CONFLICT OF INTEREST AND PUBLIC LIFE

This volume features a distinguished international group of scholars and practitioners who provide a comparative account of ethics regulations across four Western democracies: the United States, the United Kingdom, Canada, and Italy. They situate conflict-of-interest regulations within a broader discourse involving democratic theory; identify the structural, political, economic, and cultural factors that have contributed to the development of these regulations over time; and assess the extent to which these efforts have succeeded or failed across and within different branches and systems of government. Collectively, they provide an invaluable survey of the development, function, and impact of conflict-of-interest regimes in public life.

Christine Trost is Associate Researcher and Assistant Director of the Institute for the Study of Social Change at the University of California at Berkeley. She is coeditor, with Matthew Grossmann, of Win the Right Way: How to Run Effective Local Campaigns in California (2005) and, with Jonathan Bernstein and Adrienne Jamieson, of Campaigning for Congress: Politicians at Home and in Washington (1995).

Alison L. Gash is a doctoral candidate in political science at the University of California at Berkeley. Prior to attending UC Berkeley, she received her Master’s in Public Administration from Princeton University’s Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. She is a two-year recipient of the Travers Fellowship in Ethics and Politics awarded by the Institute of Governmental Studies at UC Berkeley.
Conflict of Interest and Public Life

Cross-National Perspectives

Editors
CHRISTINE TROST
ALISON L. GASH
Contents

About the Contributors
Acknowledgments
Introduction

PART I. THEORETICAL FRAMEWORKS

ONE. Legal Standards and Ethical Norms: Defining the Limits of Conflicts Regulations
Giovanni Guzzetta

21

TWO. The Watergate Effect: Or, Why Is the Ethics Bar Constantly Rising?
Denis Saint-Martin

35

THREE. Pluralists and Republicans, Rules and Standards: Conflicts of Interest and the California Experience
Karen Getman and Pamela S. Karlan

56

FOUR. A Democratized Conception of Political Ethics
Colin M. Macleod

76
CONTENTS

PART II. CROSS-NATIONAL CASE STUDIES

FIVE. Conflict-of-Interest Legislation in the United States:
Origins, Evolution, and Inter-Branch Differences 101
Bruce E. Cain, Alison L. Gash, and Mark J. Oleszek

SIX. Conflict of Interest in Canada 125
Andrew Stark

SEVEN. Conflict of Interest in British Public Life 155
Gillian Peele and Robert Kaye

EIGHT. Conflict of Interest in Italy: The Case of a Media
Tycoon Who Became Prime Minister (2001–2006) 188
Sergio Fabbrini

NINE. Conclusion: Conflict-of-Interest Regulation in Its Institutional Context 213
David Hine

Bibliography 237
Index 255
About the Contributors

Bruce E. Cain is Robson Professor of Political Science at the University of California at Berkeley and Director of the University of California’s Washington Center. He came to UC Berkeley in 1989 from the California Institute of Technology, where he taught from 1976 to 1989. A summa cum laude graduate of Bowdoin College (1970), he studied as a Rhodes Scholar (1970–1972) at Trinity College, Oxford. In 1976 he received his Ph.D. in political science from Harvard University. His writings include The Reapportionment Puzzle (1984); The Personal Vote (1987), written with John Ferejohn and Morris Fiorina; and Congressional Redistricting (1991), with David Butler. He has also co-edited numerous books, including Developments in American Politics, volumes 1–5, with Gillian Peele (1992–2006); Constitutional Reform in California, with Roger Noll (1994); Racial and Ethnic Politics in California, vol. 2, with Michael Preston and Sandra Bass (1991); and Voting at the Political Fault Line: California’s Experiment with the Blanket Primary, with Elisabeth R. Gerber (2002). Cain has served as a polling consultant for state and Senate races, as a redistricting consultant, and as a political commentator for numerous radio and television stations. He received the Zale Award for Outstanding Achievement in Policy Research and Public Service in March 2000 and was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences in April 2000.

