Index

Adams, R. M., 61
apology, 115—18, 121, 145 and righting wrongs, 111—12
and the virtuous offender, 2—3, 103 and the right to be punished, 8 as an expression of guilt or remorse, 8 undoing ‘public wrongs’, 173 Apology Ritual, 144—51, 152—3 an account of ritual, 9 and the distinctiveness of punishment, 196 contrasted with von Hirsch and Duff, 186—97 criteria for applicability of account, 153 expressive not communicative, 193 superior to blaming ritual, 146—8 why a ‘ritual’, 147, 154
Ashworth, A., 139
Bentham, J., 27
Birner, R., 100
blame, 35—41, 103—10, 120, 148, 154, 162—6 Braithwaite, J., 3, 15, 21, 22—3, 128, 158—40 and Pettit, P., 17, 24, 137
Brink, D., 79
Bryson examples, 1—2, 103—4, 128
Cavadino, M. and Dignan, J., 140 censure, see condemnation Christie, N., 3, 84
censurement,
and inducing repentance, 189—92
and the emotions, 35—41
collective, 139, 142, 144 ‘external’, 191—3
in Duff’s theory of punishment, 189 in von Hirsch’s theory of punishment, 187—8 punishment as, 7, 33—4 responsibility to, 141, 144 symbolically adequate, 8, 9, 35—6, 121, 145—8, 154 see also blame crime, 133—4, 137, 143, 153, 165 criminal justice system and meaningfulness, 4, 13, 128—31 disincentive to apologise, 3 neglecting victims, 3—4 philosophical foundations, 9, 13 culpability, see guilt
Dagger, R., 31, 185
Declaration of Leuven, 21
Dignan, J., 140
Duff, R. A., 7, 17, 19, 30, 81, 86, 108, 113—14, 143, 146, 151, 155, 188—97
Dworkin, R., 67, 164
emotions, 35—8
see also blame, guilt, and resentment Feinberg, J., 7, 33—4, 121, 145, 187
Gandhi, M., 40, 71, 99, 108—11
Gauthier, D., 83
Gibbard, A., 88
Goffman, 111, 116
guilt,
criminal, 16, 154, 162—6 emotion of, 38, 100, 112, 115—18, 121, 145 Hampton, J., 56, 93, 139, 170 hard treatment, 7, 26—8, 70—2, 121
Hegel, G. W. F., 17, 42
Honeth, A., 105
Hume, D., 61
Jane example, 93—100, 150—1, 168, 171
Kant, I.,
disbanding society example, 33 duty to respect rational agency, 19 on punishment and universalisation, 42 Kingdom of Ends as valuable form of social relations, 44

© Cambridge University Press
Index

Kantian reading of Strawson, 66–8 King, Martin Luther, 40, 71, 99, 108–11
Korsgaard, C., 19, 66, 79 law, as the responsibilities of participants in the political relationship, 163–4 legitimacy, and Rousseauian collective self-government, 158–9 liberal principle of, 157–60 liberalism, and Rousseauian collective self-government, 158–9 compatibility of Apology Ritual with, 155–62 luck, 48–9, 119

MacIntyre, A., 94
Mackie, J. L., 83
Matravers, M., 112, 151
Mill, J. S., 89, 107
Moore, M., 27, 38, 112, 166
Morris, H., 17, 29, 108
Murphy, J. G., 27, 29, 36, 38–41, 112

Nagel, T., 48, 62
negotiation, 82–7
Nietzsche, F., 27
Nussbaum, M., 60

offenders, and free will, 20, 23–4 and hard treatment, 26
and ‘right to be punished’, 8, 17, 19 and sentencing, 177, 178–83 in ‘reintegrative shaming’, 22–3 ‘virtuous’, 2–3, 38, 103, 177 penance, 113–14, 116–18, 145 Pettit, P., 84

and Smith, M., 75–8
practices, 94–5
qualified members and apprentices, 95, 105 proportionality, 118, 142–3 punishment, as condemnation, 7, 31–4, 187–8, 189 Apology Ritual account of, 144–51, 152–3 distinctiveness of, 14–19, 196 instrumental justifications, 14–19, 64–8 punishing the innocent, 15–17 problem of hard treatment, 7, 26–8, 70–2, 121 restoring the balance of benefits and burdens, 29, 183–6 retributive justifications, 14–15, 19, 26–44 qualified practitioner, 91–100, 105, 106–7, 153, 162
Rachels, J., 43
Radzik, L., 112–13
reactive attitudes, 52
and the objective attitude, 63–8 as attitudes towards the attitudes of others, 54–5 as evaluations, 61–2 excusing conditions, 56–8 recognition, 105, 125, 129
see also status relationships, 54
blame a recognition of deterioration in, 105–6 expectations appropriate to relationships, 55–6 disgust for abusive friend, 69 disgust for neighbourliness, 104–5 treatment, as the responsibilities of participants in political relationships, 163–4 political community as intrinsically valuable, 153, 155–62, 165 restoring through apology, 115–18, 121 see also practices
reparation, 6
see also penance resentment, 38–41 response-dependent properties, 88 responsibility, individual moral, 20, 23–4 Strawson’s defence, 58–9
of qualified practitioner, 91–100, 104–5, 163–4 of collective self-government, 163 see also ‘Right to be punished’ restorative justice, 4–6, 21 and moral communication, 22, 80, 130 and need for collective condemnation of crime, 140–3 and retributive justice, 7 as part of the Apology Ritual, 177, 181–2 laissez-faire model, 126–40 meetings, 5–6, 40, 128–31, 177, 181–2 ‘ownership’ of offence, 5, 129 potential benefits of, 6, 128–31, 176, 181–2 problem of uncooperative offender, 135–40 stakeholders, 5, 127
retribution, and free will, 20, 47–8
and the emotions, 35–8, 52, 61–2, 103–10, 115–21 justifications of punishment, 14–15, 19, 26–44 retribution, (cont.)
non-retributive alternatives, 20, 40–1, 43, 70–1 problem of suffering, 26–8, 115–18 ‘right to be punished’, 8, 19, 41–4, 68–70, 98–100, 101, 118 summary of the ‘right to be punished strategy’, 118–21 ritual, 9, 147, 154
Scanlon, T. M., 81, 99
self-government and the qualified practitioner, 106–7 Rousseauian collective, 158–62, 163 sentencing,
and the virtuous offender, 177
Limited Devolution model, 179–83 problem of meaning v. consistency, 178–9 shared inquiry, 75–82
and cultural relativism, 90–1 and meta-ethical considerations, 87–9 and moral inquiry, 78–82 ‘conversational stance’, 75–8 Mongolia example, 76
value of, 80
Skorupski, J., 102, 103, 107, 116

Index

Smith, M., 79
status, 18, 41, 68, 95, 103, 106, 140 and blame, 103–10, 120
and marks of recognition, 67–9, 95, 105–6 friendship example, 69
of qualified practitioner, 95–6, 153 teacher (Jane) example, 93–100
Stern, L., 71
Strawson, G., 48
Strawson, P. F., 47, 51–9, 118, 120
Tasioulas, J., 191, 192
Taylor, C., 161
Van Ness, D., 5, 132, 140
Von Hirsch, A., 7, 139, 187–96 and Ashworth, A., 114, 151 and Ashworth, A. and Shearing, C., 126, 130, 136, 180 Wallace, R. J., 49, 55, 57, 64, 70
Wasserstrom, R., 63
Watson, G., 60, 61, 63, 70, 81
Wolf, S., 81
Zehr, H., 3, 24, 21, 73, 102, 132