Index

administrative responsibility. See also concentration of responsibility economic vote of the chief executive and, 282
economic voting and, 253–254, 271, 277–282, 284
opposition party strength and, 286 patterns of contention and, 347
Aft eposten, 288
Alliance Party (New Zealand), 297
“almost majority” governments, 266 Australia
economic voting model specifications for, 121 Austria
“grand coalition” governments in, 249
Balladur, Edouard, 257
Belgium
Christian Democratic Party in, 82, 84
economic voting in, 70, 72, 299–300
unemployment rates in, 152
binomial estimation methods, 97, 103, 104, 105
“Bread and Peace” model, 18
British Election Survey, 171
Bush, George W., 65

Cabinet parties. See economic vote of a cabinet party “cabinet partners,” 267
voter beliefs about, 292
Cameron, David, 179
Canada
economic vote of the chief executive in, 71

economic voting in, 70
Michigan School influence in, 117 political party identification in, 117 candidate popularity, U.S., 17 employment rates as factor for, 18 income levels and, 18 inflation rates as factor for, 18 capital mobility, 181–183 EDD/NEDD ratios and, 183
import levels and, 183
Mundell-Fleming condition and, 181, 182 chief executive. See economic vote of the chief executive Chirac, Jacques, 149, 150, 257
Christian Democratic Party (Italy), 310, 313 Christian Democratic Party (Belgium), 82, 84 clarity of responsibility hypothesis, 25–26, 227–228, 341
 Communist Party (Greece), 298
Comparative Study of Electoral Systems project, 253 competency models, 2. See also selection model, economic voting competency signals in, 29, 30, 138, 149, 180 inflation as factor in, 134, 135 limited state sector variables in, 201–203 multi-level results for, 200–204 party size as factor in, 201 political ideology in, 200 with two-party competition, 131–147 competency shocks, 14, 133, 138–147 in contextual theory of economic voting, 340
multi-party governments and, 220–221 competency signals, 29, 30, 138, 149, 180 exogenous shocks and, 30, 149 government size as factor in, 139 illustrated extractions for, 149–151 responsibility augmented, 223, 225, 226, 235, 238 trade dependence as factor in, 139
in U.K. elections, 168–175 competency theories, in economic voting, 164 EDD/NEDD ratios in, 178–179, 181
incumbents in, 178–194
concentration of responsibility, 278, 282, 284
economic vote of the chief executive and, 279 congressional elections. See elections Conservative Party (U.K.), 82, 171 contextual theory, economic voting, 3, 28–31, 338–342. See also sanctioning model, economic voting; selection model, economic voting competence shocks in, 340 cross-national comparative studies and, 28 sanctioning model in, 10–12, 28 selection model in, 12–15, 28 variations in, 66–67
coordinated wage and price bargaining (CWB), 191 corporatism
economic vote of the chief executive and, 193 index measurements for, 192–193 statist institutions and, 191–193, 196
CWB. See coordinated wage and price bargaining

