

Index

- abdication of Edward VIII (1936), 116–17
 Aberystwyth, and Wilson Chair, 59, 114, 354
 Acton, Lord, and The Whig Interpretation, 100; Butterfield on, 199, 209, 225, 234; his obsession with, 237–9, 297–8; other references, 199, 294, 301–2, 305, 307
Annales school, the, 235; see also, Bloch, Marc;
   Braudel, Fernand
 Annan, Noël, 76, 90, 167, 345, 354
 Armstrong, William, 334, 335
 Aron, Raymond, 312
 Asquith, H. H., 163
 Augustine, St, 30, 104, 211, 227, 314, 316, 360;
   and international relations, 339
- Baldwin, Stanley, 131, 212
 Barker, Ernest, 142, 168, 275
 Barraclough, Geoffrey; 324; reacts against Gerhard Ritter, 269–70
 Barth, Karl, 211, 212, 223
 Baur, Betty, 77
 Behrens, Betty, 77, 156, 159, 169, 282, 313, 317;
   and quarrel over official history, 160–2
 Bell, Coral, 344
 Benians, E. A., 52, 108
 Ben-Israel, Hedva, 288
 Berlin, Isaiah, 312, 333, 345
 Bernal, J. D., 194
 Best, Geoffrey, 344, 346
 Bible, the, and Old Testament, 222–3, 225; and
   New Testament, 230; other, 368
 Birdwood, Field Marshall Sir William, 96
 Bloch, Marc, 160, 288
 Boase, T. S. R. ('Tom'), 115
 Bogle, Eve, 77, 264, 265, 348, 352, 354; and Linton Bogle, 284
 Bonaparte, Napoleon, special subject on, 38, 43;
   and Peace Tactics, 60
 Bradford, 12–13, 15, 36, 39
 Braudel, Fernand, 235
- British Committee for the Study of International Relations, 331–41 throughout, 350, 369
 Brogan, Denis, 247, 275, 360
 Brontë family, 9–10, 11
 Brooke, John, 253
 Brooke, Z. N., 108, 160, 166, 171
 Bull, Hedley, and the British Committee, 334,
   335, 336, 342, 359; and theory, 343
 Bultmann, Rudolf, 208, 224, 227, 367;
   Butterfield studies him, 228–9, 231
 Burkill, Charles, 129, 136, 148, 283, 351, 352; and Greta Burkill, 129
 Butterfield, Albert (father), 17–18, 28, 35; illness and death, 266
 Butterfield, Arthur (brother), 20, 49, 50, 73–4;
   early death, 266
 Butterfield, Edith ('Edie') (sister), 19, 20, 50
 Butterfield, Giles, (2nd son), 70, 72, 75, 91, 152; early worries about, 266; his journey towards suicide, 272–4; the aftermath, 275, 276, 279, 283, 302, 331
 Butterfield, Herbert, birth, 16; and youth in Oxenhope, 19–21; and his parents, 19–20, 21;
   at school, 22–3, 25–6, 33; his reading, 24, 31;
   his music, 24–5, 28, 71, 82, 182; his ambition,
   21, 28, 31; his theology, 29–30, 178, 204–5,
   230; and the Gifford Lectures, 229–31; and Providence, 213, 215, 216, 221–2; and Methodism, 12–13, 29, 32, 51; student at Peterhouse, 40–1, 43–4; research student,
   44–5; and The Historical Novel, 45; College Fellow, 48; Princeton and his American sympathies, 49, 50–5; loss of direction on return, 57–8; engagement and marriage, 68–9; his jealousies, 69–70; his contradictions, 70; his smoking, 72–3; troubled relations with parents, 35, 50, 73–4;
   false allegations of impropriety, 76–8; his relationship with Joy Marc, 78–94 throughout; sabbatical year (1938), 86, 136–9; commitment to historical thought, 95–6;

Butterfield, Herbert, birth (cont.)