Sergio Fabbrini is Professor of Political Science and Director of the School of International Studies at Trento University. He is the editor of the Italian Journal of Political Science. He has been a member of the Steering Committee of the European Consortium for Political Research Standing Group on European Union since 2001. Fabbrini has authored, co-authored, edited, and co-edited numerous books and hundreds of scientific articles and essays (in Italian, English, French, Spanish, German, Japanese, Greek, and Mongol) in the fields of comparative politics, international politics, American and Italian politics, political theory, and public policy. Since 1991, he has been considered a scientist of excellence by “Who’s Who in the World.”
ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Alison L. Gash is a doctoral candidate in political science at the University of California at Berkeley. Her research interests include public law, intergovernmental relations, ethics in government, and the consequences of pursuing different policy-making strategies. Prior to attending Berkeley, she spent several years working in civil rights litigation. She received a Master’s in Public Administration from Princeton University’s Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs. Gash has worked as a policy consultant for U.S. Department of Labor programs and state and local governments on a range of policy issues. She is a two-year recipient of the Travers Fellowship in Ethics and Politics awarded by the Institute of Governmental Studies at UC Berkeley.

Karen Getman is a partner at Remcho, Johansen & Purcell LLP, one of the leading political, constitutional, and policy law firms in California. She is a graduate of Yale College and Harvard Law School. She served as Chairman of the California Fair Political Practices Commission from 1999 to 2003. From 2003 to 2005 she served as the first Executive in Residence at the Center on Politics at the University of California, Berkeley’s Institute of Governmental Studies. She now serves on the Institute’s National Advisory Council. She also is adjunct professor at Boalt Hall School of Law, where she co-teaches the course on Regulating Public Integrity. Getman previously served on the board of Women Executives in State Government and as a member of the Speaker’s Commission on the California Initiative Process. Her publications include chapters in California Votes: The 2002 Governor’s Race and the Recall That Made History (2003) and Win the Right Way: How to Run Effective Local Campaigns in California (2005).
ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Giovanni Guzzetta is Professor of Public Law on the Faculty of Law at the University of Rome “Tor Vergata.” He received his Ph.D. from the European University Institute in Fiesole, Italy, and he wrote his Ph.D. thesis about the freedom of association. His publications and fields of interest mainly concern public law, constitutional law, European law, administrative law, fundamental rights, sources of law, and government.

David Hine is Fellow and Tutor in Politics and Director of the Centre for the Study of Democratic Government in the Department of International Relations at Christ Church, Oxford University. His main teaching interests cover comparative European government, comparative politics, and European integration. His current research is on public ethics and the machinery of public integrity enforcement in Western Europe. His recent publications include “Explaining Italian Preferences at the Constitutional Convention” (Comparative European Politics, 2004); “Ethics Management, Cultural Change, and the Ambiguities of European Commission Reform,” with Robert McMahon (2004); “The Role of the Ministry of the Economy and Finance” (Politica in Italia, 2004); and “Codes of Conduct for Public Officials in Europe: Common Label, Divergent Purposes” (International Public Management Journal, 2005). He is currently finishing a book (with Gillian Peele) on regulating conduct in British public life.

Pamela S. Karlan is Kenneth and Harle Montgomery Professor of Public Interest Law at Stanford University. She earned her B.A., M.A., and J.D. at Yale University. From 1984 to 1985 she was clerk to Judge Abraham D. Sofaer on the U.S. District Court, Southern District of New York. From 1985 to 1986 she was clerk to U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun. Before coming to Stanford she was Roy L. and Rosamond Woodruff Morgan Research Professor and Professor of Law at the University of Virginia School of Law and an assistant counsel at the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund. Karlan teaches courses in constitutional law, constitutional litigation, and legal regulation of the political process, among others. Her recent publications include Constitutional Law (5th ed., 2005), with Geoffrey R. Stone, Louise M. Seidman, Cass R. Sunstein, and Mark V. Tushnet; Civil Rights Actions: Enforcing the Constitution (2nd ed., 2007), with John C. Jeffries, Jr., Peter W. Low,
ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Robert Kaye wrote his contribution to this volume while working as a researcher at the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) Centre for Analysis of Risk and Regulation at the London School of Economics. Before joining the ESRC he was a Lecturer in Politics at Worcester College, Oxford University. He is the author of the forthcoming Regulating Westminster and has published articles on the regulation of political ethics, professional disciplinary bodies, and public inquiries.