Danish People Party (DPP) (Denmark), 289, 292 decision theoretic problems, 132
Denmark
DPP in, 289, 292
economic vote of the government in, 80
economic voting in, 22, 23, 72, 159–160
election studies for, 80
Liberal Party in, 288
Progress Party in, 292
Radical Liberal Party in, 233, 315
Social Democrat Party in, 233, 289, 311, 315
2001 elections in, 288–289
voting demographics in, 77
Downsian rationality hypothesis, 9
DPP. See Danish People Party
Dutch Liberal Party (Netherlands), 84, 93 Duverger’s law for plurality voting, 16 economic policy theory, 138–147 economic vote of a cabinet party, 55–57, 58, 60 incumbency as factor in, 317 economic vote of the chief executive, 55–57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 77, 85, 95, 98, 111, 112, 114, 118 administrative responsibility and, 282
in Canada, 71
concentration of responsibility and, 279 confidence bands for, 64 corruption and, 193 country/voter surveys for, 67 economic vote of the government and, 57 in economic voting model specifications, 122 electoral volatility in, 55, 77–79 endogenous shocks and, 124
in Germany, 61
globalization and, 184
government size and, 190
incumbents and, 55
interactive model for, concentration of responsibility in, 282–284
in Ireland, 67–71
in Italy, 67
multi-level logistic regression model for, 353
in the Netherlands, 67, 93, 350
in New Zealand, 67
number of contenders as factor in, 331 over-time variation in, 74, 76
political ideology and, 88, 89–90, 92, 119
regulation density and, 195
in Spain, 67
in statist institutions, 189, 196, 197, 199 trade openness and, 184, 199
in U.K., 67, 170
in U.S., 67, 255
economic vote of the government, 57–59, 60, 77, 80, 85
in Denmark, 80
in the Netherlands, 61
economic vote of the opposition, 55–57, 60 in multi-party governments, 297, 300 party share and, 304 predicted probability of entering government and, 307 economic voting, 17–23, 27, 40–52, 54. See also contextual theory, economic voting; economic vote of the chief executive; economic voting, model specifications for; electoral volatility; general economic voting; governments, multi-party; random effects model, economic voting; rational economic voting; retrospective economic voting; strategic economic voting administrative responsibility and, as factor in, 253–254, 271, 277–282, 284 alternative measures for, 77–80 alternative models for, 348–349 asymmetric, 107, 109
in Australia, model specifications for, 121
in Belgium, 70, 72, 299–300 “Bread and Peace” model for, 18 cabinet-seat distribution and, in parliamentary governments, 275–277
in Canada, 70
candidate distinction as factor in, 339 clarity of responsibility hypothesis for, 25–26, 227–228, 341 comparative study implications of, 355–358 competency theories for, 164, 178–179, 181, 194 complex causation for, 349–355 textual theory, 3, 28–31, 338–342 cross-national comparative studies for, 24–27, 71–73 decision theoretic problems in, 132 definitions of, 40–41
in Denmark, 22, 23, 72, 77, 159–160 directional theories for, 63 distribution of, over individual parties, 80–85 within divided v. unified governments, 256–262 Downsian rationality hypothesis in, 9 economic contexts for, 138–147 economic vote of a cabinet party as, 55–57, 58, 60 economic vote of the chief executive as, 55–57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 77, 85, 95, 98, 114, 112, 114, 118 economic vote of the government as, 57–59, 60, 77, 80, 85 economic vote of the opposition as, 55–57, 60, 83 EDDs, 139–142, 145–147, 178–179, 181 electoral volatility and, 53–55, 63, 78, 85
economic contexts for, 61
empirical literature on, 17 “enforced” symmetry in, 52
“error-in-variables” in, 348 estimation effects on, 100, 352 EuroBarometer series on, 24, 69, 75 evidence for, 343–345
federalism’s influence on, 140
in France, 21, 22, 23, 69–70, 72, 75, 236, 261, 262 general, 41–42, 95
general hypotheses for, 342–343
in Germany, 4, 7–8, 22, 69, 72, 73, 75 generalization and, 180–184 in Greece, 298–299
incumbent fatigue and, 86
at individual level, 42, 98, 165–168
in Ireland, 71, 72, 73, 75
issue importance in, 89–90, 92
in Italy, 4, 22, 23, 69, 72
“luxury good” model for, 41
at individual level, 42, 98, 165–168
in Ireland, 71, 72, 73, 75
issue importance in, 89–90, 92
in Italy, 4, 22, 23, 69, 72
“luxury good” model for, 41 macro-economic outcomes for, 151–155 magnitude variations for, 63–77 media reporting and, 149, 156, 175–176, 274–275 model specifications for, 113–124
multi-party governments and, 209–216 national economic evaluation and, 128 NEDDs and, 139–141, 146–147, 178–179, 181 negative, 262, 264, 268, 270, 276
in the Netherlands, 72, 93, 131, 350
donomic e, 85–92
in non-presidential elections, 255–256 in Norway, 22, 23
one-stage strategy for, 96–98, 100–102, 103, 109 oppositional strength and, by nation, 281 overtime variation in, 73–77
Index