his teaching, 97, 98–9, 115; his turn towards Machiavelli, 106–7; historiography and relativism, 109, 110–11; and ‘technical history’, 110–11; and biography as a form, 112, 138–9; and the Namier problem, 114; applies for chairs, 114–15; his politics, 116–17, 131–2, 133, 135–6; and the Abdication crisis, 116–17; and the Third Reich, 119–20, 124, 125–36 throughout; his lecture tour in Nazi Germany (1938), 141–3; theory of the state, 122–3; life in the Second World War, 151–3, 160; and Betty Behrens, 160–2; his attitude to the conduct of the war, 153–6; on the international system, 158; and the Chair of Modern History, 167, 169, 188; his inaugural lecture (1944), 171–3; significance of the Second World War for his biography, 173–4, 213–14; his attitude to science as a form, 177–8, 186–7; involved with Committee for History of Science Lectures, 185, 187–8, 191; on C. P. Snow and the Two Cultures debate, 195–7; on the idea of history as a science, 197–203 throughout; his relationship to God, 204–5; and sermons, 210–11; the importance of personality, 212; on avoiding arrogance and cupidity, 218–19, 220–1, 226; his Gifford Lectures and religion, 229–31, 315; his images of historical construction, 236–7; his involvement with Ireland and UCD, 239–41; turns away from Fox towards historiography, 250–2; his critique of Namier, 252–4; Butterfield at fifty, 263–4; Master of Peterhouse (1955–68), 264, 275; his conduct as Master and Vice-Chancellor, 275–86 throughout; Regius Professor of Modern History (1963–68), 264, 318; family tensions, 264–7; his involvement with German reconstruction after 1945, 267–70; the trauma of his son’s suicide, 272–4; Peterhouse ‘a very congenial home’, 283–6; origins of his theory of historiography, 292–7; his Wiles Lectures (1954), 302–5, 318–19; and George III and the Historians, 308–9; his relations with E. H. Carr, 312–14; a widening sense of the world, 292–317, 320; tensions in his thought about International Relations, 320–1, 326, 328–31, 334–6; and his relations with the British Committee, 332–41 throughout, 341–3; diplomatic history, 59–60, 321, 322–3, 343; his sympathy with Niebuhr, 338–9; more tensions at home, 349–50, 352; student unrest, 353, 355, 363; gives endowed lectures, 360, 361–2; declining years, illness and death, 345–70 throughout. See also under other family members; Cambridge University; historical theory and method; Knowles, David; Marc, Joy; Peterhouse; Princeton University; University College, Dublin; Williams, Desmond; Wormald, Brian Butterfield, Mary (mother), 18–19, 35, 68, 205

Butterfield, Pamela (née Crawshaw) (wife), 66, 71, 264; her family, 66–7; early days of marriage, 74–5; clouds gathering, 75; the visit to Nazi Germany (1938), 143; pregnant with Robin, 144; wartime evacuation of children, 152; her admiration for David Knowles, 164; her lack of admiration for Desmond Williams, 166; tensions at home, 264–5; and her son’s suicide, 272–4, 280; life in the Lodge, 283–6; her loneliness and plans for Butterfield’s retirement, 348–9; the last years with her husband, 368, 369
Butterfield, Peter (eldest son), 70, 72, 91, 152, 266, 273, 284, 347; on parental tensions, 264; converts to Rome, 274
Butterfield, Robin (youngest son), 72, 92, 143, 214, 265, 284, 347, 368
Butterfield, Sir Frederick, 16

Cam, Helen, 138, 162, 197

Cambridge Historical Journal (later the Historical Journal), Butterfield editing it, 118, 158–9, 161, 171, 180, 301, 311

Cambridge Modern History, supposed digest of, 159; its modernism, 180

Cambridge Review, 158, 183, 194, 211, 313

Cambridge University and Butterfield, 33–5, 58, 291; Vice-Chancellor (1959–61), 224, 227, 283, 285, 287, 312, 314, 315, 331, 340; Professor of Modern History, 169; inaugural, 169; Regius Chair of Modern History, 264, 315, 331, 350; his successor, 352. See also Peterhouse

Cambridge University and the Second World War, 147–8

Carlyle, Thomas, 61, 299

Carr, E. H., 100, 101, 263, 326, 327; and Wilson Chair, 114; Butterfield’s response to What Is History?, 312–14, 316; refuses to chair British Committee, 331, 333

