

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-00547-1 - Trade and Institutions in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Geniza Merchants and their Business World

Jessica L. Goldberg

Index

More information

Index

Major discussions are set in boldface. Given the nature of this book, geographic places cannot be fully indexed; the page references are rather to main discussions.

- Abū 'Imrān Mūsā b. Abī 'l-Ḥayy Khalīla. 244, 290, 293–295, 299, 305, 307, 317, 318, 330–332, 333, 350, 353–355
See (Abū 'Imrān) Mūsā b. Abī 'l-Ḥayy Khalīla
- Abū Ishāq Ibrāhīm b. 'Aṭā', 2, 48, 180, 183
 Abū 'l-Faḍl b. Salmān, 315–317
 Abū 'l-Ḥasan b. Ḥayyim, 171, 293
 Abūn b. Ṣadaqa, 87, 128, 238, 294–295
 Abū Sa'īd, 83, 131
- agents and agency
 agency law, 130, 151–159, 358
 agency transactions statistically compared, 143
aṣḥābunā and ṣuḥba compared, 127, 132–133, 141, 354
 authority designated in letters, 65–67
 commission agency, 134, 138–139, 154
 conflict over, 3, 180, 196
 outside the range of correspondence, 196, 210
See also aṣḥābunā (colleagues); business relationships; commercial services; junior associate system; legal institutions; partnerships; ṣuḥba (reciprocal agency); trust; wakīl al-tujjār
- Aḥmad b. Dā'ūd, 1–2, 180
 Alexandria, 200–206, 243–244
 Andalusī clan 43, 227, 313–319
 merchants:
 Abū Ya'qūb Ishāq b. Yūsuf al-Andalusī, 131, 157–158; Isma'īl b. Ishāq al-Andalusī, 131, 157–158, 318–319; Isma'īl b. Ya'qūb al-Andalusī, 85; Ya'qūb b. Isma'īl al-Andalusī, 131, 315–316 aṣḥābunā (colleagues), 38–39, 65, 80, 94, 135–136, 139–143, 146, 157, 159, 171, 172, 174, 178, 180, 181, 182, 183–184, 187–188, 193, 199, 208,
- 244, 290, 293–295, 299, 305, 307, 317, 318, 330–332, 333, 350, 353–355
 openness of associations of, 141, 148, 149–150, 295, 354
See also agents and agency; business relationships; Geniza merchants; identity; ṣuḥba
- 'Aṭā b. Zakārī, 172
 'Awād b. Ḥananel, 132, 146
 'Ayyāsh b. Ṣadaqa, 56–57, 72, 74, 78, 82, 84
- balad al-Rūm*, 132, 198, 210, 267, 298, 303, 307–308, 317, 331
See also Rūm (“Romans”)
- Braudel, Fernand, 22–23, 342–343
- business practices
 misconduct, 82–83, 121, 148–149, 182, 183
 use of Geniza records for the study of, 26–27
- business relationships
 absence of formal guilds, 140–141, 350, 352–353
 importance of, 44–45, 132, 281–282, 285, 316–318, 327–328, 352
 and informality, 14–15, 17
 institutions required for long-distance trading, 122–123, 183–184
 investment by individuals to benefit the core business community, 49
 and the Islamic legal system, 150, 177–178, 355
 and Jewish identity, 28–29
 letter writing as a tool for, 74
 and the organization of administration and power, 3, 174, 177–178

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-00547-1 - Trade and Institutions in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Geniza Merchants and their Business World