394

economic voting (cont.)
parliamentary elections and, 253–256, 259–262, 264, 265, 267–277 patterns of contention and, as factor in, 346–347
“Policy Related Variation” in, 128 political context for, 138–147 political ideology and, 81, 87–90, 101, 127–128
positive, 276
post-materialism and, 90–92 presidential elections and, 253–256, 258, 259–262
presidential popularity and, in U.S., 17 purgued economic evaluations and, 125 random effects model for, 134 rational expectations of voters and, 28 retrospective, 220, 226, 271 sanctioning model of, 10–12, 28 selection model of, 12–15 skepticism about, 62–63 social class as factor in, 128
in Spain, 70, 93
statist institutions and, 195–198
strategic, 15–16, 31
survey proximity and, 112
in Sweden, 22
symmetry of, 108
theoretical foundations of, 8–16 theoretical literature on, 16, 27 trade dependence as factor for, 7 two-stage strategy for, 98–102, 103, 109
in U.K., 21, 22, 68–69, 72, 75, 86, 93, 172
in U.S., 17–21, 68, 72–73, 116–117, 261
variation in, 337–338
voter preference measurements in, 109–112
voter utility function in, 9 “wasted,” 15
World Values Survey on, 24 “wrong signed,” 313
economic voting, model specifications for, 113–124
alternative specifications for, 115–119 in Australian election models, 121 control variable variation in, 113–116 economic vote of the chief executive in, 122 endogenous shocks in, 123–124 in Greek elections, 121
in individual-level models, 122–123 in Ireland elections, 120 left-right continuum and, 120 outliers in, 120
spare v. rich, 119–121
in U.K. elections, 120
The Economist, 3
EDDs. See electorally dependent decision makers elections. See also candidate popularity, U.S.; elections, parliamentary; elections, presidential; incumbency congressional, in U.S., 18–19
in Denmark (2001), 288–289 incumbent performance and, 19–21
in the Netherlands (2002), 289
in U.K. (2001), 288
elections, parliamentary administrative responsibility and, 271 “almost majority” governments and, 266 cabinet coalitions and, 263–267 cabinet-seat distribution in, 275–277
economic voting and, 253–256, 264, 265, 267–277
economic/finance ministers and, 290 retrospective economic voting and, 271 by type, economic vote as factor for, 265
voter beliefs about, 290
“wrong-signed” economic voting, 313 electoral volatility, 33–34
economic voting and, 149–153, 255–256
in France, 149, 254–256
non-presidential v., 255–256 parliamentary v., 259–262
in U.S., 17, 18, 20–21, 68, 254–256, 261
economic vote of the chief executive, 55, 77–79
in E.U., 160
GDP and, 161
general economic voting and, 53, 54
Index

395

electorally dependent decision makers (EDDs), 139–142, 145–147 capital mobility and, 183
competency theories for, economic voting, 178–179, 181 monetary unions and, 146
under statist institutions, 187, 190, 205 tariff regimes and, 146
EMS. See European Monetary System endogenous shocks
economic vote of the chief executive and, 124
in economic-voting model specifications, 123–124 “error-in-variables,” 12, 348
EuroBarometer series, 24, 69, 75
European Monetary System (EMS), 152 European Union (E.U.). See also Austria; Belgium; France; Germany; Ireland; Italy; the Netherlands; Norway; Spain; Sweden; United Kingdom attitudes toward, as factor in general economic voting, 48 economy, perceptions of as economic voting factor, 166 electoral volatility, histograms for, 160 exogenous shocks, 14, 15 competency signals and, 30, 149
macro-economic outcomes and, 161, 164
in U.K., 173
expectation theories, rational in selection model, 13

federalism
economic voting and, influence on, 140 Fianna Fael Party (Ireland), 84, 231
Fianna Gael Party (Ireland), 231
formateur system, 232
Fortuyn, Pim, 289
Forza Italia Party, 298
France
divided government in, 257
economic voting in, 21, 22, 23, 69–70, 72, 75, 256, 261, 262 GDP growth rates in, 149, 150, 151 presidential elections in, 149, 254–256
RPR Party in, 255
Socialist Party in, 255

GDP. See gross domestic product general economic voting, 41–42, 95 causal effects in, 42 change estimation for, 51–52, 56–57 control variables in, 47–49 correlation analysis in, 43 economic perceptions in, 44–47
electoral volatility and, 53, 54 estimation for, 43, 44
EU and, attitudes toward, 48 issue preferences and, 47–48 linguistic cleavages and, 47 measuring for, 42–52
MNL for, 50, 51, 106, 107
in the Netherlands, 52
non-voting and, 45 sociological traditions and, 47 statistical models and, estimations of, 49–51
in the Netherlands, 52
vote choice in, 44–45, 47

Germany, 3–8
economic discussion in, party dominance as factor in, 4, 6
economic vote of the chief executive in, 61
economic voting in, 4, 7–8, 22, 69, 72, 73, 75 “grand coalition” governments in, 249 patterns of cabinet contention in, 295 trade dependence in, 7
global connectedness, 165 global dependency, 163, 164 globalization, 205–206
economic vote of the chief executive and, 184
economic voting and, 180–184
trade openness and, 183
World Bank and, 183 governments. See also “almost majority” governments; economic vote of the government; elections, parliamentary; elections, presidential; governments, multi-party definition of, 294
divided v. unified, 256–262 governments, multi-party, 209–216 alternative governments and, competence of, 242–250 alternatives to, from previous governments, 244–235 clarity of responsibility hypothesis and, 227–228
Index