Catel, Jean, 51, 54

Chadwick, Owen, 75, 352

Chalmers, Robert, Lord, 96

Chamberlain, Neville, 147, 185; Butterfield’s view of, 140–1

Chatham House, see Royal Institute of International Affairs

Christianity and History (1949), 188; and ‘technical history’, 200, 201, 210, 214, 221, 222–3, 224, 226, 258, 296; origins and

Index

377

- argument, 216–18; reception, 223; BBC and 216; implications for International Relations, 327, 334
- Christianity, Diplomacy and War* (1953), 263, 270, 321, 327; context and argument, 328–31; and America, 330
- Church of England, 73, 130, 131, 204, 212, 214, 231; Wormald and, 278
- Churchill, Winston, 39, 145; Butterfield's view of, 155–6
- Clapham, Sir John, 153, 163, 288
- Clark, G. N., 153
- Cobban, Alfred, 38; and French Revolution, 317
- Cohen, I. Bernard, 55, 193, 194, 195
- Collingwood, R. G., 236, 257, 299
- Commager, H. S., 287
- Cornell University and the A. D. White Chair, 267, 349, 353, 355
- Cowling, Maurice, 198, 348, 351, 352
- Crane, Hart, 50–5
- Crawley, Charles, 56
- Crombie, A. C., 194
- Czechoslovakia, Nazi invasion (1938), and Soviet invasion (1968), 359
- Dakar, raid on (1940), 155–6
- De Gaulle, Charles, 155, 157
- De Valera, Eamonn, 240
- Dent, E. J., 74, 127
- Dickens, Charles, 45
- Dictionary of the History of Ideas*, Butterfield's essay on the history of historiography, 355
- Dilthey, Wilhelm, 254, 257
- Diplomatic Investigations* (1966), 343
- Dockhorn, Klaus, 143, 223, 267, 268, 312, 332
- Dudley Edwards, Robert ('Robin'), 239, 240, 247, 274, 277, 286, 300, 302, 310, 332
- Eddington, Arthur, 182
- Einstein, Albert, 202
- Elliott, J. H., 286
- Elton, Geoffrey, 316, 352
- Emerson, Ralph Waldo, 53
- Encyclopaedia Hebraica*, 227
- English School of International Relations, 334, 336
- Enlightenment, the, and Butterfield, 226
- Fascism, and Mussolini, 116, 124, 145
- Ferrero, Guglielmo, 134
- Fischer, Fritz, and Griff nach der Weltmacht, 289
- Fontenelle, 185, 193
- Fox, Charles James, 99, 115, 150, 185, 188; and the unwritten biography, 105, 112, 118, 136, 137, 138–9, 243, 251, 300, 308, 309, 345, 353, 365
- French Revolution, Butterfield on, 140, 249
- Furness, Sir Robert ('Robin'), 92–3
- Galinsky, Hans, 142, 267
- Gasquet, Cardinal, 239, 297
- George III and the Historians* (1957), 227, 255, 308–9, 346
- George III, Butterfield and, 114, 115, 117, 233, 300, 306
- George III, Lord North and the People*, 234; original proposal, 244; the book's appeal, 247–8; content and critique, 249–50, 299
- Germany and its universities, 36; and the Ritter controversy, 269–70; postwar years, 241–3, 257, 267–70; visits, 288; critic of Fritz Fischer, 289; historiography and journals, 307, 310; Butterfield's contacts there in later years, 356
- Geyl, Pieter, 287, 315
- Gide, André, 74, 125, 133
- Gifford Lectures (1965–6), 229–31, 285, 316, 318, 342, 347, 349, 350, 365
- Gilbert, Felix, 360
- Gillott, Charles, 99
- Gooch, G. P., 44, 59, 109, 124, 199
- Göttingen historians, 304, 336, 337
- Grattan, Henry, 249
- Greene, Graham, 279
- Hall, A. Rupert, 190, 194, 360
- Halle, Louis J., 271
- Happold, F. Crossfield, 98–9
- Harnack, Adolf, 30, 58, 207–8, 212, 215, 217, 228, 356
- Harrow School and Vellacott, 39
- Haworth, 9
- Heaton, Martha, 19, 22, 24, 25
- Hegelianism and Butterfield, 256
- Heidegger, 121; and Bultmann, 208, 228–9
- Hildebrandt, Franz, 356
- Hinsley, Harry, 332
- Hinton, William, 275, 360
- Historical Association, 108, 252, 257, 347; Butterfield President of, 282, 286; attempts Irish version, 286–7; anti-Namier implications, 286
- historical theory and method, and Temperley, 41, 42; in the historical novel, 46–7; Rankean ideas, 61, 111; causation and agency, 62–3, 172, 242; history as thought, 95–6; in the Whig Interpretation, 101–4; historical theory and method (cont.)

