers in philosophy, political theory, and law.

GILLIAN BROCK is Senior Lecturer in Philosophy at the University of Auckland.

HARRY BRIGHOUSE is Professor of Philosophy and Affiliate Professor of Education Policy Studies at the University of Wisconsin, Madison.
THE POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY OF COSMOPOLITANISM

EDITED BY GILLIAN BROCK
University of Auckland

AND
HARRY BRIGHOUSE
University of Wisconsin, Madison
Contents

List of contributors page vii
Preface ix

1 Introduction
Gillian Brock and Harry Brighouse 1

2 Principles of cosmopolitan order
David Held 10

3 Territorial justice and global redistribution
Hillel Steiner 28

4 International justice and the basic needs principle
David Copp 39

5 Cosmopolitans, cosmopolitanism, and human flourishing
Christine Sypnowich 55

6 Global justice, moral development, and democracy
Christopher Bertram 75

7 A cosmopolitan perspective on the global economic order
Thomas Pogge 92

8 In the national interest
Allen Buchanan 110

9 Cosmopolitan respect and patriotic concern
Richard W. Miller 127

10 Persons’ interests, states’ duties, and global governance
Darrel Moellendorf 148

11 The demands of justice and national allegiances
Kok-Chor Tan 164

12 Cosmopolitanism and the compatriot priority principle
Jocelyne Couture and Kai Nielsen 180
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Contents</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>13 Beyond the social contract: capabilities and global justice</td>
<td>196</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Martha Nussbaum</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14 Tolerating injustice</td>
<td>219</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jon Mandle</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15 Cosmopolitan hope</td>
<td>234</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Catriona McKinnon</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bibliography</td>
<td>250</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Index</td>
<td>260</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Contributors

CHRISTOPHER BERTRAM University of Bristol (Philosophy)

HARRY BRIGHOUSE University of Wisconsin, Madison (Philosophy and Education Policy Studies)

GILLIAN BROCK University of Auckland (Philosophy)

ALLEN BUCHANAN Duke University (Philosophy and Public Policy Studies)

DAVID COPP University of Florida (Philosophy)

JOCELYNE COUTURE Université du Québec, Montréal (Philosophy)

DAVID HELD London School of Economics and Political Science (Government)

JON MANDLE SUNY-Albany (Philosophy)

CATRIONA MCKINNON University of Reading (Politics and International Relations)

RICHARD MILLER Cornell University (Philosophy)

DARREL MOELLENDORF San Diego State University (Philosophy)

KAI NIELSEN Concordia University (Philosophy)

MARTHA NUSSBAUM University of Chicago (Philosophy, Law, and Divinity)

THOMAS POGGE Centre for Applied Philosophy and Public Ethics, at the Australian National University
List of Contributors

Hillel Steiner University of Manchester (Government, International Politics, and Philosophy)

Christine Sypnowich Queen’s University, Kingston, Ontario (Philosophy)

Kok-Chor Tan University of Pennsylvania (Philosophy)
Preface

Trade has internationalized rapidly and labor mobility has increased significantly since the end of the Cold War. These developments have sharply raised questions about the moral significance of national boundaries. What obligations do citizens of wealthy countries have toward the citizens of poorer countries? Are they entitled to restrict the entry of immigrant labor, and if so in what ways? Are they entitled to restrict the exit of capital? Do wealthy citizens of wealthy countries owe more to their less advantaged compatriots than to foreigners who are even poorer? Political theorists have started to address these and related issues. They fall into two broad camps: those who consider national boundaries to have fundamental moral significance, and those who consider them to have no, or only derivative, moral significance. We observed that the latter camp, which we think of as committed to cosmopolitanism, had done a great deal of work countering the claims of nationality, but much less work elaborating the detail of, and defending, a distinctively cosmopolitan political theory. So we asked a number of political theorists whose work embodied a cosmopolitan perspective to write essays contributing to the task of defending a positive political philosophy of cosmopolitanism. This anthology is the result.

Most of the contributions were written specifically for this collection. However, in four cases, some material originally appeared elsewhere. The contributions by Hillel Steiner, Allen Buchanan, Richard Miller, and Martha Nussbaum contain previously published work, and we are grateful both to the authors and the publishers of the original pieces for permission to reprint that material here. Hillel Steiner’s essay is a revised version of “Liberalism and nationalism” which originally appeared in Analyse and Kritik, 17 (1995), pp. 12–20. Allen Buchanan’s chapter contains material that was previously published in “Beyond the national interest” Philosophical Topics, 30 (2002), pp. 97–131. Richard Miller’s chapter, “Cosmopolitan respect and patriotic concern” was originally

We are very grateful to all the authors, especially for their enthusiasm and energy for the project. Thanks also go to Shanon Daly from the University of Auckland for help in preparing the manuscript for publication. We are especially grateful to Hilary Gaskin of Cambridge University Press for being so supportive of the project, for acting promptly and professionally at every point, and for being so easy to work with. Gillian Dadd, Maureen Leach, Alison Powell, Annette Youngman, and the rest of the production team at Cambridge also deserve special thanks for their excellent work on publishing this book.