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Entry</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| 218–242 | governments, multi-party (cont.) with coalitional executive positions, competency shocks and, distribution of contention within, distribution of responsibility within, economic vote of the opposition in, with generic selection process, “grand coalitions” within, in Italy, patterns of cabinet contention and, pivot probabilities and, policy making in, responsibility augmented competency signals and, retrospective economic voting and, strategic economic voting within, “grand coalition(s),” in Austria, in Germany, Great Britain. See United Kingdom Greece Communist Party in, economic voting in, New Democracy Party in, PASOK Party in, voting model specifications for, gross domestic product (GDP) in economic-voting random effects model, electoral volatility and, in France, in Italy, contraction of, Hagen, Carl I., hazard model. See sanctioning model, economic voting Heseltine, Michael, ideology, political in competency models, economic vote of the chief executive and, economic voting and, economic voting and, based on performance, incumbent fatigue, incumbents. See incumbency independence of irrelevant alternatives (IIA), inflation rates economic perceptions as factor in, economic voting model specifications for, multinomial estimation for, regression models for, economic vote of the United Kingdom, economic vote of the chie
Index

economic voting in, 71, 72, 73, 75
employment rates in, 152
Fianna Fael Party in, 84, 231
Fianna Gael Party in, 231
Irish Labour Party in, 314
left-right continuum in, 120
Irish Labour Party, 314
Italy, 3
Christian Democrat Party in, 310, 313 economic discussion in, party dominance as factor in, 3–4, 6
economic vote of the chief executive in, 67
economic voting in, 4, 22, 23, 69, 72
Forza Italia Party in, 298 growth in, 3
GDP contraction in, 3
GDP growth in, 3
Lombard League in, 297–298, 307, 311
multi-party governments in, 216
PCI Party in, 307
Key, V.O., 10
Kramer, Gerald, 123
Labour Party (Norway), 331
Labour Party (U.K.), 168–175 Left-Right continuum economic voting models and, 120 in Ireland voting models, 120 model estimations for, 88 in political ideology, 87–88, 90, 93 in U.K. voting models, 120
Lewis-Beck, Michael, 87
Liberal Party (Denmark), 288
Livable Netherlands Party, 289
Lijst Pim Fortuyn Party (the Netherlands), 289
Lombard League (Italy), 297–298, 307, 311 “luxury good” model, 41 media reporting economic voting influenced by, 149, 156, 175–176, 274–275
macro-economic outcomes and, 157–160
Michigan School, 48, 116
Canada election studies influenced by, 117
Mitterrand, Francois, 257
MNL. See multinomial logistic model MNP. See multinomial probit model monetary unions, 146
multinomial logistic model (MNL), 50, 51, 106, 107 binomial i., 97, 103, 104, 105 IIA and, 50, 105–106
individual-level vote-choice models and, 103–107 multinomial probit model (MNP), 106, 107 multi-party governments. See governments, multi-party Mundell-Fleming condition, 181, 182 NEDDs. See non-electorally dependent decision makers negative economic voting, 262, 268, 276 parliamentary elections and, 264, 270
the Netherlands
Dutch Liberal Party in, 84, 93
economic vote of the chief executive in, 67
economic vote of the government in, 61
economic voting in, 72, 93, 131, 350
general economic voting in, 52
List Pim Fortuyn Party in, 289
Livable Netherlands Party in, 289
2002 elections in, 289
New Democracy Party (Greece), 298, 329
New York Times, 156
New Zealand
Alliance Party in, 297
economic vote of the chief executive in, 67
non-economic voting, 85–92 non-electorally dependent decision makers (NEDDs), 139–141, 146–147
capital mobility and, 183
competency theories for, economic voting, 178–179, 181
regulation density and, 193–194
under statist institutions, 187, 190, 205
Index

