Index

Adam, H. Pearl, 34, 49, 103, 151, 158, 166, 168, 176 automobile as luxury, 11, 68–69, 75, 76 barricades
description of battle, 164 establishment of, 77, 78 heightened level of intra-class as well as inter-class conflict, 105 representing integration of working people into an undifferentiated mass culture, 179 treaty afterwards, 174

basics consumer goods
all classes bought, symbol of unity, 27 class conflict, 27
cross-class alliances over high cost, 27
"national" or "victory" commodities creation and purpose of, 72–74 dissatisfaction with, 73–74
policy of laissez-faire, 71 politicization of everyday commodities, 181, 190, 290 revolutionary movement, heart of, 182 shortages as basis for revolution, 76–77
see also clothing, food
Basilica of Sacré Coeur, 264
Bastille Day celebrations compared to May Day, 156–157, 172–174, 175–180
Boulogne-Billancourt suburban municipality, see working-class identity Bouvier, Jeanne, 61 bread
bakers’ wartime behavior as excessive, 29, 68 ban on specialty breads, 52–53, 56, 68, 72 creation of "national" commodity, 72–74 daily struggle, 27
ingredients restrictions, 72
"national" or "victory" loaf, 72, 73 price control, 51, 52
rationing, 71
restrictions as provoking revolution, 76 shortages and hoarding, 51 symbol of class conflict and lack of commitment to war effort, 53 symbol of diets and politics, 51 symbol of social and economic difference, 51 wartime Paris, in, 51–53
cell phones, 75
Clemençceau, Georges, 103, 146, 158, 160, 161, 164, 166, 238, 239, 244, 257, 264, 270, 271, 282 clothing
attitude toward, 33, 57
dressmakers’ strikes of 1917, 57, 58
elite consumerism, 58
French Revolution, 32
gender shaped views of food and clothing in contrasting ways, 35–36 increased elegance of lower class, 59–60 men and women distinguished, 35 Muslim women, 33
political history (link between politics, clothing, and the nation), 32–35 standardization of clothing and taste, 59 symbolized mass discontent, 58 uniform as social distinction, 35 uniforms worn by soldiers, 33
see also fashion/garment industry coal shortage, 66, 68, 219, 228 cotton, 66, 103, 158–160, 264
consumer movement
base of upsurge in tenant activism, 199 basic consumer goods at heart of, 182 central themes, 184
coal shortage, 66, 68, 219, 228
demobilizing the consumer economy, 190–193 331
consumer movement (cont.)
exoticism of colonies as consumer product, embracing, 188 food movement overview and legacy, 236 glocalization phenomenon, 187 historical analysis
  generally, 284–285, 290–291
colonial consumerism and the movements, 187–189 moral economy movements, 184–185 new social movements, 185–186 similarities between “moral economy” and “new social” movements, 186 state involvement, 190–193
transformations of working-class activism and life, 187 housing movement, overview and legacy, 235–236
importance of consumer struggles, 183
increased women’s consumer activism, 183–184 legacy of consumer movements
  generally, 236–237
food movement, overview and legacy, 236
housing movement, overview and legacy, 235–236 metalworkers’ strike of 1919, issues, 57, 282 middle class, issues resonating with, 184, 186, 222–223 overseas consumer politics, affinity with, 187–189 revolutionary sentiments, 182, 184, 190, 192, 237
state action focus, 187
state involvement with the national economy, 190–193
transformations of working-class activism and life, 187
see also food: riots in the marketplace consumerism
  generally, 2, 181, 284–285, 290–294
choice between time and money, 242 contrast with war (battlefield), 25–26 dressmakers’ strikes centering on income and consumption, 64 first consumer movement in wartime Paris, 30 grievances as shaping industrial action and revolutionary activism, 241 high cost of living dispute, 26 luxury goods, taxation of, 74–76 moral of Parisians by end of 1917, police keeping reports on, 67 “national” or “victory” commodities creation and purpose of, 72–74
dissatisfaction with, 73–74 politicalization of, 12, 13, 26, 190, 290, 295–294 principal themes of postwar unrest in Paris, 25 radicalization of consumer behavior, 27–28 relationship between consumerism and identity, 189 scope of, 2
