Contents

List of figures  x
List of tables  xiii

1  Academic writing: Challenging the stereotypes  1
   1.1  Academese: Obtuse or informational?  1
   1.2  Describing the grammar of academic writing
      1.2.1  Academic written texts: All basically the same?  5
      1.2.2  Academic writing: Complex grammar and explicit meanings?  7
      1.2.3  Academic writing: Resistant to change or dynamic?  14
   1.3  Grammatical change in English: Below the radar?  19
   1.4  Two types of grammatical change  27
   1.5  The locus of historical change in English: Speech or writing?  30
   1.6  Overview of the present book  32

2  Using corpora to analyze grammatical change  43
   2.1  Introduction  43
   2.2  Situational change within academic research writing  50
   2.3  Corpora analyzed in the book  51
      2.3.1  Representing academic writing over time: Description of the diachronic academic corpora  52
      2.3.2  Synchronic and diachronic comparisons between academic writing and other spoken and written registers  57
   2.4  Corpus analysis procedures  58
   2.5  Grammatical features investigated  59
      2.5.1  ‘Core’ grammatical features and ‘colloquial’ features  60
      2.5.2  Phrasal and clausal complexity features  60
      2.5.3  Corpus analyses of grammatical complexity features  65

3  Phrasal versus clausal discourse styles: A synchronic grammatical description of academic writing contrasted with other registers  67
   3.1  Introduction  67
   3.2  Previous linguistic research on academic writing  72
Contents

3.2.1 Studies of particular grammatical features in academic writing 74
3.2.2 A comprehensive survey of the distinctive grammatical features of academic writing: Contributions from The Longman Grammar of Spoken and Written English 76
3.2.3 Studies of register variation that include academic writing 83
3.3 Case studies illustrating the distinctive grammatical characteristics of academic research writing 87
3.3.1 Academic writing contrasted with conversation: Which is more grammatically complex? 87
3.3.2 University textbooks contrasted with university classroom teaching: Is there a general academic style? 100
3.3.3 Grammatical features of academic writing contrasted with popular written registers 104
3.3.4 Grammatical variation among written sub-registers from different academic disciplines 111
3.4 Chapter summary 123

4 The historical evolution of phrasal discourse styles in academic writing 125
4.1 Grammatical complexity in eighteenth century written texts 125
4.1.1 The influence of popularization versus economy in historical change 128
4.1.2 Previous historical research on the noun phrase in English 130
4.2 General patterns of change in written English registers 132
4.2.1 Increasing use of colloquial features 136
4.2.2 Historical change in the use of complexity features 140
4.2.3 Exploring the magnitude of change: The evolution of a phrasal discourse style 145
4.3 What features have decreased in use in academic prose? 154
4.4 Historical change across sub-registers within academic research writing 157
4.5 Chapter summary 166

5 The functional extension of phrasal grammatical features in academic writing 167
5.1 Introduction 167
5.2 Phrasal features functioning as pre-modifiers of a head noun 170
5.2.1 Nouns as nominal pre-modifiers 170
5.2.2 Attributive adjectives as nominal pre-modifiers 184
5.2.3 Noun–participle compounds as nominal pre-modifiers 187
5.3 Phrasal features functioning as post-modifiers of a head noun 190
5.3.1 Prepositional phrases as nominal post-modifiers 190
5.3.2 Appositive noun phrases as nominal post-modifiers 202
5.4 The systemic ‘drift’ towards structural compression, motivated by economy of expression 207
Table of Contents

6 The loss of explicitness in academic research writing
   6.1 Stereotypes concerning explicitness in academic research writing
   6.2 Explicitness of reference in conversation versus academic writing
   6.3 Inexplicit meaning relationships associated with phrasal pre-modifiers in noun phrases
   6.4 Inexplicit meaning relationships associated with phrasal post-modifiers in noun phrases
   6.5 Inexplicit expression associated with compressed clausal connectors in academic writing

7 Conclusion
   7.1 Stereotypes about grammatical complexity: What does it mean to be ‘complex’?
   7.2 Stereotypes about historical change: Does all grammatical change originate in speech?
   7.3 Stereotypes about academic writing: Is it resistant to change, elaborated, and explicit?
   7.4 Implications for applied linguists: From language development to language teaching and assessment
   7.5 Conclusion

References

Appendix 1 Descriptive statistics for nine linguistic features for three general registers across historical periods

Appendix 2 Descriptive statistics for five linguistic features for sub-registers of academic writing across historical periods

Index