resisting relativism, 109, 110–11, 298, 305, 313; and 'technical history', 110, 170, 178, 198, 200, 234, 306, 365; biography, 112; dislike of 'theory', 158, 256, 303, 312, 341–3; 'official history', 159, 161; the glacier metaphor, 172, 234–5, 236, 293, 309; historical geography, 160, 292–317; on whig history as a genre, 168; his epistemology, 170, 217, 218; and the nature of historiography, 171–3, 292–317; history as a scientific enquiry, 197–203; throughout, 304–5, 323–8, 337; narrative and structure, 235–6, 242, 293; and place in the reign of George III, 250; the history of consciousness, 236–7; critique of Namier's method, 252–4; its decline, 255; Butterfield's mature theory of history, 256–9 throughout; the turn towards historiography, 292–7; the persistence of 'facts', 298; the 'stereoscopic' metaphor, 299, 370; theory of the state, 366–7

historiography, history of, 237, 259, 291–319 throughout; 355, 365

History and Human Relations (1951), 243, 299, 327

History of Parliament, 252

Hitler, Adolf, see Third Reich

Hogan, James, 240

homosexuality, and Hart Crane, 54–5; Butterfield's tolerance of, 55, 88

Hook, Sidney, and the woodenness of theorists, 311

Hoppen, Theodore, 286

Howard, Michael, 287, 333, 340, 346; and British Committee, 334, 335

Hudson, G. F., 334, 335

Huizinga, Johan, 364

Huxley, Julian, 183

India, tour of, 287, 317

International Association of Universities, Butterfield and, 315

International Congress of Historical Sciences, 162, 287; at Stockholm (1960), 311, 315 international relations (IR), Butterfield's approach to, 224, 323–8, 337; balance of power and limited conflicts, 324–37, 344; Korean War and, 324; and atomic bomb, 325; and Christianity, 326; unconditional surrender, 123, 125, 326; his elation at 'realism' as a doctrine, 326; British policy, 328–30; Suez crisis, 329; and British Committee for the Study of International Relations, 331–2, 347; and the question of theory, 341–3; later years and, 359–60

Ireland, Butterfield examining in, 136; and the link with University College, Dublin, 234, 239–41; and George III, Lord North and the People, 247, 249; and Butterfield's historiographical ideas, 310; the Commission on Higher Education, 283, 357; Dublin Historical Association, 286–7; Trinity College, 357; Ireland's importance in Butterfield's life, 357–9; dismay over the IRA, 347

Ito, Shuntaro, 195

Jameson, Storm, friendship with Pamela Butterfield, 263–4

Japan, and pact with Nazi Germany, 157; and the atomic bomb, 325

Jeans, James, 182, 185

Jerusalem, and Richard Koebner, 288; Butterfield visits, 288

Jews and anti-Semitism, 130

Journal of the History of Ideas, 158, 310, 355

Keens-Soper, Maurice, 344

Keighley, 9, 14, 15, 16, 25, 36, 205; the Trade and Grammar School, 26–7, 178, 369

Kendrew, John, and Mack Smith, 281

Kennan, George, 270, 330, 331

Keynes, Richard, and his treatment by Butterfield, 281

Kitson Clark, George, 36, 56, 152, 286, 316

Knowles, Dom David, 149; and Peterhouse, 164–6, 171; and Elizabeth Kornerup, 164–5, 166, 171; other references 209, 231, 238, 281, 315, 317, 360

Koebner, Richard, 288, 330

Koestler, Arthur, 285, 354

Koyré, Alexandre, 194, 195, 196

La Popelière, Lancelot Voisin de, 304

Labour party, the, in the 1930s, 131–2

Lawrence, D. H., 87

League of Nations, 59, 98, 114; and historiography, 109; and Third Reich, 129, 146, 199, 244, 295, 322

