Making People Illegal

This book explores the relationship between illegal migration and globalization. Under globalizing forces, migration law has been transformed into the last bastion of sovereignty. This explains the worldwide crackdown on extra-legal migration, and informs the shape this crackdown is taking. Even as states ratchet up provisions to end illegal migration, the phenomenon becomes increasingly significant legally, politically, ethically, and numerically. This book makes the innovative argument that the current state of migration law is vital to understanding globalization. It shows the intertwining of refugee law, security, trafficking and smuggling, and new citizenship laws, with particular attention to how the United States and the European Union define and defy what counts as global. Making People Illegal evaluates why migration law in the twenty-first century is markedly different from even the recent past, and argues that this is a harbinger of paradigm shift in the rule of law.

The Law in Context Series

Editors: William Twining (University College London) and Christopher McCrudden (Lincoln College, Oxford)

Since 1970 the Law in Context series has been in the forefront of the movement to broaden the study of law. It has been a vehicle for the publication of innovative scholarly books that treat law and legal phenomena critically in their social, political, and economic contexts from a variety of perspectives to bear on new and existing areas of law taught in universities. A contextual approach involves treating legal subjects broadly, using material from other social sciences, and from any other discipline that helps to explain the operation in practice of the subject under discussion. It is hoped that this orientation is at once more stimulating and more realistic than the bare exposition of legal rules. The series includes original books that have a different emphasis from traditional legal textbooks, while maintaining the same high standards of scholarship. They are written primarily for undergraduate and graduate students of law and of the disciplines, but most also appeal to wider readership. In the past, most books in the series have focused on English law, but recent publications include books on European law, globalization, transnational legal processes, and comparative law.

Books in the Series
Anderson, Schum, & Twining: Analysis of Evidence
Ashworth: Sentencing and Criminal Justice
Barton & Douglas: Law and Parenthood
Bell: French Legal Cultures
Bercusson: European Labour Law
Birkinshaw: European Public Law
Birkinshaw: Freedom of Information: The Law, the Practice and the Ideal
Cane: Atiyah's Accidents, Compensation and the Law
Clarke & Kohler: Property Law
Collins: The Law of Contract
Cranton, Scott & Black: Consumers and the Law
Davies: Perspectives on Labour Law
De Sousa Santos: Toward a New Legal Common Sense
Diduck: Law's Families
Elworthy & Holder: Environmental Protection: Text and Materials
Fortin: Children's Rights and the Developing Law
Glover & Thomas: Reconstructing Mental Health Law and Policy
Gobert & Punch: Rethinking Corporate Crime
Goodrich: Languages of Law
Harlow & Rawlings: Law and Administration: Text and Materials
Harris: An Introduction to Law
Harris: Remedies, Contract and Tort
Harvey: Seeking Asylum in the UK: Problems and Prospects
Hervey & McHale: Health Law and the European Union
Lacey & Wells: Reconstructing Criminal Law
Lewis: Choice and the Legal Order: Rising above Politics
Likosky: Law, Infrastructure and Human Rights
Likosky: Transnational Legal Processes
Maughan & Webb: Lawyering Skills and the Legal Process

Continued after the index
Making People Illegal

What Globalization Means for Migration and Law

Catherine Dauvergne

University of British Columbia
Contents

Acknowledgments ix
Publication acknowledgments xi

1 Introduction 1
2 On being illegal 9
3 Migration in the globalization script 29
4 Making asylum illegal 50
5 Trafficking in hegemony 69
6 The less brave new world 93
7 Citizenship unhinged 119
8 Myths and Giants: The influence of the European Union and the United States 142
9 Sovereignty and the rule of law in global times 169

Bibliography 191
Index 211
I could not possibly have completed this book without help. Acknowledgments such as these are as inadequate as they are customary. They are truly the most satisfying part of the book to write because of the warm memories their composition conjures.

For inspiration, draft reading, long conversations, and general encouragement with this endeavor, I am grateful to Ruth Buchanan, Peter Fitzpatrick, Jim Hathaway, Audrey Macklin, Jenni Millbank, Peter Showler, and Jeremy Webber. I have so enjoyed your company.

Portions of the book were refined in the conversations that grow out of having an audience. For these opportunities I am grateful to the Department of Law at Carleton University; the CERIUM project at the University of Montreal; the Faculty of Law at the University of New South Wales; the Citizenship, Borders, Gender Conference at Yale University; the Faculty of Law at the University of Toronto; the “Why Citizenship?” Workshop convened by Guy Mundlak and Audrey Macklin; the 2006 Demcon meeting; the College of Law at the University of Saskatchewan; and the 2007 Law and Society Association meeting in Berlin.

I have been very lucky to have had a group of terrific research assistants during the evolution of the book, most of whom have now graduated or will soon do so from the University of British Columbia Faculty of Law, all of whom have tremendous adventures before them. For their solicitous attention to detail and their patience, in chronological order, I am grateful to Robert Russo, Catherine Wong, Megan Kammerer, Ashleigh Keall, and Jacqueline Fehr. There must be a special mention of Megan, who spent two years with me, and Jacqueline, who lived through the final hours. Of course, none of this assistance would have been possible without the support of the Canada Research Chairs Program and the Social Science and Humanities Research Council of Canada.

Duncan, Nina, and Hugh I must thank for constancy and love. And Peter for everything, and also titles.

Catherine Dauvergne
Vancouver,
December 2007
Chapter 4 is based upon my article “Refugee Law and the Measure of Globalization” (2005), 22:2 Law in Context 62–82, and is revised and published here by permission of The Federation Press, the journal’s publishers.

Part of Chapter 6 was published by Sage Publications as “Security and Migration Law in the Less Brave New World” (2007), 16:4 Social and Legal Studies 533–549.

Part of Chapter 7 was published as “Citizenship with a Vengeance” (2007), 8:2 Theoretical Inquiries in Law 489–508, and is republished with permission of the Cegla Center for Interdisciplinary Research of the Law.