

Contents

Figures [page x]

Musical examples [xii]

Acknowledgments [xiv]

Notes to the reader [xvii]

Introduction [1]

PART I [13]

- 1 Music, the world, and the critic [15]
  - Stylistic listening and worldly criticism [15]
  - Works, values, and scholars [19]
- 2 Questions of value [25]
  - “Exotic”: high praise or curse word? [25]
  - Edward Said’s Orientalism and other ideological critiques [34]
  - Applying Orientalist critiques to music [36]
  - Beauty and beastliness [38]
- 3 Exoticism with and without exotic style [43]
  - Existing definitions [44]
  - A broader definition [46]
  - The “Exotic Style Only” Paradigm [48]
  - The “All the Music in Full Context” Paradigm [59]
  - The then/now binarism [64]
  - Four other binarisms [66]
    - Self/Other
    - Nearness/distance
    - The real/the fictive
    - Musical/extramusical signs and indicators
- 4 Who is “Us”? The national and/as the exotic, and the treatment of stereotypes [72]

National style or exoticism? [72]
 How works handle stereotypes and binarisms [79]

PART II [85]

- 5 Baroque portrayals of despots: ancient Babylon, Incan Peru [87]
  - Handel's Eastern dramas [89]
  - Belshazzar, semi-comic Babylonian tyrant [90]
  - Empire and virtue [96]
  - Les Indes galantes*: encyclopedic world tour [97]
  - Rameau's Huascar: corrupt ruler and anticolonial terrorist [100]
- 6 A world of exotic styles, 1750–1880 [106]
  - Eighteenth-century ethnicities [108]
  - Delightful and vicious Turks: Molière/Lully, Favart, Gluck, Mozart [110]
  - The Turkish style [114]
  - Mozart's alla turca non-rondo [123]
  - The proliferation of exotic and national dialects [126]
  - Liszt's gifts: Gypsy "opium" and the national rhapsody [135]
- 7 Exotic operas and two Spanish Gypsies [150]
  - Regions on the nineteenth-century musical stage [150]
  - The Roma (Gypsies) in life and image [154]
  - "Abietta zingara" [156]
  - Gypsy characters and poor Andalusians [160]
  - The Gypsy Carmen's non-Gypsyish lament [169]
- 8 Imperialism and "the exotic Orient" [175]
  - Multiple empires, multiple Orients [176]
  - Silence over the imperial encounter [178]
  - The paradigmatic Oriental-opera plot [180]
  - Fragile women, fatal women, and the pentatonic [184]
  - Men: the forceful and the gentle [192]
  - Rituals, priests, and crowds [196]
  - Madama Butterfly*: an opera of, and against, empire [202]
- 9 Exoticism in a modernist age (c. 1890–1960) [214]
  - The turn against Overt Exoticism [214]
  - Submerged Exoticisms: (1) the arabesque [217]
  - Submerged Exoticisms: (2) bold harmonic procedures [222]
  - Transcultural Composing [228]

- Pagodes*: Javanese pentatonicism Trans(culturally)figured [233]
- Are Submerged and Transcultural approaches exotic? [236]
- Overt Exoticism in concert music and opera [244]
  - Composers from a minority group or “peripheral” culture [244]
  - Non-modernists [248]
  - The Soviet era through the 1950s [250]
- Overt Exoticism in popular genres [251]
  - Light orchestral music and jazz [251]
  - Popular song: America and France [254]
  - Operetta and musical [260]
  - Film music [263]
- West Side Story* and exotic Otherness [268]
- 10 Exoticism in a global age (c. 1960 to today) [276]
  - New compositions [278]
    - Composers from beyond “the Western mainstream” [279]
    - The later Soviet era, the State of Israel [282]
    - Composers in the West [284]
    - Takemitsu and Tan Dun [293]
  - Exotic varieties of jazz [299]
  - With technological assistance from ... [300]
  - Elfin kingdom and other movie realms [301]
  - Pop exotica [304]
- 11 Epilogue: exotic works of the past, today [312]
  - Performing exotic works [312]
  - The afterlife of exotic stage works [317]
  - Pondering exotic works as they are [325]
- Notes* [328]
- Bibliography* [369]
- Index* [407]