Jessica L. Goldberg

Index

More information

Index

417

- role of the local business community, 55, 275–276, 293–295
See also agents and agency; aṣḥābunā; commercial services; local business community; reputation; trust
- Būṣīr, 56–57, 101–104
- Cairo Geniza, contents and value of, 36–37
 dispersion of materials, 5–6, 7–8
 source bias issues of, 4, 8–9, 16–17
- commercial corpus, 366–367
 nature of, 5, 9, 37, 56–63, 206, 213
 statistical analysis of, 72, 74–75, 366
See also letters; typological sample
- commercial letter corpus, 9–11, 63
- commercial services, 123–143
 legal claims/protections, 134, 154–156
 and reciprocity, 127–128, 144, 145–146
 valuing of, 81–82, 140, 146, 148–149, 180, 183
See also agents and agency; business relationships
- commodities
 agricultural products, 237–238, 277–278, 338, 340–345
 consumer goods, 233–234, 236, 239; in lesser markets, 211–212, 231–233, 234–235; qafār (eye medicine), 211–212, 232, 241
 diversification of, 234, 280, 345
 grain market, 177, 179
 investment decisions, 97–98, 99–100
 lists of, 95–99, 228–229, 231
 origins and destinations of, 2–4, 207
qafār (eye medicine), 211–212, 232, 241
 Shāmī bulk products, 237
 spice trade, 18–19, 96, 98, 99, 230
See also flax trade; luxury commerce; manufacturing; pricing; strategic commodities
- content analysis, 63–64, 75–76, 77–91
- courts
 evidence from state records, 169
 fairness of Jewish legal authorities, 162–163
 legal action mentioned in letters, 89
 public nature of Jewish courts, 159–161
 qadī (Muslim chief judge), 51, 142–143, 162–163, 164, 166–167, 174, 182, 244, 321
 use of Jewish and Islamic courts, 153, 155–157, 162–163, 164, 355
- See also* Islamic legal system; legal institutions; witness testimony
- credit
 access to local credit networks, 115, 351, 358
 and debt collection, 114–115, 284, 293, 315–316
 discussed in letters, 82, 114
suftaja (letter of credit), 67, 157, 161–162
 terms of, 114–115
- customs duties
 bypassing of, 2, 180, 239–240
 imposed on foreigners, 143, 169, 171–172, 351, 353
 lack of central control over, 165, 172
 negotiation of preferential rates, 171–172
 state inspectors, 168–169, 172–173
See also institutional authority
- Damascus, 191–192, 217–220, 226–227, 228, 233–234
- Dā'ūd b. 'Ezrun, 43, 256, 278
- economic development
 and the centrality of institutional structure, 13, 18
 Islamic world as static mirror of changing Europe, 13–14
 Weber's analyses of law and bureaucracy, 13
See also long-distance commodity movements
- economic geography
 disjunction with regions of political control, 216–217
 and institutional economics, 17–19, 183–184
 inter-regional Mediterranean trade, 98, 107
 and market organization, 11–12, 243–244
 trade to the east vs. trade to the west, 230–231
 trade with Africa and non-Mediterranean Europe, 25, 99, 307–308
 trade with Asia, 99, 218–220, 225, 230, 332, 341
 twelfth-century repatterning of commercial activity, 97, 305, 335–336
See also families and family connections; Mediterranean unity; religious geography; travel patterns

418 Index

- economic history
Eurocentric views of Islamic economy, 13–14, 19, 20–21, 76
re-evaluated through study of the Geniza records, 337, 357–358
- education
religious education, 33
and social mobility, 47–48
yeshivas, 35–36, 44, 310
business. See junior associate system
- Efrayim b. Isma‘il al-Jawharī, 187–189
- emporia, 106, 215, 227–228
distinguished from local markets, 213–214, 225
effect of transportation choice on development of, 214
See also market structure; metropolises
- families and family connections
disjunction with economic geography, 25–26, 40–41, 44–45, 308–309, 310–311, 355
general traits of, 50
and the junior associate system, 135
and local market advantages, 45, 311–313, 317
See also economic geography; Tāhīrtī clan; Tustarī clan
- Faraḥ b. Isma‘il al-Qābisī, 93–95, 102, 145–146, 269–275, 277–289
- Fatimid empire
civil law under, 151
and migration and settlement patterns, 40, 42, 43, 45
religious persecution under al-Ḥākim, 6, 176
scholarly study of, 15–16
- flax trade
and the economic organization of merchants, 102, 104–105, 237, 282–285
flax fields owned by Jews, 54
flax processing activities of merchants, 99–104, 276–278, 286–287, 328, 353
importance of, 20, 21, 56–57, 276–278, 289–290
See also commodities; manufacturing; textiles
- foreigners
defined in terms of personal relationships, 172
flax sold to, 280–281
Jewish traders characterized as, 292
and residential registration, 40
taxing of, 143, 169, 171–172, 351, 353
Friedberg Genizah Project, 10, 367
funduq, 2, 24, 157, 169
Fustat
as a base for Geniza merchants, 39, 288–289, 290
Ben Ezra synagogue, 6–7, 10
centrality of, 9, 200–201, 227, 257–259
control of extra-regional supplies, 224
introduced, xvi, 215
post-Fatimid-conquest migrations, 43, 45
- gaonic responsa, 47, 64, 69, 151, 178, 308–309
- geniza*
as an anti-archive, 8–9
distinguishing features of Ben Ezra synagogue’s, 6–7
- Geniza documents
dispersion of, 7–8, 9
documents not deposited in, 10, 16
and the emergence of the Commercial Revolution, 337, 358–359
general representativeness of, 9–11; asserted by Goitein, 27–28; and Jewish identity as feature of, 24–25, 28; and the study of Islamic business practice, 26–27
language of, xx, 7, 10
materials available to scholars, 10
- Geniza merchants
compared to maritime merchants of the Italian city-states, 37, 54–55, 97, 109–110, 116–117, 174–175, 357
compared with “Jewish merchants” of the early modern world, 37
compared with Muslim merchants, 26, 27, 357
economic areas not participated in by, 26
family origins, 41–42
See also aṣḥābunā; Ibn ‘Awkal group; Nahray group; Tāhīrtī clan
- geography of information, 187–210
communication infrastructure and the boundaries of trade, 193–195, 196
distribution of letters, 204–206
and the independent itineraries of information, commodities, and people, 189
limitations of sources of information, 206–209
the zone of reliable information as a limit on trade, 199
See also letters; postal systems

