Index

Note: Entries followed by a lowercase f or t represent subject material contained in figures or tables.

abduction, or inference to the best explanation, 17, 68–69 acceptability judgments: and competence–performance distinction, 232; and distinction with grammaticality judgments in linguistics, 233–235, 238–239, 248–251; and distinction with permissibility judgments in moral theory, 251–252 acquisition models, of language and morality, 88–91 act (action): basic, 176; and circumstances, 81, 86–87, 112f, 125–129, 132, 255; and consequences, 80–81, 86–87; definition of, 126; deontic status of, 85; descriptions of, in trolley problems, 81, 112f, 256; distinction with event, 87–88; and distinction between tokens and types, 111–117, 115–116f, 124–125, 130, 134–136; infinitely varying circumstances of, 81; mental representations of, 114–117; and plans, 118–120, 118–119f, 174f; as primary object of moral judgment, 87–88; structural descriptions of, 118–120; structural features of, 80–81, 85–86, 92–93; and tree diagrams, 39, 118–120, 126–128, 175–178; unconscious appraisals of, 82–85, 111–117, 118–120, 121–122, 162–175; voluntary, 88, 158. See also action plans; act trees; directly intended action; harm, and acts; permissible acts; possible acts action-descriptions, 81, 256 act plans, 118–121, 128, 127–128f, 174f act-token representation, 120, 176–177. See also complex act-token representation act trees: definition of, 39; and explanations of variance in trolley problems, 126–8; and structural descriptions, 118–120, 175–178 Adams, John, 307, 317 Alexander, Richard, 24 American Law Institute, 130–131, 134 Anscombe, G. E. M., 6n7 appraisal theory, 111–117, 120–122, 162–174 Aquinas, St. Thomas, 148, 296 Aristotle, 7n8, 47, 132n4, 219 Asperger’s syndrome, 121 Austin, John, 50n4, 176 autism, 121 Ayer, A. J., 4, 317 Baier, Kurt, 315n2 Bain, Alexander, 6n7, 8t, 83n5, 187, 315 basic action, 176 battery: definition of, 117, 133–137; derivation of, 171f, 173, 174f; distinction between harmful and offensive, 134f; division of into purposeful (I-generated) and knowing (K-generated), 136, 146f, 154–156f, 159–161t, 310–350; location of in act trees as element of structural descriptions, 120, 174f; and means-side effect distinction, 118, 154–156f; and moral-conventional distinction, 104; multiple counts of as partial explanation of variance in trolley intuitions, 126–128; and Principle of Double Effect, 149–150; prohibitions of, 133–134, 135–136; and trolley problems generally, 324, 326, 327–329, 331, 334; voluntary act requirement for, 158 behavioral adequacy, 29 behaviorism: and competence–performance distinction, xx, 17–19, 51–55; and contrast with mentalism, 18–19, 236; damage to moral theory caused by, 19; inability to account for projection problem in moral theory, 95; and Kohlberg's moral psychology, 263n15; shift of focus of moral thought away from, 19. See also mentalism Bentham, Jeremy, 8t, 9n9, 129, 131, 133, 144, 299, 300, 315
binding theory, 70
biolinguistics, 23
Black, Hugo L., 298
Blackburn, Simon, 221
Black, Hugo L., 298
Blackstone, William, 133
Blair, James, 24
Bloom, Paul, 23
Botha, R. P., 69n10
Boyd, Richard, 221
Bradley, F. H., 20, 83n4–5
Brandt, Richard, 5, 8t, 40, 97, 186, 247, 263, 315n2
Brentano, Franz, 20, 77, 83n5
Brink, David, 221, 315n2, 316n6
Brood, C. D., 191, 316n7
Bromberger, Sylvain, xii, 9n10
Burlamaqui, Jean Jacques, 303n12
Butler, Joseph, 88n8, 191, 244, 315n2, 316 “by” test, as a tool for constructing structural descriptions and act trees, 119–120, 177–178 Carnap, Rudolf, 193 categorical imperative, 96, 133 causal structure, 86, 130–132, 134, 172 causation: and C-generation (causal generation), 131–132; computational theory of, 132; and definitions of battery and homicide, 134–136; as element of problem of descriptive adequacy and its solution, 86, 117–122; as implied by notion of K-generation, 132; and moral calculus of risk, 135–144; and Periodic Tables of Moral Elements, 154–156t, 159–161t; and Principle of Double Effect, 148–152; and Rescue Principle, 144–148; and Self-Preservation Principle, 156–157; as a universal feature of moral psychology and legal systems, 104–105 certitude: as criterion of considered judgments, 51–52, 245–246; and distinction with certainty, 245; as property of trolley problem judgments, 97–99.
See also uncertainty
ceteris paribus clause, 144
C-generation (causal generation), 131–132 children: intuitive jurisprudence of, 104; linguistic abilities of, 4, 48–60, 70; moral competence of, 258–264, 346–350; and trolley problems, 82, 250–261, 346–350 Chomsky, Noam: and ambiguity in Quine's notion of grammaticalness or meaningfulness, 95–96; and analysis of “knowledge of language,” 24–25, 61–63, 68n9, 220; and argument for linguistic grammar, 17, 40–47, 68, 189; and competence–performance distinction, 257n12; and considered judgments, 263n16; and distinction between descriptive and observational adequacy, 49; and distinction between methodological and metaphysical naturalism, 194n6; and generative grammar, 87, 89–90, 184, 204, 233, 314; and human rights, 209; and I-language interpretations of language, 24–25, 61–63, 211; and linguistic analogies, 3, 8t, 9n9, 64, 98, 102, 104, 175, 229, 262n15; and linguistics and philosophy at MIT, 9n10; and mentalism, 19, 236; nativist, modular, and representationalist theory of mind, 216n15; and new framework for tyre of moral cognition, 13–41, 307–308;
and problem of language acquisition, 69–70; and rationalism, 4, 48; and scientific revolution, 275–276; and theoretical grammar, 60–61; and transformation of linguistics and psychology, 4, 6 Cicero, 126, 255, 296 circumstances: and acts as elements of structural descriptions, 125–130; Bentham on etymology of, 129; Cicero's list of, 126, 255; descriptions of in trolley problems, 111–112; as element of problem of descriptive adequacy and its solution, 48–49, 85–86, 91–93; indefinitely varying quality of, 81; insufficient information about as illustration of poverty of perceptual stimulus, 111–117, 120–121, 162–174; notion of in complex act-token representations, 125; and question-formation in linguistic theory, 255 closure rule, 132–133, 310. See also Principle of Natural Liberty, Residual Permission Principle
Index