non-political shocks, 133 Norway
economic voting in, 22, 23
Labour Party in, 331
Progress Party in, 288
2001 elections in, 288
opposition parties. See economic vote of the opposition parliamentary elections. See elections, parliamentary PASOK Party (Greece), 298, 329 patterns of cabinet contention
in Germany, 295
multi-party governments and, 225, 228, 229, 238 patterns of contention, 287–334
administrative responsibility and, 347 economic voting and, as factor for, 346–347 among incumbent parties, 308–320, 333 number of contenders and, 328–333 among opposition parties, 293–308 summary measures of, 316, 328–333 deliberation beliefs about, 287–293, 333 patterns of electoral contention
multi-party governments and, 211
PCI Party (Italy), 307
PEW Global Attitudes Project, 163, 176 pivot probabilities, 210, 212, 218–220 “Policy Related Variation,” 128 political ideology. See ideology, political positive economic voting, 276 Post-Materialism
economic voting and, 90–92
political ideology and, 93 deliberation elections. See elections, presidential Progress Party (Denmark), 292
Progress Party (Norway), 288 Radical Liberal Party (Denmark), 233, 315 random effects model, economic voting, 154 GDP as factor in, 155
inflation rates in, 154–155
unemployment rates in, 154
Rassemblement pour la République (RPR) Party (France), 255
rational economic voting. See also economic voting “competency signals” and, 29, 30 voter expectations and, 28 rational expectation theories. See expectation theories, rational regulation density
economic vote of the chief executive and, 195
NEDDs and, 193–194
under statist institutions, 193–194, 196
responsibility augmented competency signals, 223, 225, 226, 235, 238
The Responsible Electorate, 46 retrospective economic voting
multi-party governments and, 220, 234–235
parliamentary elections and, 271 rational model for, 339 Retrospective Voting in American National Elections, 10 Retrospective * Deviation interaction terms, 167
The Right Approach to the Economy, 170 sanctioning model, economic voting, 10–12, 28
cost factor, 11–12
“error-in-variables” in, 12
incumbents in, 11
rent maximization as factor in, 11 selection model, economic voting, 12–15, 28 competency shocks in, 14
cost factor, 14–15
exogenous shocks in, 14, 15
incumbents in, 13
rational expectations theories in, 13 shocks. See competency shocks; exogenous shocks; exogenous shocks; nonpolitical shocks social contracts, 191
Social Democrat Party (Denmark), 233, 289, 311, 315
Socialist Party (France), 255
Spain
economic vote of the chief executive in, 67
economic voting in, 70, 93
Index

SPD Party, 4
statist institutions, limited v. extensive, 185–198 corporatism and, 191–193, 196 CWB and, 191
domestic economy privatization under, 185
economic vote of the chief executive in, 189, 196, 197, 199
economic voting and, 195–198
EDD v. NEDD under, 187, 190, 205
globalization and, 198–200 regulation density under, 193–194, 196 social contracts under, 191 state size and, 187–190, 196 strategic economic voting, 15–16, 31 Duverger’s law for plurality voting and, 16 incentives for, 15–16
multiparty contexts for, 31 within multi-party governments, 210, 250–251 voter utility function and, 16
Sweden
economic voting in, 22
Thatcher, Margaret, 170, 207
trade dependence, 173
for Germany, 7
trade openness, 183, 184
economic vote of the chief executive and, 184, 199 trade policy literature, 162
UDF Party (France), 84, 93
unemployment rates
in Belgium, 152
in economic voting random effects model, 154
in Ireland, 152
in U.K., 171
in U.S., 18
United Kingdom (U.K.). See also Thatcher, Margaret competency signals in, during elections, 168–175 Conservative Party in, 82, 171
economic vote of the chief executive in, 67, 170
economic voting in, 21, 22, 68–69, 72, 75, 86, 93, 172
exogenous shocks in, 173
GDP growth in, 168–175
general economic voting in, 52
Labour Party in, 168–175
left-right continuum in, 120
macro-economic outcomes in, 169, 174 political party identification in, 117–118
unemployment rates in, 171
United States (U.S.). See also candidate popularity, U.S. candidate popularity in, 17 congressional election factors in, 18–19
divided government in, 257
Downsian rationality hypothesis and, as election factor, 9
economic vote of the chief executive in, 67, 255
economic voting in, 17–21, 68, 72–73, 116–117 income levels in, 18
inflation rates in, 18
macro-economic outcomes in, 157
Michigan School in, 48, 116 presidential election factors in, 17, 18, 20–21, 65, 254–256, 261
unemployment rates in, 18
voter beliefs about “cabinet partners,” 292 about parliamentary elections, 290 about patterns of contention, 287–293, 333 voter utility function, 9 strategic economic voting and, 16 voting. See also economic voting; rational economic voting; strategic economic voting conceptual models of, 39–40
Washington Post, 156
World Bank, 183
World Values Survey, 24
“wrong-signed” economic voting, 313