- Goitein, S. D., 15, 19–20, 27–28, 36–37, 41
A Mediterranean Society, 14, 22, 45
- Greif, Avner, 12–14, 41, 116, 129, 148–149, 155–156, 357
- Ḥayyim b. ‘Ammār, 1–4, 90, 180, 259
See also wakīl al-tujjār
- Horde, Peregrine, 23–24, 343–344
- Ibn al-Thumna, 94–95
- Ibn ‘Awkal group, 38–39
 challenges identifying members of, 208
 geography of settlement of, 39, 43
 trade activity, 308–309, 310–311
 travel patterns of, 256, 314–315
See also Geniza merchants; Nahray group; Yūsuf b. Ya‘qūb Ibn ‘Awkal
- Ibrāhīm b. al-Talmīd, 238, 243, 329
- Ibrāhīm b. Barūk, 315
- Ibrāhīm b. Farāḥ al-Iskandarī, 176, 191, 269, 277–278, 289
- identity
 as a situational construct, 45
 collective identity, 55, 293–295, 305–306
 professional identity, 24, 38, 91–92, 139–140, 350
See also aṣḥābunā (colleagues); Jewish identity; reputation
- Ifriqiyya, xvi, 41–43
- infrastructure
 commodity movement affected by limits of, 227
 the flexible nature of flax processing, 102–103, 115–116 limits affecting investment choices, 102, 106; lack of control over transportation, 107, 110–111, 112–113, 180–181
 port organization, 109
 required for long-distance trading business, 122–123, 183–184
 strengths taken for granted by merchants, 90, 105–106, 239
See also postal system
- institutional authority
 informality as a feature of Islamic governance, 13, 14–15, 16
 and the trading community, 3, 174, 177–178
See also customs duties; political power; reputation
- institutional economics, 17–20, 148, 277–278
- intra-regional marketing
 compared to inter-regional trade, 26, 107
 in vertically integrated systems, 242, 256–257
See also market structure; travel patterns
- investment choices
 benefit of the core business community, 49
 capital investments of the middling sort, 48–49
 economic areas not participated in by, 26, 97–98, 107, 179
 infrastructure limits as a factor, 102
 limitations of the Geniza material in the study of, 26, 75
 and liquidity, 118, 278–279, 283, 284–285, 289
 and religious persecution, 53, 177, 179
 time as a factor, 99–100, 105, 121, 285
- Islamic community. See social position (in the Islamic community)
- Islamic legal system
 and the formation of business relationships, 150, 177–178, 355
shirka contracts, 124–125, 156
See also courts; legal institutions
- Islamic states
 effect of organization of administration and power of: on business choices, 3, 174, 177–178, 179; on risk management, 174–177, 179
 lack of military protection of shipping, 174–175, 351, 359
 offices of, 164, 166–167
 reach of, 164–165, 166
 revenue collection, 165–166
 state authority in, 15
 state information supplies, 168–169
 urban safety, 167–168, 351
See also political power
- Isma‘īl b. Farāḥ al-Qābisī, 80–81
- Isma‘īl b. Hārūn, 2, 180, 181
- Isma‘īl b. Yūsuf, 79
- Isma‘īl b. Yūsuf Ibn Abī ‘Uqba, 82, 136
- Israel b. Natan, 43, 211–212, 232, 238, 240, 246, 306–307
- Italian city-states
 institutional development of, 358, 359–360
 institutionalized trust as a feature of, 357–358
 state control of violence as a key advantage, 358–359
- jāh* (standing or prestige), 146, 149, 173–176, 179, 182, 249, 292–293, 311, 330–331, 352–353, 355
See also reputation; social position
- Jerusalem, 212, 220, 235–236

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-00547-1 - Trade and Institutions in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Geniza Merchants and their Business World

