Recasting Anthropological Knowledge

Inspiration and Social Science

This collection of original essays provides an innovative and multifaceted reflection on the impact and inspiration of the scholarship of eminent anthropologist Marilyn Strathern. A distinguished team of international contributors, all former students of Strathern, reflect on the impact of their relationship with their teacher and address the wider conceptual contribution of her work through their own writings. The essays provide an accessible entry into Strathern's scholarship for those new to her work and a rich source of material which mobilises and deploys her concepts, including new ethnographic examples and discussion of contemporary political issues, for those more familiar with her scholarship. The result is a collection that dissects, contextualises and reroutes concepts of relationality, inspiration and knowledge in novel and unpredictable ways. Recasting Anthropological Knowledge will prove invaluable to all students of anthropology and will be of interest to scholars across the social sciences.

Jeanette Edwards is Professor of Social Anthropology at the University of Manchester.

Maja Petrović-Šteger is a Junior Research Fellow in Social Anthropology at Peterhouse, Cambridge.

DEBBORA BATTAGLIA is Professor of Anthropology at Mount Holyoke and Five College Anniversary Professor. She has published widely on personhood, selfhood, identities and alienness, and recently has turned to nature–culture exchanges in outer space as sites of ethnographic inquiry.

Eeva BERGLUND is an independent scholar and writer on urban anthropology, environmental thought and politics. Her history of Women's Design Service, Doing Things Differently, was published in 2007. She is on the editorial team of the Journal of the Finnish Anthropological Society.

MELISSA DEMIAN is Lecturer in Social Anthropology at the University of Kent. Drawing on her fieldwork in the Suau-speaking region of southeastern Papua New Guinea, she has published on the subjects of child adoption, the village court and land mediation systems, historical relationships with missionaries and the idea of 'culture loss'. She also writes and publishes on wider topics in legal anthropology such as the 'cultural defence' and the concept of community in legal discourse.

JEANETTE EDWARDS is Professor of Social Anthropology at Manchester University. She has published widely on kinship and assisted reproductive technologies and has a long-standing research interest in the anthropology of Britain and, in particular, on changing contours of class, community, indigeneity and expertise.

ANN KELLY is a lecturer in Anthropology at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, University of London. Her work explores the production of scientific facts in Africa, with special attention to the built environments, material artefacts and practical labours of experimentation. She has also published on malaria control interventions, considering how rural and urban spaces are configured to manage the flow of human, parasite and mosquito populations.

MAJA PETROVIĆ-ŠTEGER is Research Fellow in Social Anthropology at Peterhouse College, Cambridge. She explores various contexts where bodies – whether living, dead or in the form of medically usable remains – become the sites of economic, legal, political, scientific and artistic attention. Her publications are based on her fieldwork in Serbia, Tasmania and Switzerland.

AIVITA PUTNIŅA is Director and Senior Researcher at the Centre for Bioethics and Biosafety and a Lecturer in Anthropology at the University of Latvia in Riga. Her long-standing academic interests cover topics of sexuality, homophobia, biotechnologies and reproductive health policies.

ADAM REED is Senior Lecturer in Social Anthropology at the University of St Andrews. He conducted his original fieldwork in Papua New Guinea. That work focuses on issues around cultures of incarceration, including attention to colonial and postcolonial governmentality, the politics of vision, money and aesthetics of documents. More recently, he has conducted research in the UK, with a focus on popular theorisations of the city and urban knowledge, practices of fiction reading, memory, mind and literary subjectivities. He is the author of Papua New Guinea's Last Place: Experiences of Constraint in a Postcolonial Prison, and the forthcoming Literature and Agency in English Fiction Reading: A Study of The Henry Williamson Society.

ANNELISE RILES is the Jack G. Clarke Chair in Far East Legal Studies and Professor of Anthropology at Cornell University. Her work focuses on the transnational dimensions of legal theories, doctrines and institutions. She has conducted legal and anthropological research in China, Japan and the Pacific and has written extensively on cultural problems in the law. She is the author of The Network Inside Out,

Acknowledgements

This book is inspired by, and dedicated to, Dame Professor Marilyn Strathern. It is one of a number of ways in which her colleagues have attempted to express their gratitude and appreciation of her scholarship, intellectual generosity, kindness and integrity, as well as her unstinting support, over the years, of anthropology and anthropologists. It is, above all, a way of saying thank you. Earlier versions of four of the chapters (Petrović-Šteger, Putniņa, Reed and Yarrow) were first presented at a panel at the biannual conference of the European Association of Social Anthropologists in Ljubljana, 2008. The panel brought together anthropologists who had been supervised by Marilyn as doctoral students and was convened as a tribute to her in the year she ‘officially’ retired. The panel also included papers from Lissant Bolton, Tony Crook and James Leach, and the editors would like to thank them and the audience, as well as Samuelle Carlson, Terence Hay-Edie, Hélène Regius and Ilana Gershon, for their different contributions to the more dispersed and broader Festschrift. Jeanette Edwards would also like to acknowledge and thank Verena Stolcke and Christina Toren for early conversations about how best to mark Marilyn’s retirement. For her work on the final manuscript, we would like to thank Patricia Scalco; for his enthusiasm and impeccable professionalism, Richard Fisher at Cambridge University Press; for her help at the beginning and the end of this book, Fay Faunch at Girton College, Cambridge; and an anonymous reader for pertinent and perceptive comments on an earlier version of the collection. The people named here are just a few amongst many who would, we know, want us to add their thanks to those of the editors and authors of this collection to Marilyn Strathern as teacher and colleague par excellence.