shopkeepers profiteering wrongfully from the war effort, attacking, 32
shortages as basis for revolution, 76–77 state’s job to stop profiteering and enforce egalitarian modes of consumption, 70 store owners deemed enemies of the nation, attacking, 31–32 transformation of working-class identity, 26 war, concept of consumers’ war in wartime Paris, 77, 78 welfare state, creation of, 191, 193, 204
see also revolutionary movement customers’ war concept, 77, 78, 193 cost of living allowances
dressmakers’ strikes of 1917, 61, 65, 243
eight-hour day movement, effect on, 245, 247 high cost of living, 61, 65, 243
relationship between reformism and revolution, 247
Cottin, Emile, 103, 104, 158, 159, 160, 161 Cottin and Vilain verdicts contrasted, 158–159 demonstration after, 159–161
Crisis of civilian morale, 57
Cross, Gary, 122, 242, 292, 293
Croulebarbe quarter of Paris (thirteenth district), see working-class identity dairy products
daily consumption as the norm, 48
shortages, 28, 50
De Grazia, Victoria, 9, 292, 293
Downs, Laura Lee, 46, 57, 133
Drancy community, see working-class identity eight-hour day movement CGT wins concession of no wage cuts, 245 choice between time and money, generally, 242–243 commission established to draft law reducing workday length, 244 confusion over meaning of eight-hour day, 245 cost of living allowances, effect of, 245, 247 demand for reform and threat of world revolution, 244 enactment of eight-hour workday law, 245 historical perspective, 243–245
Parisian labor’s reaction to law, 247
relationship between reformism and revolution, 247 response to proposed law, 244 spike in strike activity after enactment of law, 246
see also metalworkers’ strike of 1919 ethnicity and foreign population, see working-class identity fashion/garment industry
generally, 57–65
conflicts about meaning of fashion mirrored by lives of seamstresses, 60 contrast between hard productive labor and elite consumerism, 58 dressmakers’ strikes of 1917 generally, 61–64 contrasted with other “women’s” strikes, 64 cost of living allowance, 61, 65, 243 description of demonstration, 61–65 effect of, 63–65
hours worked as trigger, 61, 243 other groups on strike at same time, 257 success of, 65
triggers, 61, 243
haute couture
rise of, 58, 59
standardization of clothing and taste, 59
reaction to war, 33–35 strike activity, generally, 57
Folie-Méricourt quarter of Paris (eleventh district), see working-class identity food
generally, 48, 66
bakers’ wartime inequality of sacrifice, 29, 68 besieged city, effect of, 49 central to the war effort, 51 class distinctions mirrored by, 49–50 collective purchases, 224–226 consumption shows class differences, 29 cooperative movement, 191, 216–227 marketplace riots, see below in the marketplace
meat shortages, 49, 50
men’s role, 50
morale of Parisians, police keeping reports on, 67
national commodities, creation of “national loaf,” 72, 74
normal price commissions, 232, 233–235
price ceilings, 213–214
price controls, rise of, 36, 49, 67, 72, 213
rationing, 67, 68, 71
revolutions sentiments, 48, 212, 231
 riots in the marketplace
marketplace riots, see below in the marketplace national government
see below in the marketplace
price ceilings, 213–214
price controls, rise of, 36, 49, 67, 72, 213
rationing, 67, 68, 71
revolutionary sentiments, 48, 212, 231
between consumers and merchants, 215–216
between consumers and shopkeepers, 217, 220
between shopkeepers and wholesale food merchants, 217, 218 between shopkeepers and others, 217 butter and egg sellers, 217
city of Paris’ response, 213
commencement of riots (the first riots), 215–216
comparing 1911 and 1919 riots, 230–232
Conféderation Générale du Travail, 230–232
free market, maintaining, 213–214, 233
fuel (coal) shortages riots, 219
gender of rioters, 216, 218
gender roles for controlling riots, 213
moral economy, 259
national government’s response, 213 reveal beliefs of workers at end of war, 218, 219, 220
similarities between eighteenth- and twentieth-centuries food riots, 218, 219
small shopkeepers, 217
taxation populaire practice, 219, 220, 224, 226
vigilance committees, rise of, 220–235