Jessica L. Goldberg

Index

More information

420 Index

- Jewish communal leadership
and Fatimid court politics, 16
Geniza merchants as legal experts, 161–162
- Jewish community
multivalent nature of, 45, 46–47
place of migrants and natives within, 40
- Jewish identity
economic importance of, 28–29, 355
ethnic/religious ties to occupations, 52
as insufficient to unite groups of
merchants, 178, 295, 312, 313
limitations imposed by, 29, 53–55, 176–177, 179
of medieval Jews under Islam, 50–55
questions concerning Arab identity of Geniza merchants, 12
in relation to Muslim merchants, 140
See also identity; Maghribīs
- junior associate system, 134–138
employment of men from less moneyed
families, 137–138
juniors distinguished from full associates, 136, 143, 177
paternal uncles as mentors, 50, 89
See also agents and agency
- Khalafūn b. Nethanel, 305, 323
Khalfa b. Ishāq, 33
Khallūf b. Mūsā
business relationship with Yeshū‘ā b.
Isma‘īl al-Makhmūrī, 120–122, 130, 146
suit against Yeshū‘ā, 122, 145, 151–152, 158–159, 285
- labeling
of bales and bundles, 111, 184
mislabelled goods, 182, 354
varied practices of, 181–182
See also letters; transportation
- Labrat b. Mūsā Ibn Sighmār, 261, 278, 320
- legal institutions
business community reliance on, 144, 150, 164, 177–178
and informality, 14–15, 17, 130, 154–156
Islamic legal system, 15
Jewish and Islamic law: compared, 125,
150, 152–153; conformance to both,
124, 156–157, 159, 178
letters as evidence, 63, 157
letters distinguished from legal records, 68, 69, 157–159
- limits of, 145
local law customs, 153, 160
property rights, 134, 150, 151–152
See also agents and agency; courts
- letters
as a substitute for speech, 64
as instrumental ephemera, 57, 63, 64, 65, 67, 68–69, 70, 92
management of business relationships, 65–67, 74, 90–91, 145; behavior of
other merchants, 67, 78–84, 145–147; as a limitation on acting
through agency, 196; business
advice in, 88–89, 103, 198–199;
letters as symbols of association,
86–87; and risks uncertainty, 180,
187–188, 193, 209–210
norms governing writing of, 63, 70–71, 206–207; economic data, 92;
freedom of expression,
83–84; functional disorder of, 73,
90–91
personal matters mentioned in, 72, 83, 222
the professional culture of letter writing, 63, 70–71, 73
structure of: iftitāh (protocol), 72–73, 77, 90–91; matn (substance) 77; and
paper size, 73
use of space on, 73
See also commercial corpus; geography of
information; postal systems;
typological sample; witness
testimony
- local business community
and the maintenance of market order, 170, 351
and networking, 55, 168–169, 292, 317–318, 350–353, 355–357
and regional merchant networks, 4, 238–239, 243
See also business relationships
- local markets
importance of established connections
in, 275–276, 317–318
in the Nahray period, 329–330
role of southern Shām as, 224–225
tradeoffs with long-distance trade, 287–288
- long-distance commodity movements
and the bypassing of customs inspections, 240
caravans: decline of, 303–304, 329;
features of, 108, 218–220; Hajj
caravans, 223, 244–245

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-00547-1 - Trade and Institutions in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Geniza Merchants and their Business World