395
cognition, as substitute for “knowledge,” 68. See also cognitive science; moral cognition cognitive science: and artificial experiments, 94–96, 104; and computational theory, 36–38, 91–93, 102–104, 178; and framing the problem of descriptive adequacy, 87–93; and future of moral philosophy, 11, 317–318; and levels of empirical adequacy, 21–23; and mental representations, 46–48, 114–117; and modularity, 216n15, 314–315; and nativism, 35, 216n15; and Rawls’ assumptions about moral development, 35–36; and unconscious inference, 175 Cognitive Science Society (CSS), 319 coherenceism, 287. See also hypothetico-deductive method; reflexive equilibrium common law: as element of moral grammar, and concepts of “intent,” 170–172; and definition of act, 126; and definitions of battery and homicide, 133–136; and Dworkin’s constructive model of adjudication, 266, 269–270; and particularism, 72–73; and Rescue Principle, 117, 144; and traditional model of adjudication, 93, 101; and trolley problems, 159–161, 163–167; and unreasonable risk (negligence), 140–141, 158, 159–161 competence–performance distinction: and basic elements of Rawls’ linguistic analogy, 51–56, 59t; in Chomsky’s framework, 17–19; and Nagel’s criticism of Rawls’ linguistic analogy, 228–265; theory-dependence of, 55–56, 59t; and trolley problems, 342 competent judge: as element of Dworkin’s interpretation of Rawls, 266–267, 269–270; as idealized component of explication, 196, 246 completion, rule for dating of action by time of, 125 complex action-description, 111. See also action-descriptions complex act-token representation, 117, 124. See also act-token representation complex omission-token representation, 144–145, 147. See also omission computational theory, 36–38, 91–93, 102–104, 178 conceptual analysis, 4, 184, 192, 218–219 Confucianism, and concept of li, xv conscientia (conscience), 93; and argument for moral grammar, 44; and distinction with synderesis, 93; and Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 307, 317–318 consent, concept of in definition of battery, 136–137 consequence, as element of problem of descriptive adequacy and its solution, 86–87 consequentialism: descriptive inadequacy of simple forms of with respect to trolley problems, 96; and trends in contemporary moral philosophy, 317 considered judgments: and competence–performance distinction, 51–52, 53; distinction between moral intuitions and, 282–283; distinction between reflective equilibrium and, 99–100; as evidence for moral theory, 236, 282–287; and explanation, 196; moral competence and revisability of, 55–56; and moral intuitions of ordinary persons, 237; and Nagel’s criticism of Rawls’ linguistic analogy, 240–265; and prejudice, 162n11, 263; Rawls’ use of concept, 40–41, 221–222; and trolley problems, 86f, 110, 111 constituent questions, in linguistic theory, 255 constructive model (Dworkin), 266–267, 269–271, 273–274, 278t, 280, 294, 304 constructivism, Rawls on Dworkin’s understanding of, 267n1. See also social constructivism contact, and definition of battery, 134–165 contractual argument, in A Theory of Justice, 198–202 conversion rules, 117, 120–121, 162–174 cost-benefit analysis: and moral calculus of risk, 141–143, 158; and Principle of Double Effect, 150–152; and Rescue Principle, 147–148 criminal law: as element of moral grammar and intuitive jurisprudence, 102–103; and periodic table of moral elements, 158–162; universal grammar of, 105. See also battery; homicide; legal theory Damasio, Antonio, 24 Damasio, Hanna, 24 Dancy, Jonathan, 48, 71 Daniels, Norman, 5, 30, 40, 4481, 47, 5285, 186, 198, 211–212, 237n5, 247, 293 Danto, Arthur, 176 Darley, John, 5 Darwall, Stephen, 6n7, 316n6 Darwin, Charles, 8t, 23, 2487, 66, 183, 187, 315 decision procedure, 26, 27
Index

deductive-nomological explanation, 91 degeneracy of stimulus, 70–71 deontic concepts and deontic modalities in natural language, 104–105 deoctic logic and periodic table of moral elements, 157; and square of opposition and equipollence, 104–105 deoctic rules: 117–118, 132–152; and problem of descriptive adequacy, 225 deoctic status of acts and problem of descriptive adequacy, 85, 86; and periodic table of moral elements, 154, 156f, 157; and simplifying assumptions in moral grammar hypothesis, 124–125 deoctic structure, as feature of structural descriptions of trolley problems, 173–174 deontology, and trends in contemporary moral philosophy, 317

Descartes, René, xvii, 4, 17 descriptive adequacy; and cognitive science, 87–93; and normative adequacy, 223–224; problem of, 77–100, 195–197; and Rawls’ linguistic analogy, 29–30, 37, 48–50, 51, 59f; and trolley problems, 78–82, 106–110, 111f; use of term, 21, 22–23, 28
See also descriptive adequacy

De Waal, Frans, 24
dharma, Hindu concept of, xv directly intended action, 149, 150.
See also I-generation discounted expected benefit, and cost-benefit analysis, 141 discovery procedure, 26, 27
Donagan, Alan, xvii, 8t, 97
Duncan-Jones, Austin, 315n2
Durkheim, Emile, 189
Dworkin, Ronald, 5, 7, 40, 41, 42, 58, 66, 186, 198, 204, 214, 266–204, 303n12, 313
Dwyer, Susan, 3, 8t, 64n7

Einstein, Albert, xvii
E-language, 62, 211.
See also I-language
E-morality; distinction between I-morality and, 63–64, 266–304. See also I-morality emotion; and considered judgments, 244–245; and Greene’s dual process theory, 121–122; and intuitive appraisal theory, 111–117, 121–122; and overemphasis in recent moral psychology, 178 empirical adequacy; distinction between normative adequacy and, 183–227; and formal model of moral grammar and intuitive jurisprudence, 123–179; and moral grammar hypothesis, 101–122; and new framework for theory of moral cognition, 21–23, 32; and problem of descriptive adequacy, 77–100, 223–224; use of term, 301n12

Enlightenment: and competence–performance distinction, 259; and discussions of moral psychology in treatises on moral philosophy, natural law, and law of nations, 54; and grounding of human rights in theory of human nature, 296; and moral cognition, 315; and noncognitivism in ethical theory, 218–219; and rationalism, 174–175; and theory of moral sentiments, 216 equipollence relations, 105 ethical theory; and moral intuitions, 248–256; and particularism, 317; and Rawls’ use of term “moral theory,” 257; and virtue ethics, 317. See also descriptive ethics; metaethical adequacy; moral theory; normative ethics evaluation procedure: for grammars, 26, 27; and reflective equilibrium, 213, 272 evidence, for moral theory, as element of Dworkin’s misinterpretation of Rawls, 282–7. See also considered judgments, moral intuitions evolution: and Darwin’s theory of moral sense, 183, 187; of human language, 23–24; of human morality, 23–24, 258–264; and instinct for self-preservation, 172; and moral and intentional structure of trolley problems, 172–173; and origin of prejudice, 258–264 evolutionary adequacy, 29 explanandum phenomenon, 91 explanatory adequacy; and justice as fairness, 208; and Rawls’ linguistic analogy, 29, 33, 51, 59f; and reflective equilibrium, 212–213; and trolley problems, 82; use of term in linguistics and cognitive science, 21–23 explication, 191–195, 196–197 express principles, 19–21, 30, 50–51, 59f.