Leavis, F. R., 111, 196

Liberty in the Modern World (1952), 225, 251

Liddell Hart, Basil, 229

Lloyd, Rosemary, and her marriage to Wormald, 278, 280

Lowes Dickinson, G., 336

Lubbock, Roy, 71, 148, 280, 283

Luther, Martin, in Whig Interpretation, 100, 105; and influence on Butterfield, 206–8, 367

Index

379

- Machiavelli, Niccolò, 96, 105, 125, 236, 323–8, 337; and Chabod, 310
- Mack Smith, Denis, 275, 333, 360; and Butterfield's treatment of him, 281
- MacKinnon, Donald, and the British Committee, 332, 334, 340, 346; his unintelligibility, 335
- Magna Carta in the Historiography of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries*, (Stenton Lecture), 361
- Man on his Past*, 292; origins and argument, 302–5
- Manning, Charles, 322, 325
- Marc, Joy, her relationship with Butterfield, 78–94 throughout; other references, 106–7, 113, 115, 117, 118, 133, 135, 142, 144, 145, 148, 152, 185, 211, 212, 213, 247, 264, 265, 313, 348
- Marx and Marxism, 111, 235, 238, 294; Butterfield's essay in Scrutiny (1933), 111–12; as 'retrogression', 295; and Cobban, 317; and revolution, 324, 337
- McIntire, C. T., 99, 121, 142, 155
- McLachlan, Jean, 162, 188
- Mehta, Ved, 313
- Meinecke, Friedrich, 267, 356, 366
- Methodism, and West Riding, 12–13, 29, 88, 205–6, 211, 367; Butterfield's relationship with, 205, 231, 367–8
- Metternich, K. W. von, 329, 330
- Momigliano, Arnaldo, 287, 315, 319, 365
- Montanus, and Butterfield's reading of him, 58
- Moody, Theodore, 239, 286, 310
- Moore, F. C., 31, 32
- Morgenthau, Hans, 270, 333, 334
- Munich Agreement (1938), 138; Butterfield's response to, 140–1, 143
- Mussolini, attacks Albania, 145
- Namier, Lewis, 55, 96, 106, 112, 114, 115, 138, 233, 234, 282, 286; the 'squadrons', 306; Butterfield's critique, 252–4; and George III and the Historians, 308–9
- Napoleon* (1939), 138, 139–40, 144, 150, 154, 159
- Neale, J. E., 159
- Needham, Joseph, 38, 182–3, 188; and History of Science Lectures, 184, 189
- Niebuhr, Reinhold, 211, 223, 320, 331, 338–9; reviewed with Butterfield, 334
- Nock, Arthur, 58
- Nonconformity, 117, 210, 214, 231, 314, 367
- North, Lord (1732–92), 138, 234, 247, 249, 253
- Nuremberg Laws (1935), 130
- O'Gorman, Frank, 285
- O'Sullivan, J. M., 145, 167, 240
- Oakeshott, Michael, 39, 47, 56, 102, 110, 149, 161, 193, 270, 298, 323; and the Junior Historians, 108; and Rosemary Wormald, 279, 280
- Official Histories of the Second World War, 161
- Oppenheimer, Robert, 330
- Origin of Modern Science* (1949), content and reception, 191–5, 201, 218, 258, 295, 300, 318, 365
- Oxenhope, 9, 10–11, 12, 14, 20–1, 27, 63, 205, 367; its dark side, 88
- Oxford University, external examiner there, 113
- Pagel, Walter, 184, 188, 189
- Pares, Richard, 114, 115, 153, 154, 308; reviews George III, Lord North and the People, 249
- Perutz, Max, 203
- Peterhouse, Cambridge, 32, 34, 35, 36, 40, 55, 58, 71, 205, 229, 253; character in the 1930s, 96–7, 118, 212; Butterfield writes entry for Victoria County History, 118, 137; impact of Second World War, 148–50; the link with University College, Dublin, 239–41; Vellacott's last days, 274; Butterfield as Master, 264, 265, 275–86 throughout, 302, 306, 331, 350, 351; distinction and quietude, 348; Butterfield's remains interred in its chapel, 369
- Pickthorn, Kenneth, 132
- Plumb, J. H., 76, 90, 127, 135, 136, 153, 352
- Pocock, J. G. A., 168, 286, 299
- Postan, M. M. ('Munia'), 96, 130, 131, 134, 160, 171, 188, 190, 275
- Potter, G. R., 38, 56
- Power, Eileen, 185
- Powicke, Maurice, 251, 366
- Previté-Orton, Charles, 34, 108
- Priestley, J. B., 39
- Princeton University, 49, 50–5, 180, 250, 330
- Providence, in Butterfield's thought, 314, 323, 327, 328, 337, 341, 351
- Puritanism, and New England, 53; and himself, 69, 88
- Ranke, Leopold von, 102, 111, 112, 181, 198, 199, 207, 233, 237, 294, 305, 323, 337
- Rashdall, Hastings, 30
- Raven, Charles, 166, 188, 189, 211
- Reformation, the, in Whig Interpretation, 101, 105, 117, 120; and Luther, 206–8, 226; and Acton, 238
- Ritschl, Albrecht, 206–8
- Ritter, Gerhard, 223; and his controversy with Barraclough, 269–70
- Rockefeller Foundation, 270, 287, 288, 360; and the British Committee, 331, 332, 341