Jessica L. Goldberg

Index

More information

Index

421

- Jewish control of, 24–25, 97
 role of merchants, 11–12, 132, 243, 338, 344
 and Sabbath holiday restrictions, 54
 seasonal shipping patterns, 109–110, 254, 257
See also economic geography; transportation; travel patterns
- luxury commerce, 235–236
 gold trade, 18–19, 99, 348
 and metropolitan centers, 232–234, 239, 340
 and primary-product exporting, 278–279, 283–285, 289
 relative importance of, 19–20, 21, 95, 233–234, 278–279
 scholarly studies of, 18–19, 279
See also commodities; transit trade
- Maghrib
 associated with disaster, 93, 291–292, 323
 defined as a place, xvi, 206–207, 318
 Maghribis as a term to identify Geniza merchants, 12–13, 41, 44–45, 148, 291–292, 294
See also Jewish identity
- Maimonides, Moses, 49, 124, 157
- al-Majjānī clan, 160–161, 163
 merchants: Ishāq b. ‘Alī al-Majjānī, 146; Mūsā al-Majjānī, 188
- manufacturing, 347
 bulk commodities and transit goods compared with, 277–278
 dispersal of, 236, 246
 Nahray group involvement with, 286, 333
 raw material supply, 231, 235, 236, 339
See also commodities; flax trade; textiles
- Maqrīzī, A. i. A., 310
- Mardūk b. Mūsā, 173, 208–209, 211–212
- market reports
 market talk, 27, 79–80, 84–85, 91, 118, 198
 outside the zone of reliable information, 198
 planning, 69–70, 198–199, 284–285
 state information supplies of, 168–169
- market structure, 115–116, 340, 348, 352–353
 exemplified in paper trading, 226–227
 horizontally organized markets, 242, 326
 and the packing and routing of bundles, 239–240
 regional organization of, 212–213, 225, 241, 289
- role of political power and instability on, 244, 291–292, 324–328, 333–334
 shifting strategies of, 260–261, 286–287, 329–330
 vertical integration: patterns of connections in, 242, 286–288, 290; of southern Shām and Fustat, 214–215, 229, 232, 241, 242–244, 253; textile manufacturing absence of, 104–105, 283; top-heavy character of the Islamic Mediterranean, 245
See also emporia; metropolises
- Maṣliḥ b. Eliah (dayyan of Palermo), xvi, 1, 180, 181
- Maymūn b. Khalfa, 136, 146
- Mazara, Sicily, 3, 39
See also Ṣiqilliyya (Sicily)
- Mediterranean trade
 with al-Shām, 225–227
 limited transit between Sicily and Tyre, 227
- Mediterranean unity, 337–350
 cultural unity and patterns of consumption, 23, 341–343, 345
 merchants’ perspective on, 22
 theories of economy tied to, 22–24, 343–344
See also economic geography
- merchant services. See commercial services
- metropolises, 214
 consumer goods sold in, 232–235, 239, 340, 348
 features of, 214–215, 245, 319–321
 metropolis-dwellers, 246
See also emporia; market structure; social history
- military and naval operations
 as a topic of Geniza correspondence, 11
 military protection of shipping, 116, 174–175, 187, 359
- monetary value, xxi, 27
- (Abū ‘Imrān) Mūsā b. Abī ‘l-Hayy Khalīla 247–253, 278
 letters by, 133, 183, 197
 position in the Jewish community of, 248–249
 travel and home base of, 249–253, 257–259, 288–289, 290
See also Alexandria; Geniza merchants
- Mūsā b. Ishāq b. Ḥisḍā
 complaints of, 78–80, 81, 135, 137, 287
 Muslim partners of, 178

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-00547-1 - Trade and Institutions in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Geniza Merchants and their Business World

Jessica L. Goldberg

Index

More information

422 Index

- Mūsā b. Ya'qūb al-Miṣrī, 86, 221, 226, 267–268, 312
See also Geniza merchants
- Muslim merchants
 compared with Geniza merchants, 26, 27, 116, 179, 357
 partnerships with Geniza merchants, 150, 178, 355
- (Abū Yaḥyā) Nahray b. Nissīm
 and 'Ayyāsh b. Ṣadaqa, 56–57, 127, 136
 biographical profile and family
 connections of, 33–36, 311–313
 flax trade activities of, 56–57, 290
 Fustat as a base for, 288–289, 290, 294
 junior associate in the care of, 135
 letters of, 89, 101, 103, 114–115, 131–132, 146, 190, 281; general features, 8, 9, 35, 36–37
 mentorship with Khalifa b. Iṣḥāq, 33
 range of business associations established by, 142
ṣuḥba relationship with Abūn b. Ṣadaqa, 128
ṣuḥba relationship with Yeshū'ā b. Isma'īl al-Makhmūrī, 130–131, 195 transaction data for, 278
 varied labeling practices of, 181
 Yūsuf Ibn 'Awkal compared with, 45–46
See also Geniza merchants
- Nahray group, 38–39
 challenges identifying members of, 208
 compared with Ibn 'Awkal group, 12, 205–206, 256–257, 259–261, 286–287, 299–336 family connections important to trade, 213, 294–295, 311–313
 geography of settlement of, 39, 43
 trade activity/travel patterns, 212–213, 229, 237, 260–261, 286, 329–330
See also Geniza merchants; Ibn 'Awkal group
- names
 and ambiguity, 208–209
 group membership indicated by, 39, 208
 Muslim naming patterns, xv–xvi, 50–51
nasab (patronymic), xv, 42
nisba (descriptive label): xv; family origins reflected in, 41–42; geographic regions associated with, xi, 42; patterns of exchange evidenced by, 348; social status reflected in, 47, 50–51, 350
 of regions, xvi, 207; as an indicator of unity, xvi, 215–216, 267; language of place and movement, 206
- Natan b. Avraham, 47, 308–309
See also Geniza merchants
- Nissīm b. Khalafūn, regional travel pattern of, 269, 276, 277–278, 288–289, 290, 329
- occupation (shughl, business)
 in business correspondence, 71–72, 85–86, 88
 and khidma (service), 130
- olive trade
 economic geography of, 98
 olive oil dealings of Ibrahīm b. al-Talmīd, 238, 243
 pre-harvest payment of olive producers, 284, 296–297
 price quotes for Shāmī oil and soap, 237
 relative importance of, 276–277
- paper
 re-use of, 9, 69
 trade in, 96, 226–227
 used for letter writing, 73
- partnerships
 acceptable to both Jewish and Islamic law, 124, 156–157, 178
 business losses shared in, 93–95
 ending of: and the death of a partner, 126; Khallūf's suit against Yeshū'ā, 121, 151–152
 function of letters in, 70
 Jewish and Muslim law compared, 152–153
shirka contracts, 124–125, 156
See also agents and agency; qirād (venture partnership); ṣuḥba (reciprocal agency)
- pirates, 53, 88, 118, 174–175, 324–325, 359, 360
- Pirenne, Henri
 on Jews as cosmopolitan brokers between Europe and Islam, 24–25
 Mediterranean unity defined by, 22, 23
- political power
 disjunction with economic geography in al-Shām, 217
 exclusion of Jews from local civic leadership, 51–52, 54
 and freedom of movement, 40, 54–55, 346
 government authority: and business choices, 3, 16, 174, 177–178, 179, 180; and state economic interests, 351