See also operative principles extensionality, as property of E-language and E-morality, 62, 64 externalization, as property of E-language and E-morality, 62, 64, 299, 303
Index

fairness, 201–202, 207, 208, 210, 297
Ferguson, Adam, 3, 7, 8t
Firth, Roderick, 64n8
Fletcher, George, 8t, 73n11
Fodor, Jerry, 35, 68, 149, 216n15
Foot, Philippa, xvii, 7, 38, 77, 309, 320
“for the purpose of” test, as tool for constructing structural descriptions and act trees, 119–120, 177–178 forbidden acts, 85, 105f, 124 framing effects, 345–346
Frankena, William, 8t, 315n2
Frege, Gottlob, 123
Freud, Sigmund, vi, xv, 35, 66
Fried, Charles, xxii, 9n10
Galileo, 16, 275–276
Gall, F. J., 315
Gardner, Howard, 315n2
generative grammar: Chomsky's concept of, 87, 89–90, 204; and competence–performance distinction, 233; and problem of descriptive adequacy, 87; requirement of perfect explicitness, 87; as theory of linguistic competence, 53–54; use of term, 14 generative linguistics: and basic elements of Rawls' linguistic analogy, 57; and competence–performance distinction, 236, 238–240; use of term, 13–14
Geneva Conventions (1949), 335
Gert, Bernard, 8t, 234–235, 236
Gibbard, Allan, 687, 316n6
Gilligan, Carol, 7, 8
Ginet, Carl, xviii, 124 goal: and action plans, 118–120, 176; and recursive definition of I-generation, 131 goal(s) of moral theory, 6, 14–15, 23–24, 26–33, 48–49, 67f; as element of Dworkin's misinterpretation of Rawls, 276, 277, 280–282, 293. See also descriptive adequacy; explanatory adequacy; normative adequacy Goldman, Alvin, xvii, 3, 81, 124, 125, 130, 176
Goodman, Nelson, 31, 46, 188, 204n10, 207–208, 209, 212–213, 293, 312
Gould, Stephen Jay, 23
grammar: argument for linguistic (Chomsky), 17, 44–46; argument for mental (Jackendoff), 44; argument for moral, 17, 43–48; argument for tacit knowledge of, 4, 17, 44; different meanings of in generative linguistics, 14, 58–60; distinction between theoretical and mental, 226, 60–61, 250; distinction between theoretical and pedagogical, 58–66; distinction between universal and particular, 14–15; and grammaticality judgments of linguists versus acceptability judgments of native speakers, 232, 233–235, 237–240, 248–249, 252, 256; and speaker's knowledge of language in Chomsky's framework, 15–16; as system of unconscious principles or rules, 15. See also generative grammar; linguistic grammar; mental grammar; moral grammar; Universal Grammar; Universal Moral Grammar
Green, Leon, 73n11
Greene, Joshua, 1, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 39, 102, 112, 113f, 121, 310, 315n2, 338
Griswold v. Connecticut (1965), 298
Grotius, Hugo, vi, xv, 5n4, 8t, 296, 303n12
Grounds, See Study in the Grounds of Ethical Knowledge, A Guest, Stephen, 299
Haegeaman, Liliane, 233, 230n7, 248–249, 253n10, 256
Hague Convention of 1907, 336
Haidt, Jonathan, 39, 111–112, 113f, 315n2
Hall, Jerome, 73n11
Halle, Morris, 69
Hampshire, Stuart, 8t, 241
Hand Formula, 140–141
Hare, R. M., 5, 7, 29n11, 40, 42, 58, 96, 97, 183–227, 229, 267, 271, 294, 299, 311–312, 316 harm: and acts, 145–147, 146f; bodily, 136; concept of in definition of battery, 135–136; concept of in moral calculus of risk, 137–144; and contact requirement in definition of battery, 135–136; and distinction between harmful and offensive battery, 134n6; and omissions, 144–145, 146f; and Principle of Double Effect, 150–152; and Rescue Principle, 144–148
Harman, Gilbert, xxi, 3, 5, 8t, 9n10, 220, 236, 320
Harrison, Jonathan, 315n2
Hart, H. L. A., 223, 296
Hegel, G. W. F., 315–316
Helmholtz, H. V., 83n5, 175
Hempel, Carl, 91, 134n5, 193
Henkin, Louis, 317
Index