Colin M. Macleod is Associate Professor in Law and the Department of Philosophy at the University of Victoria. His research focuses on issues in contemporary moral, political, and legal theory with a special focus on distributive justice and equality; children, families, and justice; and democratic ethics. He is the author of Liberalism, Justice, and Markets: A Critique of Liberal Equality (1998) and co-editor, with David Archard, of The Moral and Political Status of Children (2002). His articles have appeared in the Chicago-Kent Law Review, Theory and Research in Education, Politics and Society, the Canadian Journal of Philosophy, the Canadian Journal of Law and Jurisprudence, Law and Philosophy, and Dialogue. He received his B.A. from Queens University, his M.A. from Dalhousie University, and his Ph.D. from Cornell University.

Mark J. Oleszek is a doctoral candidate in American politics at the University of California at Berkeley. His academic interests include congressional leadership and organizational theory, a combination that informs his current research on leadership in the U.S. Senate. Prior to attending UC Berkeley, he served as a legislative aide to the U.S. Senate Democratic Policy Committee.

Gillian Peele is Fellow and Tutor in Politics at Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford University. She is the author of Governing the UK (4th ed., 2004) and the co-editor of Developments in American Politics (5th ed., 2006). She is currently finishing a book (with David Hine) on regulating conduct in British public life.
ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Denis Saint-Martin is Associate Professor in the Department of Political Science at the University of Montreal, where he teaches Public Administration and Policy. He has worked as a senior policy adviser in the Office of the Prime Minister of Canada and in 2005 was a Fulbright Scholar at the John F. Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University. He has published numerous articles in the field of public management and comparative politics. In 1999 he won the Herbert Kaufman Award for the best paper in public administration presented at the American Political Science Association annual meeting. One of his books, Building the New Managerialist State (2000), won the U.S. Academy of Management Best Book Award for 2001–2002. His most recent book, which he co-edited with Fred Thompson, is Public Ethics and Governance: Standards and Practices in Comparative Perspective (2006). He is currently working in the area of welfare state redesign and on the Watergate Effect, a comparative research project that looks at the regulation of ethics in politics from a historical-institutionalist perspective.

Andrew Stark is Professor of Strategic Management and Political Science at the University of Toronto. He is the author of Conflict of Interest in American Public Life (2000) and The Limits of Medicine (2006) and co-editor, with Michael Davis, of Conflict of Interest in the Professions (2001). Stark is currently writing a book that examines debates in American politics, principally at the state and local levels, over the public-private border in education, health care, welfare, and municipal services.

Christine Trost is Associate Researcher and Assistant Director of the Institute for the Study of Social Change at the University of California at Berkeley. After earning her Ph.D. in political science at UC Berkeley in 2000, she taught courses in American politics as a Lecturer at UC Berkeley and as a Visiting Assistant Professor at Mills College. From 2001 to 2004, she led the research arm of UC Berkeley’s Institute of Governmental Studies’ Improving Campaigns Project, which examined mass and elite opinion concerning campaign practices and identified and promoted best practices designed to encourage ethical and effective campaigning. Her research interests include political ethics, democratic theory, and civic and political engagement and incorporation. She has... written journal articles on a variety of topics related to political ethics, campaign practices, campaign finance reform, and civic and political engagement. She is co-editor, with Matthew Grossmann, of Win the Right Way: How to Run Effective Local Campaigns in California (2005) and co-editor, with Jonathan Bernstein and Adrienne Jamieson, of Campaigning for Congress: Politicians at Home and in Washington (1995).
Acknowledgments

We wish to acknowledge the generous support of the Pew Charitable Trusts, which awarded a grant to the Institute of Governmental Studies at the University of California at Berkeley, where this project was first conceived. Funds from the grant were used to develop conferences and workshops on the subject of political ethics in public life at the University of California at Berkeley, at Oxford University, and at Trento University. These gatherings brought together practitioners and academics, including many of the scholars who contributed chapters to this volume. We also extend our thanks to Kathleen Clark, Vincent Della Sala, Giuseppe Di Palma, J. Patrick Dobel, Simona Piattoni, Nathaniel Persily, and Roberto Toniatti, who provided extensive and valuable comments on individual conference papers that were later turned into chapters for this volume. We are especially grateful to Bruce Cain for encouraging us to pursue this project, to our anonymous reviewers for their many constructive suggestions, and to Beatrice Rehl, our patient and supportive editor at Cambridge University Press.

Christine Trost
Alison L. Gash
CONFLICT OF INTEREST AND PUBLIC LIFE