The Rhineland region includes the core regional economy of western Europe, encompassing Belgium, Luxemburg and parts of the Netherlands, France, Switzerland, and Germany. Throughout history there have been tensions between this region’s roles as a frontier and as western Europe’s economic core. Michael Loriaux argues that the European Union arose from efforts to deconstruct this frontier. He traces Rhineland geopolitics back to its first emergence, restoring frontier deconstruction to the forefront of discussion about the EU. He recounts how place names were manipulated to legitimate political power and shows how this manipulation generated the geopolitics that the EU now tries to undo. Loriaux also argues that the importance of this issue has significantly affected the nature of the EU’s development and helps condition a festering legitimation crisis.

Michael Loriaux is Professor of Political Science at Northwestern University.
EUROPEAN UNION AND THE DECONSTRUCTION OF THE RHINELAND FRONTIER

MICHAEL LORIAUX
CONTENTS

List of plates
page viii

List of figures
ix

Acknowledgments
xi

1. Myth and geopolitics of the Rhineland frontier
2. Trans Rhenum incolunt: the inauguration of the Rhineland frontier
3. A “principality of priests”: the inauguration of Europe
4. Anonymity and prosperity
5. The great antecedent cracking
6. Coups de force: Ossian and the département
7. Wacht am Rhein: the Ossianic fracture of Rhineland space
8. Carolingian discourse and Rhineland pacification
9. Spatial representation and the political imagination

Index
331
PLATES

2.1 Trier: the Porta Nigra page 25
3.1 The Imperial Cathedral at Aachen 58
3.2 The Throne of Charlemagne 70
4.1 Bruges’ hallen and belfry 86
6.1a Germania 149
6.1b Germania with Riesling 150
6.2 Goldberg, “Loreley” 194
8.1a Cologne, 1945 258
8.1b Cologne, 2005 258
FIGURES

1.1 The Greater Rhineland     page 3
1.2 Industrial value added, 1980     4
1.3 Population density, 1990     5
1.4 The Greater Rhineland urban network compared     6
1.5 The Greater Rhineland crossroads     8
2.1 Gaul before the Roman Conquest     31
2.2 Roman colonization of Gaul before Augustus     37
2.3 The Roman limes     42
2.4 Frankish and Alamannic settlement of the Rhine “frontier”     46
3.1 Merovingian Gaul     60
3.2 The Pippinids     64
3.3 The Carolingian Rhineland and eastward expansion     66
3.4 Duurstede, Haithabu, Mesopotamia     75
3.5 Disintegration of Carolingian space     78
3.6 The Ottonian Rhineland     81
4.1 North–south trade patterns shift east, from fairs to towns, from Champagne to the Rhine     89
4.2 The League of Rhenish Cities of 1254     94
4.3 The Hansa     101
4.4 The Cologne Hansa     102
4.5 Challenge to the Hansa     104
4.6 The Burgundian Middle Kingdom     109
5.1 The Erasmian corridor     123
5.2 The reform movement in 1535     125
5.3 The expansion of the Swiss Confederation     130
5.4 The United Provinces     131
5.5 French expansion     134
5.6 The Thirty Years War     139
5.7 The wars of Louis XIV     143
6.1 Old High German dialects     164
6.2 French dialects c.1200     169
6.3 Pre-revolutionary France: principal administrative, judicial, and fiscal subdivisions     174
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Figure</th>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>6.4</td>
<td>Departmentalized space expands toward the Rhine</td>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.1</td>
<td>Belgian railway development</td>
<td>216</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.2</td>
<td>Industry and railways in the German Confederation</td>
<td>218</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.3</td>
<td>Industry in France</td>
<td>223</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.4</td>
<td>The Zollverein</td>
<td>239</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.1</td>
<td>The Morgenthau Plan</td>
<td>277</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.2</td>
<td>Principal industrial sites of continental western Europe</td>
<td>291</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.3</td>
<td>Rhine shipping traffic, 1929</td>
<td>292</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.4</td>
<td>Rhine shipping traffic, 1965</td>
<td>293</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
I gratefully acknowledge the ideas, the reactions, and the time so generously given to me by students, colleagues, and friends, especially Karen Alter, Hendrik Spruyt, Bonnie Honig, Chris Swarat, Diego Rossello, Sara Watson, Zirwat Chowdhury, Marion Gutwein, Peter Hayes, Alex Jaunait, Marc Crépon, Ariane Chebel-d’Appollonia, Barbara Cassin, Friedrich Kratochwil, Beate Jahn, R. B. J. Walker, Samuel Weber, and Meredith Jung-en Woo. Brigitte Schroeder made the very kind and welcome gift of books on Rhineland history and politics from the library of her father, historian Friedrich Gudehus, carefully annotated in his hand. I have received useful, suggestive readings from several “generations” of students of our Paris Program in Critical Theory, and the usual thorough wringing out that takes place in “North–South” meetings with our colleagues from the University of Chicago. Charles Lipson, Alex Wendt, and John Mearsheimer, in particular, were generous with their time and comments. I am particularly grateful to Mary Barker, from whose questions and curiosity the idea of this project first emerged. I am also most grateful to Melinda Kleehamer, who gave generously of her time to read, react, and make suggestions. Jake the Dog urged key revisions and helped with the typing. I have dedicated this book to my wife Peggy: “Nothing is greater or better than this, than when a man and a woman keep house together sharing one heart and mind” (Odyssey, 6.182–4).