Hilliard, Francis, 73n11, 135, 324
Hinduism, and concept of dharma, xv
Hobbes, Thomas, 50n4, 133
Hofstadter, Richard, 315n3
Hohfeld, Wesley Newcomb, 178, 299, 300, 301f
Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 84n5, 101, 176, 209 homicide: definition of, 117, 133–134; division of into purposeful (I-generated) and knowing (K-generated), 134, 146f, 154–156f, 159–161f, 319–350; location of in act trees as element of moral geometry, 120, 174f; and means-side effect distinction, 118, 154–156f; and Principle of Double Effect, 149; prohibition of, 104, 133–136, 172; as universal feature of legal systems, 104–105 human nature: and a common moral nature, 296–297, 308, 318; competing accounts of in Freud and St. Paul, xv; and human rights, 296; and mentalism versus behaviorism, 19
See also rights; Universal Declaration of Human Rights
Humboldt, Wilhelm von, 35
Hume, David, xvii, 8t, 35, 42, 72, 187, 208, 294, 296–297, 316, 317
Hutcheson, Francis, 8t, 20–21, 259, 303n12, 315n2, 317 hypothesis-deductive method: and coherenceism, 287; and common law adjudication, 93, 101, 266, 269–270; and deductive-nomological explanation, 91; and Dworkin's interpretation of Rawls, 289, 291; and medieval theory of conscience, 93; and problem of descriptive adequacy, 91–93; and Rawls' conception of scientific method, 287n5, 288; and reflective equilibrium, 291; use of by Chomsky, 287n5; use of by Kant and Sidgwick, 287n5 idealization: and considered judgments, 54; and linguistic competence, 233; and moral diversity, 56–57; as property of I-language and I-morality, 25, 26, 62; and Rawls' linguistic analogy, 66–57, 59f, 64–65 ideal theory, versus non-ideal theory, 199
I-generation: and act-token representations, 176; definition of, 130–132; and periodic table of moral elements, 154f, 156f; and Principle of Double Effect, 150; and recursive definition, 131.
See also K-generation
I-language: Chomsky's interpretation of, 211; and competence–performance distinction, 233, 236; explanation of concept, 25, 62–63; and heart of Rawls' linguistic analogy, 67f; and metaethical adequacy, 210–221 immediacy, as property of moral judgments, 83n4
I-morality: and Chomsky's concept of I-language, 25–26; and difference between wide and narrow reflective equilibrium, 211; and distinction with E-morality in Dworkin's commentary on Rawls, 266–304; and heart of Rawls' linguistic analogy, 67f; and metaethical adequacy, 210–221; moral theory as theory of, 63–67; and subject matter of moral theory, 276–277 impartiality, as property of moral judgments, 244–245 implicit bias, 162n11. See also prejudice “in order to” test, as tool for constructing structural descriptions and act trees, 119–120, 177–178 inaction, distinction with omission, 151 individualization, as property of I-language and I-morality, 25, 62, 63 induction: and abduction, 17, 68–69; and explanation, 192–193; and reflective equilibrium, 207–209 initial situation, role played by in Rawls’ theory of justice, 198, 200, 201, 202 initial state, role played by in Chomsky’s theory of language, 14–150 innateness: Descartes’ and Chomsky’s dispositional sense of, 17; different views of Reid and Mill on with respect to rules of justice and rules of grammar, 999; Dworkin’s “profound” interpretation of Rawls and, 266, 268; and initial state of language faculty, 14–15; and language acquisition, 4, 69–71; of moral knowledge or moral principles, xv, 36n16, 82, 183, 187–190, 266, 268, 307, 317–318, 320, 348–350; and moral and intentional structure of trolley problems, 172–173; and nativism in cognitive science, 35–36; and poverty of the stimulus arguments, 14–17, 69–71, 82, 346–347, 349–350. See also explanatory <table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Index</th>
<th>399</th>
</tr> </thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>adequacy; poverty of the stimulus; Universal Grammar; Universal Moral Grammar instantaneous language acquisition, idealization of, 69</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>intentionality: as property of I-language and I-morality, 25, 62, 63; and Rawls' conception of moral principles as functions, 64, 66</td>
<td></td>
</tr> </tbody>
</table>
| intention: in Anglo-American jurisprudence, 130–131; Bentham’s distinction between direct and oblique, 131; computational theory of, 130–131; and construction of act trees, 175–178; and definitions of battery and homicide, 134–136; and distinction between intended and foreseeable, 130–132; as element of problem of descriptive adequacy and its solution, 86–87, 117–122; and I-generation, 130–132; and means-end effect distinction, 118–121, 154–156t, 159–161t; ordinary language and, 130–131; and Periodic Tables of Moral Elements, 154–156t, 159–161t; and Principle of Double Effect, 148–152; recursive aspect of explanation of, 131; and Rescue Principle, 144–148; and theory of mind, 143, 178; as universal feature of moral psychology and legal systems, 104–105; use of by children to distinguish two acts with the same result, 104, See also “for the purpose of” test; I-generation, “in order to” test; intentional structure intentional structure, 172–173 internalism, as property of I-language and I-morality, 25, 62, 63, 220 intersubjective stability, 243 intersubjective validity, 223, 226 intuition(s), and linguistic judgments of native speakers, 232–236. See also intuitionism; moral intuitions intuitionism: and contrast with justice as fairness, 198; and descriptive adequacy, 133; and Moore, Prichard, and Ross, 316. See also intuitions; social intuitionist model intuitive jurisprudence: and appraisal theory, 111–117, 121–122; formal model of moral grammar and, 123–179; young children’s possession of, 104 Irwin, Terence, xviii, 93n11, 241 Islamic rationalism, xv Jackendoff, Ray, xxi, 17, 58, 68 Jefferson, Thomas, 307, 317 justice: and natural rights theory, 297; distinction between conceptions of and concept of, 199; sense of, 4, 65, 66; Rawls’ two principles of, 31n13, 200. See also fairness; social justice justification: 101–102, 201–202, 219, 222; and trolley problem experiments, 321–323, 329–330, 332–333t, 340, 345, 348 Kagan, Jerome, 8t Kagan, Shelly, 263, 314 Kant, Immanuel, 4, 8t, 13, 20, 35, 75–76, 93n12, 96, 123, 131, 191n4, 198, 285, 287n5, 303n12 Kaplow, Louis, 5 Katz, Jerrold, 62–63, 64n7, 68, 124, 211 K-generation: and act-token representations, 176; definition of, 130–132; and periodic table of moral elements, 154t, 156t; and Principle of Double Effect, 148–152; and Rescue Principle, 146–147; and trolley problem experiments, 320–321. See also I-generation: knowing battery; knowing homicide; knowingly harmful acts and omissions knowing battery, representation of, 136 knowing homicide, representation of, 134, 148 knowingly harmful acts and omissions, 145, 148t. 147 knowledge: and competence–performance distinction, 18, 53; and distinction between knowledge how and knowledge that, 68; and justified true belief, 68; and possession of a mental structure, 61–62. See also moral knowledge Kohlberg, Lawrence, 1, 5, 6, 7, 8, 8t, 9, 10, 11, 21, 34, 35, 66, 82n2, 84, 94n12, 96, 189, 243, 262, 263n15, 309, 315n12, 346, 349 labeled brackets, and linguistic structural descriptions, 253 language acquisition, psychological and logical versions of problem of, 69–70 LaPiana, William, 315n3 legal theory: and formal model of moral grammar and intuitive jurisprudence, 123–179; and human rights, 268, 295–303; and intuitive emotional appraisal, 121–122; and legal positivism, 504, 299–300; and moral grammar hypothesis, 101–104; and principle of natural liberty, 132–133; and rule of dating action by time of completion, 115; and structural legal theory (cont.)
  descriptions of act-token representations, 125–126; transformation of in past decade, xvi–xvii. See also criminal law; human rights; intuitive jurisprudence Leibniz, G. W., 4, 20, 35, 36n16, 303n12
Levi, Edward, 73
Lewontin, Richard, 23
li (Confucian concept), xv libertarianism, and principle of natural liberty, 133 linguistic analogy: basic elements of Rawls', 42–73; concluding remarks on, 314–318; Dworkin's commentary on, 266–304; Hare's and Singer's criticisms of, 7–9; preliminary clarifications about, 27–33; and problem of empirical adequacy in moral theory, 77–179; question presented by, 1–12. See also moral theory; Universal Grammar, Universal Moral Grammar linguistic competence: and competence–performance distinction, 18, 233; Chomsky's use of term, 4. See also generative grammar linguistic grammar, argument for, 44, 58 linguistic performance, 15 linguistic theory: and linguistic intuitions, 248–250; and summary of Rawls' linguistic analogy, 677; use of term, 13–14 linguistics: and competence–performance distinction, 546, 257–258; influence of Chomsky on, 6; initial comparisons between moral theory and, 14–27; and intuitions of native speakers, 232–236. See also generative linguistics; grammar; linguistic analogy; linguistic competency; linguistic grammar; linguistic performance; linguistic theory Locke, John, 198
logical positivism, 316
Lorenz, Konrad, 66
Lyons, David, xviii, 200, 247, 263
Mackie, J. L., 220–221, 315n2
Macnamara, John, 3n11, 93n11
Mahlmann, Matthias, xix, 3, 8t, 9n10
Mardiros, A. M., 19507
Marr, David, 103, 149, 178
Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), xix, 9n10, 77–78, 319, 320, 338
“maximin” rule, 201
McDowell, John, 48
Mead, G. H., 189 means-based moral principles, and trolley problems, 96, 337. See also categorical imperative: “for the purpose of” test; I-generation; intention; intentional structure; “in order to” test mental capacity: and moral sense as complex illustration of, 55; and Rawls on sense of justice as, 65, 281; and subject matter of Rawls' conception of moral theory, 277–280 mental chemistry, 127f, 129 mental grammar: argument for, 44, 58, 59t; distinction between theoretical grammar and, 60–61 mentalism: and contrast with behaviorism, 18–19; and moral theory, 19, 224–225; and subject matter of linguistics, 19, 236 mental representation, and moral grammar hypothesis, 38, 114, 116–117 mental state attributions, and trolley problems, 337 metaethical adequacy: problem of, 31, 32, 217–221, 223, 226–227; and reflective equilibrium, 212–213; use of term, 28, 29t. See also metaethics metaethics, 9, 29n11, 217–221 metaphysics: and conceptions of naturalism and physicalism, 184; and Dworkin's interpretation of Rawls, 270, 296, 298; and independence of moral theory, 213, 216; and logical positivism's verificationist criterion of meaning, 316; and metaethics, 217–222; and moral realism, 219; and Rawls' interpretation of justice as fairness, 298 method, as element of Dworkin's interpretation of Rawls, 287–291. See also hypothetico-deductive method; scientific method Mikhail, John, 8t, 82n1
Mill, John Stuart, xvii, 8t, 9n9, 35, 84n5, 127f, 129
Miller, Richard, 73n12 mind-independence, 220, 279. See also externalization Model Penal Code, 158
modularity, and cognitive science, 216n15 modus ponens, 92
Moore, G. E., 4, 228, 315n2, 316
Moore, Michael S., 73n11, 176, 220 moral agent, concept of, 87–88, 302n11
Index

