ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book offers the first scholarly edition of Pour ce que plusieurs, a French treatise on the legal debates that underpinned the Hundred Years War. It was written in 1464, perhaps by Guillaume Cousinot II, and survives in twenty manuscripts; it was also printed at least eleven times by 1558, most commonly under the title La Loy Salicque, première loy des françois. One of those books fell into the hands of an anonymous English customs official, perhaps from Ipswich, who composed an extremely detailed reply which he called A declaracion of the trew and dewe title of Henry VIII. This work did not enjoy the same success, surviving in just two autograph manuscripts, together with a seventeenth-century transcription of the presentation copy. As a result, this unique and important treatise has received no attention from historians.

The research for this book was completed in two stages. I originally prepared an edition of Pour ce que plusieurs as an appendix to my DPhil at Oxford University (“La querelle Anglaise”: diplomatic and legal debate during the Hundred Years War), funded by a British Academy research studentship, the A.M.P. Reid studentship awarded by the Modern History Faculty, and a grant from the Richard III Society. During the course of that research, I looked at a range of manuscripts containing English discussions of the legal issues of the Hundred Years War and came across the manuscripts containing A declaracion of the trew and dewe title of Henry VIII in the British Library and the College of Arms. Thanks to my detailed knowledge of Pour ce que plusieurs, I instantly realized that the English treatise was directly quoting from, and responding to, the French text. A number of years later, I was able to return to this puzzle thanks to the research leave granted to me by the University of York in the form of an Anniversary Lectureship. In addition, the British Academy provided me with a Small Research Grant from the Neil Ker fund to enable me to complete my work on the manuscripts in London, Paris, Brussels, and Lille.

My doctoral research was supervised by Peter S. Lewis who gave me tremendous advice and support throughout this project. I might never have discovered the Tudor treatise but for Pierre Chaplais who provided me with a number of manuscript references to chase up, drawing upon research originally carried out by the late John Ferguson. I would also like to thank Ian Archer, Françoise Autrand, James Binns, James Campbell, Antonio de Castro Henriques, Gabriella Corona, Gregory

I would particularly like to thank Peggy Brown for checking some information in the Bibliothèque Nationale de France at the very last stage of this project.

Images are reproduced by permission of the Bibliothèque Nationale de France and the Bibliothèque Royale de Belgique. I am extremely grateful for the assistance and cooperation of the staff of those libraries as well as the College of Arms, the British Library, the Bodleian Library, the Codrington Library, the Brotherton Library, the Bibliothèque Municipale of Lille, the Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, and the Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana. Unfortunately I have not been able to gain entrance to the Biblioteca Reale di Torino in time for the completion of this book, though I would like to thank my fiancée, Gabriella Corona, and our Italian family and friends for their assistance in that challenging enterprise.

I would like to dedicate this book to the memories of my mother, Maxine Taylor, and of Lorenzo Corona.