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-00547-1 - Trade and Institutions in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Geniza Merchants and their Business World

Jessica L. Goldberg

Index

More information

Index

423

- and limitations on Geniza merchants, 98, 177
- and market structure, 244, 291–292, 324–328
- registration (residential), 40
- sequestration, 169–170, 171, 182, 291, 351, 354; and the discretion of Muslim qadi, 162
- state inspectors, 168–169, 172–173, 239
- See also* institutional authority; Islamic state
- poll-tax
 - harassment by collectors of, 53, 175
 - residential status and payment of, 40
- postal systems, 189–199
 - and the boundaries of trade, 193–195, 196, 304
 - fayj* (courier), 190–191, 192
 - kutubī* (postal service), 191
 - letter-addressing practices, 191–192, 199–200
 - letter delivery by individual travelers, 192, 193, 319
 - limitations of, 192, 193, 199
 - speed/reliability of, 93, 189–190, 192, 193–195
 - See also* infrastructure; letters
- pricing
 - emphasis on exporting reflected in, 282
 - fixed pricing of goods by Rūm, 334–335
 - limitations concerning the study of, 75
 - in market reports of associates, 188, 197
 - official price information, 168–170
 - and patronage, 171
 - and price volatility, 118–119
 - See also* commodities
- Princeton Geniza Project, 10, 367
- privacy of letters, 48–49, 64–65, 70, 72, 83–84, 91–92
- Purcell, Nicholas, 23–24, 343–344
- purchase and payment, 77
 - of agricultural products, 102, 283–285, 289, 291–292, 296–297, 338–339, 355–356; liquidity of staples/bulk commodities, 118, 284–285; local products sent as, 237, 282
 - compensation of agents, 144–145, 148, 154
 - silk used as, 207
 - See also* credit; ṣuḥba (reciprocal agency)
- Qāsim (local broker), 67, 74, 81–82, 86, 138
- Qayrawān, 41–45, 223, 244–245, 326
 - nagid* (head of Jewish community) of, 44, 163
- qirād* (venture partnership)
 - ‘eseq* (Jewish)/qirād (Islamic) defined, 125
 - fiscal liability in, 125, 152, 153
 - investment by family members in, 48, 49
 - and Jewish courts, 157, 161–162
 - See also* partnerships
- Qur’ān, 125
- reciprocity. See ṣuḥba (reciprocal agency)
- regional economic systems
 - centrality to Geniza business plans and identity, 292–293
 - role of merchants, 11–12, 243
 - See also* transit trade
- religious affiliation. See Jewish identity
- religious conversion of Jews to Islam, 52, 177
- religious geography
 - disjunction with economic activity, 25–26, 222–223, 244–245
 - and the Palestinian Academy, 43–44, 216
 - See also* economic geography
- reputation, 12–13, 80–82, 145, 180, 354
- separation of professional and personal reputation, 48–49, 83–84
- See also* business relationships; identity; institutional authority; jāh; social position; ṣuḥba
- risk (infrastructural)
 - management of, 110, 115–119, 180, 193–195, 299, 324
- political instability, 94–95, 117–118, 297–299, 324–325, 333–334
- See also* infrastructure; pirates; transportation
- risk (institutional)
 - lack of military protection of shipping, 174–175, 187, 351, 359
 - risk management, 115–119, 174–177, 180–181, 187–188, 190, 209–210; letter writing,
- the Rūm (Italians or Byzantines)
 - Egyptian trade, 333–336
 - fixed pricing of goods by, 334–335
- Rūm (“Romans”), 306
 - disconnection of, 307–308
 - exclusion of Geniza merchants from credit networks of, 358
- Salāma b. Mūsā al-Ṣafāqīsī, 178, 284, 296–300
 - discussed: ginger trade in Palermo, 307, 335; migration of, 43, 330–332; Muslim partners of, 173–174, 178, 295, 331; regional travel, 267–269, 275; transaction data for, 277–278