Moral Calculus of Risk, 137–144, 148, 158 moral cognition: brain regions involved in, 105–106; modeling theory of on Universal Grammar, 3–12; and naturalism, 34–39, 303–304, 313; new framework for theory of, 13–41; and nineteenth-century neuropsychology, 315 moral competence: of children, 346–350; as distinct from moral performance, 18, 52; and parallel to linguistic competence, 6; and rationality, 33; and Rawls’ use of alternative terms for, 402 moral diversity: innate constraints on, 15–17; problem of, 215; and Rawls’ use of idealization, 56–57; significant influence of culture on, 90 moral faculty, xv, 44, 269, 276–287, 303–304, 307, 314–318. See also conscientia (conscience); moral grammar; “Sense of Justice, The” moral geometry: and mental representation of trolley problems, 119–120, 174f; Rawls on theorems of, 36–37 moral grammar: argument for, 17, 30, 43–48, 58, 59t; and conversion rules, 120–121, 162–174; and deontic rules, 117–118, 132–152; and distinction between K-generation and I-generation, 130–132; as feature of Rawls’ conception of moral theory, 43–48, 58, 59t; formal model of intuitive jurisprudence and, 123–179; generative character of, 15; hypothesis of, 38–39, 101–122, 310–311; and human rights, 295–303; initial evidence for, 104–106; and intuitive legal appraisal, 121–122; and particularism, 71–73; and poverty of the perceptual stimulus, 111–117; and problem of descriptive adequacy, 30–31, 106–110, 111f; and problem of normative adequacy, 30–31; and simplifying assumptions, 124–125; and structural descriptions, 118–120, 125–132, 153–162; use of term, 16. See also Universal Moral Grammar moral intuitions: and comparison with linguistic intuitions, 4–5, 16–17, 43–48, 232–256; as data for moral theory, 236–238, 240–250, 257–265; distinction between considered judgments and, 40–41, 51–55, 282–285; as evidence of mental structure rather than as subject matter of psychology, 236n4; malleability and revisability of, 229, 247–250; and Nagel’s criticism of Rawls’ linguistic analogy, 236–238, 248–256; and particularism, 71–73; and reflexive equilibrium, 197–213; and trolley problems, 75–82, 82–86. See also considered judgments; moral judgment moral judgment: and descriptive adequacy, 82–85; expanded perceptual model of, 114f; impartiality of, 51–55, 242, 244–246; intuitive character of, 16–17, 82–83, 97, 246; and nature of explication, 194; novelty and unboundedness of, 72–73; properties of, 16–17, 72, 82–85, 242–246; spontaneous character of, 16–17, 83, 97, 243; stability of, 72, 83, 97, 242–244. See also considered judgments; moral intuitions moral knowledge: and competence–performance distinction, 17–19, 51–56, 228–265; and main questions of the theory of moral cognition, 15, 24, 27, 29t; and skepticism, 68; and use of term, 61–67 morally preferable alternatives, 151–152 morally worse-than relation, 138–139 moral patient, concept of, 299, 302 moral performance: and competence–performance distinction, 54n6; distinction between moral competence and, 18, 52; and use of moral knowledge, 15 moral personality, 297 moral philosophy: academic status of, xv; and recent discussions of moral faculty, 44, 51n4; and Hare’s and Singer’s criticisms of Rawls’ linguistic analogy, 184, 186; main trends in since 1950s, 317; and problems of empirical and normative adequacy, 216; Rawls’ distinction between moral theory and, 213–214; Rawls’ knowledge of history of, 91n10; Raz’s distinction between moral psychology and, 286 moral principles: comparative, 145–147; conditional, 81, 91–93; decision procedure for, 10, 27; and descriptive adequacy, 22–23; discovery procedure for, 27; evaluation procedure for, 27, 213, 217, 221–223, 226–227; and explication, 191–196, 223; and metaethical adequacy, 28, 31–32; and normative adequacy, 28, 31–32; and particularism, 71–73; simplicity requirement for, 291n7. See also moral grammar moral psychology: development of as an academic discipline, xvi–ii, 5n4, 19, 20–21; importance of for moral philosophy, 6n7,
Index

