PERCEPTION AND KNOWLEDGE

This book offers a provocative, clear, and rigorously argued account of the nature of perception and its role in the production of knowledge. Walter Hopp argues that perceptual experiences do not have conceptual content, and that what makes them play a distinctive epistemic role is not something that they share with beliefs, but something that sets them radically apart. He explains that the reason-giving relation between experiences and beliefs is what Edmund Husserl called “fulfillment” – in which we find something to be as we think it to be. His book covers a wide range of central topics in contemporary philosophy of mind, epistemology, and traditional phenomenology. It is essential reading for contemporary philosophers of mind and phenomenologists alike.

WALTER HOPP is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Boston University. He has published articles in numerous journals including the Canadian Journal of Philosophy, the European Journal of Philosophy, and Husserl Studies.
PERCEPTION AND KNOWLEDGE

A Phenomenological Account

WALTER HOPP
Boston University
To Maita
Contents

Acknowledgments ix
List of Husserl’s works x

Introduction 1
1 Content 7
  1.1 Contemporary uses of ‘content’ 8
  1.2 Two arguments for mental content 12
  1.3 A Husserlian account 27
  1.4 Conclusion 36
2 Experiential conceptualism 37
  2.1 Motivating experiential conceptualism 40
  2.2 The argument from conditions of satisfaction 43
  2.3 The argument from perceiving-as 47
  2.4 The argument from the perception of categorically structured objects 60
  2.5 The argument from perceptual identification 73
  2.6 The argument from horizons 76
  2.7 Conclusion 80
3 Conceptualism and knowledge 81
  3.1 McDowell’s position 82
  3.2 Brewer’s account 92
  3.3 Conclusion 101
4 Against experiential conceptualism 103
  4.1 Detachable contents 103
  4.2 The argument from knowledge 106
  4.3 The argument from intentionality 115
  4.4 The demonstrative theory 118
  4.5 Some arguments against the demonstrative theory 119
  4.6 Conclusion 129
5 Conceptual and nonconceptual content 130
  5.1 Nonconceptual content 130
  5.2 Conceptual content 141
Contents

5.3 The argument from horizons revisited
5.4 Conclusion
6 The contents of perception
6.1 The relational view
6.2 The relational view and hallucination
6.3 Further considerations against the relational view
6.4 A defense of moderate disjunctivism
6.5 Conclusion
7 To the things themselves
7.1 Epistemic fulfillment
7.2 Other kinds of fulfillment
7.3 Departures from Husserl
7.4 Epistemic fulfillment and knowledge
7.5 Conclusion

Bibliography
Index
Acknowledgments

I have presented much of the content contained in this work in previous talks, discussions, and courses, and owe an enormous debt to all of those whose comments and criticisms have helped me develop my arguments. I am especially grateful to all of my colleagues in the Department of Philosophy at Boston University for their support, the Boston University Humanities Foundation for providing me with a semester of funding, and the Boston University Center for Philosophy and History of Science, the Husserl Circle, the American Philosophical Association, the Department of Philosophy at the University of Manitoba, the California Phenomenology Circle, the Philosophical Psychology Lab at Harvard University, and the Department of Philosophy at Seattle University for allowing me to present my work.

I am also indebted to a number of teachers, colleagues, and students for helping me develop my ideas on these topics over the past several years, including but not limited to: Michael Barber, Klaus Brinkmann, Vaughn Cartwright, Colin Cmiel, Steve Crowell, Sean Culleton, John Drummond, Andreas Elpidorou, Jason Ford, Aaron Garrett, Charles Griswold, George Heffernan, Ryan Hickerson, James Higginbotham, Jaakko Hintikka, Burt Hopkins, Sean Kelly, Victor Kestenbaum, Manfred Kuehn, Janet Levin, Steven Levine, David Liebesman, Claudio Majolino, Ed McCann, John McHugh, Ronald McIntyre, James Mensch, Dermot Moran, Thomas Nenon, Jake Quilty-Dunn, Ethan Rubin, Ben Sherman, Michael Shim, Charles Stewert, David Woodruff Smith, Nate Smith, Susanne Sreedhar, Daniel Star, Carolyn Suchy-Dicey, James Van Cleve, Gideon Yaffe, and Jeff Yoshimi. I am especially grateful to Dan Dahlstrom, Brian Glenney, Dave Kasnier, and Dallas Willard for reading and providing feedback on portions of this work. Finally, I would like to thank the reviewers of this manuscript for their comments.
Husserl’s works

List of Husserl's works