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-00547-1 - Trade and Institutions in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Geniza Merchants and their Business World

Jessica L. Goldberg

Index

More information

424 Index

- Salāma b. Mūsā al-Şafāqīsī (cont.)
 letters of, 67, 284, 296–299
- Salāma b. Nissīm al-Barqī, 147, 267, 269–275
- Samḥūn b. Dāʿūd b. al-Şiqillī, 80, 174, 314
- scholarly status and prestige
 in Islamic society, 51
 in the Jewish community, 47–48
- scholarship
 on the commercial papers of the Geniza, 9–11
- Eurocentrism of study of Geniza merchants, 12, 19–20, 76
- late nineteenth-century tourism to Cairo and, 7
- limitations of, 5, 21
- selling
 credit terms of, 114–115
 timing of, 113
 wholesale vs. retail, 113–114, 279–280, 283, 285
- al-Shām (greater Syria), xvi, 207, 212–213, 215–243
- Fustat as the commercial center of southern Shām, 215, 228, 242–244, 322
- southern Shām as a local market, 224–225
- southern Shām manufacturing, 231, 235–236
- ship-owners, 107–108, 110
- shipping reports
 information on movements of people in, 208, 304
 as market indicators, 27, 198–199
See also market reports
- Şiqilliyya (Sicily), xvi, 41–43, 319–322, 324–328
See also Mazara
- slaves
 employment of, 123–124, 135, 138, 143, 177
 and legal liability, 154
 political risks of dealing in, 98, 177
 trade in, 97–98
- social history
 Cairo Geniza documents as source of, 24, 27–29, 36, 37, 245–246, 361
 geography of practice, 4, 201–204
 Islamic cities: exclusion of Jews from local civic leadership in, 51–52; Jews as a religious minority within, 53, 54, 179; segregation in, 52; urban safety, 167–168, 351
 prosopographic analyses, 36–37, 41, 46–47
- social mobility and education, 47–48
See also metropolises
- social position (in the Islamic community) and religious identity, 52
 scholarly prestige, 51
- social position (in the Jewish community)
 beggars (ṣaʿālīk, petty local dealers), 46, 102, 351
 and communal activity, 47, 48–49, 83
 and courtiership, 47, 176
 distinctions between, 46
 and family prestige, 47, 48, 49–50, 294–295
 of Jewish religious patricians, 46 “middling sort,” 45, 48–49, 51
 social mobility and wealth, 47, 48, 50
 and status in the business community, 45–47, 48, 140, 311
See also jāh; reputation
- sources. See Cairo Geniza, commercial corpus, letters, typological sample
- Sourdrel, D., 26
- Stillman, N. A., 20, 277
- strategic commodities, 98, 116, 177
See also commodities
- ṣuḥba* (reciprocal agency), 86–87, 123–124, 127–134, 141, 142, 144–147, 150, 154–156, 174
- compensation challenges, 144–145
 preference for over other arrangements, 143
See also agents and agency; aṣḥābunā (colleagues); business relationships; partnerships; reputation
- synagogues, 6–7, 10, 35–36, 43
- Tāhirtī clan, 269, 276, 278–279, 294, 309, 314
- merchants: Barhūn b. Işhāq al-Tāhirtī, 34, 40, 250, 303–304; Barhūn b. Mūsā al-Tāhirtī, 34, 83, 137, 195, 250; Barhūn b. Sāliḥ al-Tāhirtī, 34, 65, 114–115, 231, 256; Ismaʿīl b. Barhūn al-Tāhirtī, 190, 256, 262, 314; Yūsuf b. Mūsā al-Tāhirtī, 254, 283, 284–285, 318
See also families and family connections; Geniza merchants
- Tammām, 121, 135, 151–152, 157, 158–159
- Taylor–Schechter Collection, 5–6, 7–8, 366
- textiles
 textile manufacturing, 101, 235–236, 329, 347
 trade in, 21, 96, 98, 207, 227, 276–277, 343, 345–347