moral psychology (cont.) 41–49, 63–67, 77–179, 181–304; importance of for political, social, and legal theory; 318; negative impact of behaviorism on, 19, 20–21; Rawls' approach to cognitive development and, 35–36; Rawls' conception of moral theory and, 6; Raz's distinction between moral philosophy and, 286. See also moral cognition; moral theory moral realism, and metaethical adequacy, 219–220, 270 moral reality, Dworkin's use of term, 278–279 moral relativism, and problems of empirical and normative adequacy, 216. See also relativism moral structure, of trolley problems, 170f, 172 moral theory; features of Rawls' conception of, 43–57, 67t; goal of, 276, 277, 280–282, 293; Hare's and Singer's criticisms of Rawls' conception of, 226–227; and I-morality, 63–67; initial comparisons between linguistics and, 14–27; and Nagel's criticism of Rawls' linguistic analogy, 228–229, 236–238, 252; noncognitivism and Rawls' conception of, 218–219, Rawls' distinction between moral philosophy and, 213, and Rawls on problems of empirical and normative adequacy, 213–217; and subjectivity, 222; subject matter of, 276, 277–280 motive, as element of problem of descriptive adequacy and its solution, 80–87 Mu'tazalites, xv Nagel, Thomas, 5, 7, 40, 42, 58, 78, 228–205, 267, 312–313, 341 nativism, in cognitive science and philosophy of mind, 35–36, 38, 216n15. See also innateness; Universal Grammar; Universal Moral Grammar naturalism: and distinction between methodological and metaphysical, 194; and jurisprudence, xvi, 266–268, 295–303; and theory of moral cognition, 34–39, 303–304, 313. See also physicalism natural law: and Grotius, xv–xvi; and human rights, 296–297, 317–318; and jurisprudence, 266, 295–303; and Pufendorf, 266; and St. Paul, xv natural liberty, principle of, 132–133. See also Residual Permission Principle natural model (Dworkin), 266–267, 269–274, 278t, 279, 283, 288, 289, 295, 303–304 natural rights, Rawls' theory of, 295, 297–299 necessity: as affirmative defense, 148, 158; cases of, xvi, 117 negative act, and complex omission-token representation, 144–145 negative utilitarianism, 158 negligence: common law of, 140–141, 158, 159–161t; and Hand Formula, 140–141; and moral calculus of risk, 137–144; and trolley problems, 159–161t, 163–167t Nelson, Sharon, 3, 4 neurocognitive adequacy, 23–24, 28–30, 29t neuroscience: and brain regions involved in moral cognition, 105; and computing structural descriptions, 118–121, 162–174; and inadequate appraisal theory of trolley problems, 112–117, 121–122; and neurocognitive adequacy, 23–24, 28–30, 29t Nietzsche, Friedrich, 8t, 33 noncognitivism, and metaethical adequacy, 218–221, 316–317 normal form, of complex act-token representation, 124 normative adequacy: distinction between empirical adequacy and, 183–227; and Rawls' linguistic analogy, 29–30, 31; and descriptively adequate moral theory as a presumptive solution to problem of, 30, 40, 187, 192, 195–197, 215–217, 221–222, 225–226; and problems of descriptive and explanatory adequacy, 223, 225; and reflective equilibrium, 31–33, 40; and requirement of rationality, 32–33, 191, 230, 205, 313; use of term, 28. See also normative ethics normative ethics, 291t, 184, 186, 215, 218, 219, 227, 292–293. See also normative adequacy novelty: of linguistic expressions, 45–46, 94–95; of moral judgments, 46–48, 72–73, 78; and unfamiliarity of trolley problems, 95 Nowell-Smith P., 315n2 Nozick, Robert, 8t, 9, 54–55, 64n7, 98 nullum crimen sine lege (no crime without law) and nullum peona sine lege (no penalty without law), 132 obiter dictum (“something said in passing”), 204 objection from insufficient normativity, 188, 190 objection from prejudice, 40, 246–247 objective validity, 223, 226 objectivity, in moral judgment, 83.
Index

See also subjectivity obligatory acts, 85, 105f., 124

observational adequacy: and problem of descriptive adequacy in moral theory, 49–50, 59f., 252; use of term in linguistics and cognitive science, 21–23 omission: and complex omission-token representation, 144–145, 146f., 147; and equipollence relations, 105f; and periodic table of moral elements, 157; and Principle of Double Effect, 151–152 operative principles, 19–21, 30, 50–51, 59t., 84–85. See also express principles order of priority, and problems of descriptive and normative adequacy, 30, 197 original position, 198, 200–201

“Outline of a Decision Procedure for Ethics” (Rawls 1951), 10, 27, 40, 49033, 66, 187, 190, 195–197, 212, 217, 221, 242, 246 pacifism, and knowing homicide, 148 parsing problem, 16. See also perception problem

particularism, 71–73

Paul, St., vi, xv

Pauline Principle, 337, 338t

PDE. See Principle of Double Effect perception problem: in linguistics and moral theory generally, 16, 17; in moral cognition perceptual model, 88–91, 111–117 performance. See competence–performance distinction periodic table, of moral elements, 153–162

permissibility judgments, 251–252 permissible acts, 85, 105f., 124

Perry, Ralph Barton, 25n8

personal-impersonal distinction (Greene), 112–114, 113f., 121–122

Petrinovich, Lewis, 110n1, 323 philosophy of science, Dworkin’s misconceptions about, 276.

See also scientific method physicalism, distinction between methodological and metaphysical, 194.

