Contents

- List of figures
  page ix
- List of maps
  xiv
- List of tables
  xv
- Foreword
  xvii
- Preface
  xxii
- Acknowledgments
  xxv
- Chronology of early China
  xxvi

Introduction
1

Part One
Astronomy and cosmology in the time of dragons
1
1. Astronomy begins at Taosi
2. Watching for dragons

Part Two
Aligning with Heaven
3
3. Looking to the Supernal Lord
4. Bringing Heaven down to Earth
5. Astral revelation and the origins of writing

Part Three
Planetary omens and cosmic ideology
6
6. The cosmo-political mandate
7. The rhetoric of the supernal
8. Cosmology and the calendar

© in this web service Cambridge University Press
www.cambridge.org
Part Four  Warring States and Han astral portentology

9   Astral prognostication and the Battle of Chengpu 261
10  A new astrological paradigm 299

Part Five  One with the sky

11  Cosmic capitals 317
12  Temporality and the fabric of space–time 351
13  The Sky River and cosmography 383
14  Planetary portentology East and West 404

Epilogue 442

Appendix: Astrology for an empire: the “Treatise on the Celestial Offices” in The Grand Scribe’s Records (c.100 BCE) 444

Glossary 512

References 529

Index 570