Index

333 grain, 214

high cost of living, 29–30, 60–61
hoarding, see below shortages and hoarding crisis increasing costs, 50–51, 57, 66, 67, 213 inflation’s effect on government programs to lower prices, 228, 230 key aspect of social and cultural life, 49 manipulation of food prices, 29–30
marketplace riots, see below in the marketplace
meat shortages, 49, 50
men’s role, 50
morale of Parisians, police keeping reports on, 67
national commodities, creation of “national loaf,” 72, 74
normal price commissions, 232, 233–235
overview of consumer movement and government controls, 236
policy of laissez-faire, 71 politics of food in wartime Paris, 48 postwar marketplace riots, see below in the marketplace
price ceilings, 213–214
price controls, rise of, 36, 49, 67, 72, 213
rationing, 67, 68, 71
revolutions sentiments, 48, 212, 231
riots in the marketplace
generally, 212–220
between consumers and merchants, 215–216
between consumers and shopkeepers, 217, 220
between shopkeepers and wholesale food merchants, 217, 218 between small shopkeepers and others, 217
butter and egg sellers, 217
city of Paris’ response, 213
commencement of riots (the first riots), 215–216
comparing 1911 and 1919 riots, 230–232
Conféderation Générale du Travail, 230–232
free market, maintaining, 213–214, 233
fuel (coal) shortages riots, 219
gender of rioters, 216, 218
gender roles for controlling riots, 213
moral economy, 259
national government’s response, 213
reveal beliefs of workers at end of war, 218, 219, 220
similarities between eighteenth- and twentieth-centuries food riots, 218, 219
small shopkeepers, 217
taxation populaire practice, 219, 220, 224, 226
vigilance committees, rise of, 220–235
food (cont.)
shortages and hoarding crisis, 28–30, 67–68 soup kitchen, 49–50, 272–273 store owners deemed enemies of the nation, attacking, 31–32
strike activity related to increasing costs, 57 subsidized prices, 214 sugar scarcity, 50
vigilance committees
generally, 220–235
activities, 223–224
autonomy, 221
cessation of movement, 228
collective purchases, 224–226 collective struggle, 229–230 coop members support of, 227–228 cooperation of shopkeepers, 224 Federation of Vigilance Committees, 224–226 governmental approval of actions, 234
historical perspective, 228–229
inflation’s effect on, 228, 230 lack of systematic organization, 230 leaders, 221, 222
members or participants, 221–222 middle-class consumers, appealing to, 222–223 neighborhood activism roots, 232 primitive rebellion, 230 purpose, 220–221
relations with working-class organizations and unions, 221
rise of, 220
utilizing unions and political parties approaches, 229–230, 232
women’s role, 229
Vilgrain barracks, 214
women’s role
preswar, 50
rioters, 216, 218
vigilance committees, 229
see also bread, potatoes gasoline shortage, 68
gender, role of
metalworkers’ strike of 1919, 242, 248–249, 275
riots in the marketplace, 216, 218 shaped views of food and clothing in contrasting ways, 35–36 tenants’ organizations and unions, 207–209 urban public space and class identity, 157 see also women, working-class identity global role of Paris in peace negotiations, 144, 285, 295 globalization of working-class experience, 18
high cost of living
causes
foreigners, blaming, 70 government’s report, 69–70 neighbors, blaming, 69
cost of living allowance, 61, 65, 243
food prices, 29–30, 60–61, 230 indemnité de vie chère, 61 la vie chère, 60, 77
organizing around issue, 26, 60–61, 230 price inflation, 60, 61, 230 housing
affordable housing
demand of FLS postwar, 203 shortage postwar, 193–196 arbitration commissions (rent issues), 39, 48, 198–199, 204–205 cartoons depicting landlord/tenant struggle as a war, 39–40 concierges’ services, 196, 203 construction issues, 194–195 costs, 195
crisis perceived as nation on verge of revolution, 48 crisis when war started, 37
cross-class alliances over high cost, 27
demobilized soldiers housing problem, 195 evictions
generally, 193, 198–199
base of upsurge in tenant activism, 199 tenants’ union response, 200, 204, 205, 206, 207, 211 finding housing postwar, 196, 203 furnished room (“garni”), use of, 44–45, 46 gender issues, 207–209
historical perspective of housing crisis in Paris, 44–45 immediate and continuing source of public concern, 36 landlords’ arrogance postwar, 195, 197
landlords’ strike, 195
Manichean views of crisis, 45 moratorium on rents, 36 arbitration commissions, 39, 48, 198–199, 204–205 construction of housing, effect on, 195 costs/rents vs. housing supply as focus, 45, 46 enactment of 1918 housing law, 38 experienced by tenants in different ways, 45 first moratorium, 37
intent of moratorium, 38 postwar attitude of landlords, 197–198 scope of moratorium, 37–38 support of tenant organizations, 47
Index