See also naturalism

Piaget, Jean, 1, 12, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 11, 21, 34, 35, 82n2, 8a, 96, 189, 243, 346, 349

Pinker, Steven, 8, 23, 50n4, 57

P-language, 62–63

Plato, 4, 305

P-morality, 63, 64

political philosophy, of Rawls in 1980s and 1990s, 298 political science, and Rawls’ theory of justice, 280n4

Posner, Richard, 8t, 224–225, 315n2

possible acts, 85

Potts, Timothy, 93n11

Pound, Roscoe, 73

poverty of the stimulus: as argument for innate knowledge, 17, 70–71, 82, 90; and distinction with degeneracy of the stimulus, 70; and moral perception, 111–117. See also innateness; Universal Grammar; Universal Moral Grammar pride: and competence–performance distinction, 258–263; and considered judgments, 162n11, 263. See also implicit bias; objection from prejudice; racial discrimination

Prescriptivism, and noncognitivism, 317

Price, Richard, 316

Prichard, H. A., 316

primary act-token and act-type descriptions, 111, 114, 115–116 primary agent-description, 111

Principle of Double Effect (PDE): decomposition of, 149; and deontic rules, 117–118; and empirical adequacy, 148–152; historical roots of (Aquinas), 148; and negative utilitarianism, 158; and periodic table of moral elements, 154t, 156t; as principle of justification, 152, 158; and self-defense, 148; and trolley problems, 154t, 156t, 324, 335, 336, 343

Principle of Natural Liberty. See natural liberty, principle of probability, and Rawls on explication, 193. See also Moral Calculus of Risk production problem, in linguistics and moral theory, 16–17 projection problem, 30, 46–47, 72–73, 78, 94–96; and argument for moral grammar, 30, 43–48; and novelty and unboundedness of moral judgments, 47–48 proper names, potential prejudicial effect of on moral intuitions, 162n11 properties of moral judgment, 51–55, 82–85, 241–236

Prosser, William, 134, 324 provisional justification, 201–202

Pufendorf, Samuel, 8t, 266, 30n112

pure procedural justice, 201, 203, 207
Index

404

ordered moral principles, 146n7; and linguistics and philosophy at MIT, 9n10; and metaethics, 27, 217–221, 221–227; and modeling of theory of moral cognition on Universal Grammar, 3–12, 220; and Nagel’s criticism of linguistic analogy, 228–266; and outline of plan of book, 33–38, 39–41; and preliminary clarifications about linguistic analogy, 27–33; and principle of natural liberty, 133; and problem of descriptive adequacy, 30, 78, 85–86, 88, 89, 90, 221; and reflective equilibrium, 31, 32, 99–100, 102, 179, 197–198, 202–212. See also “Independence of Moral Theory, The”; “Outline of a Decision Procedure for Ethics”; Study in the Grounds of Ethical Knowledge, A; Theory of Justice, A Raz, Joseph, 5, 284–285, 286–287 reasonable men, Rawls’ concept of in Grounds, 192, 242, 246 reflective equilibrium: concept of, 31, 32, 102, 179, 202–213; and considered judgments, 99–100; distinction between narrow and wide, 209–212; and Dworkin’s constructive model, 273–274; and Dworkin’s natural model, 271–274, 289–291; and Rawls on goal of moral theory, 293; and scientific method, 31, 99–100, 291; Singer’s commentary on Rawls’ concept of, 188–189; as state of affairs, rather than method or technique, 204–205, 289; in A Theory of Justice, 197–213 purposely harmful acts and omissions, 145, 146f, 147 Putnam, Hilary, 35 Quine, W. V. O., 8t, 9n9, 68, 95, 271 Quinn, Warren, 68n9 Rashdall, Hastings, 316 ratio decidendi (“reason for deciding”), 204, 93, 101 rationality: compatibility of principles of moral competence with requirements of, 33; and Enlightenment, 174–175; and problem of normative adequacy, 209; and Rawls’ approach to ethical theory, 191–192; and theory of rational choice, 31–33; and trolley problems, 97. See also rational judgments; reasonable men; rational reconstruction rational judgments, 258–261; and reflective equilibrium, 203. See also prejudice Railton, Peter, 6n7, 314n1, 316n6 Rashdall, Hastings, 316 ratio decidendi (“reason for deciding”), 204, 93, 101 rationality: compatibility of principles of moral competence with requirements of, 33; and Enlightenment, 174–175; and problem of normative adequacy, 209; and Rawls’ approach to ethical theory, 191–192; and theory of rational choice, 31–33; and trolley problems, 97. See also rational judgments; reasonable men; rational reconstruction rational judgments, 258–261; and reflective equilibrium, 203. See also prejudice Railton, Peter, 6n7, 314n1, 316n6 Rashdall, Hastings, 316 ratio decidendi (“reason for deciding”), 204, 93, 101 rationality: compatibility of principles of moral competence with requirements of, 33; and Enlightenment, 174–175; and problem of normative adequacy, 209; and Rawls’ approach to ethical theory, 191–192; and theory of rational choice, 31–33; and trolley problems, 97. See also rational judgments; reasonable men; rational reconstruction rational judgments, 258–261; and reflective equilibrium, 203. See also prejudice Railton, Peter, 6n7, 314n1, 316n6 Rashdall, Hastings, 316 ratio decidendi (“reason for deciding”), 204, 93, 101 rationality: compatibility of principles of moral competence with requirements of, 33; and Enlightenment, 174–175; and problem of normative adequacy, 209; and Rawls’ approach to ethical theory, 191–192; and theory of rational choice, 31–33; and trolley problems, 97. See also rational judgments; reasonable men; rational reconstruction rational judgments, 258–261; and reflective equilibrium, 203. See also prejudice Railton, Peter, 6n7, 314n1, 316n6 Rashdall, Hastings, 316 ratio decidendi (“reason for deciding”), 204, 93, 101 human or natural, 57, 295–303, 317–318. See also human rights; natural rights risk: gratuitousness of, 141; magnitude of, 140; marginal calculi of, 141; moral calculus of, 137–144, 148, 158; necessity of, 140–141; utility of, 140, 142–143