- Roman Catholic Church, 89, 204, 208–9, 226, 231; and Anglo-Catholics, 204, 212
- Romein, Jan, noted by Butterfield, 310
- Rossi, Pietro, argument against, 316
- Rowse, A. L., 115, 153
- Royal Institute of International Affairs ('Chatham House'), 333, 366
- Rupp, Gordon, 142, 205, 215
- Rusk, Dean, 271, 287, 360
- Russia, and Bolshevism, 124, 139; and Japan, 157
- Rutherford, Ernest, 181
- Sarton, George, 192, 258
- Sawston, retirement at, 349, 350, 353, 355, 365, 368; and death there, 369
- Schieder, Theodor, 288
- Schmidt-Hidding, Wolfgang, 142, 268
- Schramm, Percy, 347, 356
- science, Butterfield's attitude towards, 177–8, 227, 238; doubts about, 178–80, 219, 257; the atom bomb and its use, 179; Christianity and, 189; astronomical metaphors, 324–37; reflections on in later life, 364
- Scott, Sir Walter, 47
- Second World War, scepticism over its outbreak, 144–5
- Seven Years' War, 157, 292, 300; Butterfield's lecture on, 300–1
- Sewell, Keith, 29, 211, 213, 294
- sex, and its place in society, 87–91; Butterfield's critique of marriage, 89–90
- Sincerity and Insincerity in Charles James Fox* (Raleigh Lecture), 346
- Singer, Charles, 190
- Skinner, Quentin, 150
- Snow, C. P., and the Third Reich, 129–30; the Two Cultures debate, 195
- socialism, Butterfield's flirtation with, 135
- Society of Junior Historians (Cambridge), 56, 108; Oakeshott and Butterfield resign from, 108
- state, the, and Butterfield's mistrust of it, 122, 213; as a construction of political 'theory', 122–3
- Steber, Martina, 142
- Strachey, Lytton, 237
- Stubbs, William, 101
- Sumner, Humphrey, 153
- Sutcliffe, Halliwell, 11
- Talmon, J. L., 288, 330
- Tawney, R. H., and Whig Interpretation, 100, 160, 205, 212, 213
- Taylor, A. J. P., 254, 270, 346
- Temperley, Harold, 32, 40–3, 45, 48, 49, 59, 60–3, 70, 96, 97, 108, 109, 114, 124, 131, 136, 162, 169, 207, 288, 321, 322, 347; and historical 'science', 180, 199, 291; and Whig Interpretation, 100; and Butterfield's unwritten biography, 43, 244–5, 353, 365; and Third Reich, 129; premature death, 148, 152, 163
- Temple, William, 205, 212–13
- The Diversity of History* (Butterfield's Festschrift) and its contributors, 360
- The Englishman and his History* (1944), 143, 153, 213, 234, 263, 299; its occasion and argument, 168–70
- The Historical Novel* (1924), 45–8, 52
- The Peace Tactics of Napoleon* (1929), 56, 59, 60–3, 112, 321
- The Statecraft of Machiavelli* (1940) 106–7, 150, 347; the argument, 150–1
- The Whig Interpretation of History* (1931), 70, 95, 99, 173, 194, 213, 226, 234, 347; origins and argument, 99–104 throughout; 120; supposed 'recantation' of it, 135, 168, 312; its effect on Brian Wormald, 149, 277; and scientific method, 183; and Acton, 237; and What is History?, 263
- theology, chapter 8 throughout; God around the corner, 57; and Montanus, 58; and human personality, 134
- Third Reich, the, and Hitler, 116, 121, 124, 125–36 throughout; and Butterfield's notorious lectures, 141–3, 178, 220
- Thomas, Keith, 263
- Thompson, Kenneth, 270, 287, 331–2, 344
- Tierney, Michael, 240
- Toynbee, Arnold, 133, 188, 314, 316, 329, 330, 364
- Trevelyan, G. M., and Whig Interpretation, 99, 105, 119–20, 150, 153, 250, 347
- Trevor-Roper, Hugh, 83, 242, 252, 255, 333, 345
- unconditional surrender, doctrine of, and Butterfield's rejection of it, 123, 125
- United States, 29; New York and Greenwich Village, 51, 54; and Cold War strategies, 327, 330; and Vietnam, 359, 363; and policy in Middle East, 363. See also Cornell University; Princeton University; Rusk, Dean
- University College, Dublin, 167, 195; and Peterhouse, 239–41; and Desmond Williams, 241, 274, 357. See also Ireland
- Valéry, Paul, 31, 133
- Vellacott, Paul, and the young Butterfield, 39–40, 43; at Harrow, 70, 77, 96, 100; and

