THE PHILOSOPHY OF DEATH

The Philosophy of Death is a discussion of the basic philosophical issues concerning death, and a critical introduction to the relevant contemporary philosophical literature. Steven Luper begins by addressing questions about those who die: What is it to be alive? What does it mean for you and me to exist? Under what conditions do we persist over time, and when do we perish? Next, he considers several questions concerning death, including: What does dying consist in? In particular, how does it differ from aging? Must death be permanent? By what signs may it be identified? Is death bad for the one who dies? If so, why? Finally he discusses whether, and why, killing is morally objectionable, and suggests that it is often permissible; in particular, (assisted) suicide, euthanasia, and abortion may all be morally permissible. His book is a lively and engaging philosophical treatment of a perennially fascinating and relevant subject.

STEVEN LUPER is Professor and Chair of the Philosophy Department, Trinity University. He is the author of Invulnerability: On Securing Happiness (1996), and his most recent edited volumes include Essential Knowledge (2004), The Sceptics: Contemporary Essays (2003), and Existing: An Introduction to Existentialist Thought (2000).

Acknowledgments

In writing this book, I have incurred a number of debts. Christine Gerakaris helped greatly by tracking down relevant materials. I thank her. Curtis Brown read the entire manuscript and gave me a great deal of extremely helpful feedback and suggestions. He saved me from making many errors, including errors in the formulation of comparativism. The book is much better as a result of his comments, and I am grateful. Eric Olson read chapter 2; his feedback helped me to make many improvements, for which I owe him thanks. Lawrence Espy also read chapter 2 and made helpful suggestions. I am grateful to him as well.

Chris Belshaw invited me to speak at a conference at York University, called “Death: What it is and Why it Matters,” held in July of 2008. There I received useful feedback concerning my views on suicide. I thank Chris and the participants in the conference.

I have drawn on various publications. The overall structure of the (first part of the) book is based loosely on “Death,” in the online Stanford University Encyclopedia of Philosophy, ed. Edward N. Zalta, 2002 (revised 2006). Much of the material in chapter 5 is based on my “Posthumous Harm,” American Philosophical Quarterly 41.1 (2004), 63–72, and “Past Desires and the Dead,” Philosophical Studies 126.3 (2005), 331–345. Chapter 6 is a revision of my “Mortal Harm,” Philosophical Quarterly 57 (2007), 239–251.