Robinson, Paul, 5
Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court, 57
Rorty, Richard, 9, 315n2
Ross, W. D., 8t, 68n9, 191, 198, 303n12
Rousseau, Jean-Jacques, 8t, 20, 35, 36n16, 198, 303n12
Russell, Bertrand, xvii
Ryle, Gilbert, 8t, 68
Salmond, John, 178
Scanlon, T. M., xviii, 144, 284, 285, 286, 303n12
Ruse, Bertrand, xviii, 144, 284, 285, 286, 303n12
Russell, Bertrand, xvii
Ryle, Gilbert, 8t, 68
Salmond, John, 178
Scanlon, T. M., xviii, 144, 284, 285, 286, 303n12
Schlick, Moritz, 181, 317
Schneewind, J. B., 21n5, 294n9 scientific method: and competence–performance distinction, 54–55; and Dworkin’s interpretation of Rawls, 267, 269, 271–272; and “Galilean” style of inquiry, 275–276; and hypothetico-deductive method, 91–93, 287n5; and preference for explanatory depth to mere coverage of data, 274–276; and Rawls’ notion of idealization, 54, 56, 65; and reflective equilibrium, 31, 99–100, 291; and scientific revolution, 275 secondary act-type descriptions, 111, 114, 115–116 self-defense, and homicide, 148 self-preservation principle, 136–137, 172 semantic properties, and causal structure, 172 “Sense of Justice, The” (Rawls 1963), 66 Shavell, Steven, 5 side-effect effect, 121, 143 simple expected benefit, and cost-benefit analysis, 141
Singer, Peter, 5, 7, 34, 40, 42, 58, 144, 183–227, 267, 293n8, 294, 299, 311–312, 315n2
Sinnott-Armstrong, Walter, 111n2 skepticism: and Dworkin on natural and constructive models, 270; and use of term “knowledge” to describe linguistic or moral principles, 68
Skinner, B. F., 95
Smith, Adam, xvi, 1, 7, 8t, 187, 294, 303n12, 317
Soames, Scott, 62–63 social constructivism, 35, 189 social instincts, and moral structure, 172 social institutions, and Rawls on concept of justice, 199 social intuitionist model, of moral judgment (Haidt), 113f social justice: no computational theory of, 37; Rawls’ concept of in A Theory of Justice, 199
Social Science Research Network (SSRN), 319
Society for Research in Child Development (SRCD), 319
Sorrentino, Cristina, xix, 8t, 77, 82n1, 319
Spelke, Elizabeth, xvii, xix, 8t, 35, 77, 319
Spencer, Herbert, 84n5
spontaneity, as property of moral judgments, 83n4, 243 square of opposition and equipollence, 104, 105f. See also deontic logic stability, as property of moral judgments, 83n4, 243–244 Stanley, Jason, xviii, 230n1, 237, 238, 258n13, 264n16 steady state, of language and moral faculties, 14–15n2
Stevenson, Charles L., 4, 316
Stich, Stephen, xxiii, 3, 8t, 11
Stone, Julius, 73, 134n5, 310 strong generation, 89n9, 252–256 structural features: of acts, 92, 118–120, 125–132; of omissions, 144–148; and periodic table of moral elements, 153–162 structure-dependent rules, of language acquisition, 14–15n2 Sturgeon, Nicholas, xviii, 221, 315n2 subjective stability, 243 subjectivity: in moral judgment, 83; and Singer’s critique of Rawls, 222–223. See also objectivity; subjective stability subject matter, of moral theory, as element of Dworkin’s interpretation of Rawls, 276, 277–280. See also conscientia (conscience); moral competence; moral faculty; moral grammar; I-morality; “Sense of Justice, The”
Sunstein, Cass, 111n2
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Index</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>195</td>
<td>Index</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>406</td>
<td>SVO hypothesis, 23987</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>synderesis (first principles of practical reason), 93</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Syntactic Structures (Chomsky 1957), 26, 46–47, 49, 89, 253</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Taking Rights Seriously (Dworkin), 291, 296, 304</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>temporal structure, 171, 337</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Tenenbaum, Josh, xix, 3n1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Terry, Henry, 176, 178</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Thomson, Judith Jarvis, xvii, xxiii, 7, 14, 38, 77, 158, 399, 320, 337</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>thought experiments, xvi, 78–80, 96, 166–169, 163–167</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Toulmin, Stephen, 262</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>tree diagram, and linguistic structural descriptions, 253</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Trivers, Robert, 24, 66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>trolley problems: artificiality of, 94, 95–96, 97; and cognitive mechanisms, 80–81; and considered judgments, 86t; and cost-benefit analysis, 142–143; description of experiments, 319–350; explanations of variance in, 126–128; and manipulation of structural features, 163–167; originating in the work of Foot and Thomson, 7, 77–78; permisibility versus acceptability judgments in, 251–252; and problem of descriptive adequacy, 78–82, 94–100, 106–110, 111t, 112t; and racism and prejudice in moral judgments and, 259–261; structural descriptions of, 118f, 119f; and unfamiliarity of, 94–95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>unboundedness: of linguistic judgment, 46; of moral judgment, 72–73</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>uncertainty, of trolley problems, 94, 97–99</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>unconscious inference: Helmholtz's concept of, 175; and Leibniz's argument for innate moral knowledge, 361n6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Unger, Peter, 144</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Universal Declaration of Human Rights, 57, 393, 397</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Universal Grammar (UG): and acquisition models, 90; and Chomsky, 3, 14; and criminal law systems, 105; and distinction with particular linguistic grammar, 14; general introductions to theory of, 14n1; modeling of theory of moral cognition on, 3–12. See also acquisition models; explanatory adequacy; innateness; linguistic analogy; linguistic grammar; Universal Moral Grammar</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Universal Jurisprudence, 300</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Universal Moral Grammar (UMG): and acquisition models, 90; and author's overriding objective, 11; and a common human moral nature, 73, 317–318; and comparisons between linguistics and moral theory, 14, 15; and conclusions on theory of moral cognition, 307–318; and distinction with particular moral grammar, 15. See also acquisition models; explanatory adequacy; innateness; linguistic analogy; moral grammar; Universal Grammar</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Urnson, J. O., 316n6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>utilitarianism: descriptive inadequacy of simple forms of, 96; inadequacy of with respect to prohibitions of battery and homicide, 133; justice as fairness as a viable alternative to, 198, 210; and necessity defense, 158; negative version of, 158; Rawls and refutation of, 191, 198. See also consequentialism, cost-benefit analysis, necessity, negative utilitarianism</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>voluntary act, 87–88</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Von Savigny, F. C., 8t, 9n9, 123</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>weak generation, 89n9, 252–256</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Weinrib, Ernest, 144</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Westermarck, Edward, 316</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Whewell, William, 20, 21n5, 84n5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>White, Alan, 315n3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Williams, Bernard, 5, 44n1, 186, 247, 314, 315n2, 316n6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Wilson, E. O., 24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Wilson, James, 307, 317</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Wittgenstein, Ludwig, 61</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Wolff, Robert Paul, 311n4, 191n4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Wood, Allen, 9n9, 258n13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Xu, Fei, 331n4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Xu, Yaoda, 331n4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>yes–no questions, and phrase structure in syntax, 255</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Young, Robert M., 315</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>