Prayer in Islamic Thought and Practice

The five daily prayers (ṣalāt) that constitute the second pillar of Islam deeply pervade the everyday life of observant Muslims. Until now, however, no general study has analyzed the rules governing ṣalāt, the historical dimensions of its practice, and the rich variety of ways that it has been interpreted within the Islamic tradition. Marion Holmes Katz’s richly textured book offers a broad historical survey of the rules, values, and interpretations relating to ṣalāt. This innovative study on the subject examines the different ways in which prayer has been understood in Islamic law, Sufi mysticism, and Islamic philosophy. Katz’s book also goes beyond the spiritual realm to analyze the political dimensions of prayer, including scholars’ concerns about the righteousness and piety of rulers. The last chapter raises significant issues around gender roles, including the question of women’s participating in and leading public worship. Katz persuasively describes ṣalāt as both an egalitarian practice and one that can lead to extraordinary religious experience and spiritual distinction. This book will resonate with students of Islamic history and comparative religion.

Marion Holmes Katz is Associate Professor of Middle Eastern and Islamic Studies at New York University. Her publications include Body of Text: The Emergence of the Sunni Law of Ritual Purity (2002) and The Birth of the Prophet Muhammad: Devotional Piety in Sunni Islam (2007).
Themes in Islamic History

THEMES IN ISLAMIC HISTORY comprises a range of titles exploring different aspects of Islamic history, society, and culture by leading scholars in the field. Books are thematic in approach, offering a comprehensive and accessible overview of the subject. Generally, surveys treat Islamic history from its origins to the demise of the Ottoman Empire, although some offer a more developed analysis of a particular period or project into the present, depending on the subject matter. All the books are written to interpret and illuminate the past, as gateways to a deeper understanding of Islamic civilization and its peoples.

Editorial adviser:
Patricia Crone, Institute for Advanced Study, Princeton University

Already published:
1. Chase F. Robinson, Islamic Historiography
3. Michael Cook, Forbidding Wrong in Islam: An Introduction
4. David Cook, Martyrdom in Islam
5. Amy Singer, Charity in Islamic Societies
Prayer in Islamic Thought and Practice

Marion Holmes Katz

New York University
Acknowledgments

Introduction

1 Canonical prayer (ṣalāt) and supplication (duʿāʾ): Development and rules
   Ṣalāt: conditions and components 20
   Supplication: Duʿāʾ 29

2 Valid prayer and ideal prayer
   Intent (niyāt) 44
   Reverence (khushūʿ) and concentration (ḥudūr al-qalb) 56
   The cultivation of emotion 62
   Ethical transformation 70
   Conclusion 73

3 Interpretive models: What is ṣalāt, and what does it do?
   The model of the royal audience 84
   Prayer as communication 98
   Ṣalāt as an exercise in self-discipline 102
   Ṣalāt as a reflection of the cosmos 114
   Modern developments 121

4 The community at prayer: Congregational prayer, prayer leadership (imāma), and the boundaries of the religious community
   Friday prayers 130
   Leadership in prayer (imāma) 139
   Prayer behind a leader of another legal school 150
   Knowledge of prayer and its distribution in the community 155
   Failure to pray 162
   Modern developments 172
viii  Contents

5  Women and prayer  177
   Women’s prayer leadership (imāma) and placement within the congregation  180
   Women’s mosque access  190
   Knowledge and mastery of prayer  209

   Conclusion  215

Bibliography  217
Index  235
Acknowledgments

I am grateful to Marigold Acland of Cambridge University Press and to Patricia Crone for proposing this book to me and seeing it through to completion. Their patience, and Professor Crone’s inexhaustible erudition, made it a better work than it would otherwise have been. The fifth chapter draws on research done on a grant from the Carnegie Foundation for my project “Contesting the Mosque: Debates over Muslim Women’s Ritual Access.” Part of the third chapter was presented at the conference “Performing Religion: Actors, Contexts, and Texts” at the Orient-Institut Beirut, November 17, 2011; I thank Ines Weinrich for the opportunity to take part in the conference and the other participants for their feedback. I thank Iftikhar Zaman and Justin Stearns for their generosity in reading drafts and for their thoughtful comments. All errors of fact and interpretation are completely my own.

Working on this book has been a joy to me. My ever-patient husband, Bradley McCormick, humored my enthusiasms and soothed my frustrations. It would not have been possible without him. I dedicate it to Bill and Sue McCormick, who by their example have taught me a lot about faith.