Index

381

- Nazi Germany, 128–9, 142; becomes Master of Peterhouse, 148; illness and death, (1954), 274
- Venturi, Franco, 360
- Versailles, Treaty of, and Butterfield's contempt for, 59, 123, 146, 328
- Vichy regime, 155
- Vico, G. B., and Butterfield's stadial thought, 296
- Vienna, with Joy Marc, 83–5
- Villa Serbelloni at Bellagio, 25, 265, 287, 311, 315, 332, 341, 344, 347, 355, 360
- Vincent, J. R., 285
- Wagner, Fritz, 312
- Walston, Harry and Catherine, 278
- Waltz, Kenneth, 331, 339; and realism, 338–9
- Ward, Sir Adolphus, 44, 48, 55
- Watson, J. Adam, 144, 148, 309, 324, 330, 334, 337, 346, 362, 365; and the British Committee, 335; and The Origins of History, 366
- Weber, Max, 111
- Webster, Charles, 42, 59, 98, 114, 115, 311, 322
- Weizmann, Chaim, 252–4
- Wells, H. G., 294
- Wesley, John, 29, 205, 206, 367
- Wesleyan University, Butterfield's visits, 317, 347
- West Riding (Yorkshire), 11–12; economy, 14–16, 36–8
- Wheeler-Bennett, John, 242
- White, Hayden, 257
- Wiener, Philip, 355
- Wight, Martin, 194, 222, 271, 277, 326; encounters Butterfield, 333–4; and Power Politics, 333; and British Committee, 335; and the idea of an international society, 336; and theory, 342, 343; and Diplomatic Investigations, 343; recreates the British Committee, 359–60; death, 344, 351; and Butterfield's Martin Wight Lecture (1975), 366–7
- Wiles Lectures, origin of lectures, 271–2; and Cobban's relativism, 38, 274, 302–5, 317, 331, 347
- Willey, Basil, 188
- Williams, Desmond, 167, 209, 238, 239, 247, 275, 286, 347, 351, 361; Butterfield's role in advancing his career, 277; and the British Committee, 332, 334, 335, 340
- Woodward, Llewellyn, 115
- Wordsworth, William, 23, 34
- Wormald, Brian, on Whig Interpretation, 104; his period of personal turbulence, 277–81 throughout; other references, 50, 71, 149–50, 154, 196, 209, 238, 274, 275, 300, 307, 348, 351, 361
- Wormald, Patrick, 279
- Wrigley, E. A., 275
- Wyvill, Christopher, 247
- Yorkshire Association, 247, 249
- Zimmern, Alfred, 59, 114