- tustarī*, 225, 339
See also flax trade; manufacturing
- transaction costs, 144, 156, 286–287
 and the study of institutional economics, 17–20, 277–278
- transit trade
 bulk commodities trade compared with, 277–278, 287–288
 emporia distinguished from local
 markets, 225
 Eurocentric views of the Islamic economy and, 19–20, 21
 exotic luxuries as a focus of, 18–19
 Fustat's control of extra-regional supplies, 224
 intra-Mediterranean trade compared with, 23
 role of Aleppo in, 227–228
 Tāhirtī clan involvement in, 279
See also luxury commerce; regional economic systems
- transportation
 lack of control over, 107, 110–111, 112–113, 180
 and market structure, 239–240
 military protection of shipping, 174–175, 187, 351, 358–359
 movement of wares/commodity as a dominant topic, 106–107
 private commercial economy of,
 97, 107
 shipping: bulk packaging, 180, 239–240;
 jettisoning of cargo, 108, 110, 117,
 352; tracking goods in transit,
 110–111
 and travel patterns, 214, 252–253
 unpacking and distribution, 112, 113
See also long-distance commodity
 movements; risk (infrastructural)
- travel patterns, 208–209, 261–276
 exemplified by Mūsā's activities, 249–252
 local travel to metropolises/ports and the
rīf, 260, 261, 267–275, 287–288;
 during different generations
 compared, 260–261, 307–308, 328–330
 long-distant/inter-regional travel:
 features of, 253–254, 261, 262–267,
 279–280; during different
 generations compared, 256–257, 300–305; seasonal shipping
 patterns, 109–110, 254, 257, 304;
 by Salāma b. Mūsā al-Ṣafāqīsī, 267–269, 275
 regional/intra-regional travel, 257–260, 267–269, 278; during different
 generations compared, 259–260;
 and the vertical organization of
 the market around Fustat,
 256–260
See also economic geography; long-
 distance commodity movements;
 (Abū 'Imrān) Mūsā b. Abī 'l-Ḥayy
 Khalīla
- trust
 abuse of, 145, 196, 210
 and calculated institutional risk, 180–181, 183–184
 and information exchange, 198, 203–204, 210
 and the legal system, 14–15, 143, 169, 177–178, 182–183, 354, 357
 of non-associates, 108, 141–142, 149–150
See also agents and agency; business
 relationships; reputation
- Tustarī clan, 46, 176, 177, 279, 309
 Abū Naṣr al-Faḍl b. Sahl al-Tustarī, 33
See also families and family connections
- typological sample of letters, 56–63, 72, 199–200, 276
 letters distinguished from legal instruments, 68
 reference to busyness or hurry in, 71
 use of space, 75–76, 77; behavior of merchants discussed, 78, 145; for non-mercantile affairs, 72, 87–88;
 for travel tales, 88
See also commercial corpus; letters
- Tyre, 218, 220, 225
- Udovitch, Abraham L., 14–15, 27, 141, 203
- wakīl al-tujjār*, 65, 111–112, 113–114,
 138–139, 168, 191
See also agents and agency;
 commercial services; Ḥayyim b.
 'Ammār
- weights and measures/bulk packaging, xix, 27, 99, 101, 111, 283
- witness testimony
 and agency contracts, 151, 157
 in the Jewish court system, 69, 160
 letters as creators of, 157–158
 market order maintained by, 170
 required to end a ṣuḥba, 129
See also letters
- women, 33, 34, 49, 50, 246, 269
 prostitution/adultery, 53, 176, 329

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-00547-1 - Trade and Institutions in the Medieval Mediterranean: The Geniza Merchants and their Business World

Jessica L. Goldberg

Index

More information

426 Index

Yahūda b. Yūsuf, 145, 190

Ya‘qūb b. Salmān al-Ḥarīrī, 88, 107–108, 192

Ya‘qūb b. Yūsuf al-Iṭrābulusī, 114, 224, 239

Yeshū‘ā b. Isma‘īl al-Makhmūrī, 91,
120–122, 130–131, 147, 278,
334–335Yūsuf b. ‘Alī al-Kohen al-Fāsī, 174,
277–278, 321

Yūsuf b. Faraḥ al-Qābisī, 93–95

Yūsuf b. Ya‘qūb Ibn ‘Awkal, 20, 36–37,
45–46, 277, 310

Zikrī b. Hanan’el, 66