The index contains the following entries:

- temporary relief only, 38
- vacancies, rates and advertising, 196, 203
- viewpoint of landlord, 43
- viewpoint of tenant, 43
- women, impact on, 42, 45–46, 208
- overview of consumer movement and government controls, 235–236
- political activism, 209–210
- postwar evictions, see above evictions
- postwar housing law enacted in 1918, 38, 48, 198
- postwar rent increases, 39, 48, 198
- rent strikes, 207
- Renters’ Federation of the Seine (“FLS”) action committees, 206–207
- creation, background, and structure, 200–201, 203
- demands of, 203
- direct actions against landlords, 205–207
- focus on arbitration commission, 204–205
- focus on need for state action, 203, 205
- local meetings, 201, 203, 204, 208
- moral economy, 211
- political activism, 209–210
- primary concerns, 203–204
- rent strikes, 207
- revolutionary sentiments, 210–211
- stories of tenant victimization told at meetings, 201–202
- themes justifying activism, 202–203
- women, role of, 207–209
- revolutionary sentiments, 210–211
- strikes
- landlords’ strike, 195
- tenants’ rent strikes, 207
- support of moratorium on rents, 47
- tenants’ movements
- focus of, 46
- revolutionary sentiments, 210–211
- rise of, 37
- tenants’ organizations and unions
- arbitration commissions’ effect on, 200
- attack of renters’ law enacted in 1918, 48, 200
- before the war, 46
- demonstrations by, 205
- Federal Union of Tenants, 47, 200
- gender, role of, 207–209
- vacancies, rates, and advertising, 196, 203
- war years, 47–48
- wartime refugees housing problem, 196
- women, role of, 207–209
- women as key to discourses about, 42, 45–46, 207–209
- importance of 1919 generally, 3–5, 22–24, 284, 296–297
- choice of time vs. money, 242
- consumerism and politics, 9–13, 290–291
- contrast between Paris city and suburbs, 7
- contrasts of chronology and geography, 3–4
- dichotomy between reform and revolution, 8, 298
- effects on empire within Europe and overseas, 3–4, 205
- globalization of working-class experience, 18
- historical perspective of Paris, 6
- illustrates value of postcolonial and transnational approaches to modern French history, 294
- insights into twentieth-century Parisian society, culture, and politics, 5, 290–294, 295–296
- looked back to nineteenth century and forward to twentieth century, 3–4, 5, 287–294, 295–296
- nature of the working class, 14–15, 16–17, 18, 287–301, 296
- new relationship between working-class militancy and the state, 290
- political upheaval in Paris, 8
- politics of public spectacle, 17
- politics of working-class identity, 15–16, 17, 287–291
- population growth in Paris, 6
- postcolonial nation, 19
- relationship between reformism and revolution, 247, 290
- revolutionary year, 286–287
- rise of a more unified and internally variegated working class, 291
- transition for French capital, 6–7
- transnational history (relations between local, national, and global events), 18–22, 295–296
- understanding of revolutionary upsurge in Europe, 8
- urban growth in Paris coming from suburbs, 7
- year divided between war and peace, 3
- year of revolution, 4–5
- inflation
- food inflation’s effect on government programs to lower prices, 228, 230
- high cost of living, 60, 61, 230
- Jaurès, Jean, 103, 142, 148, 158, 159, 160, 161, 163, 171
Index

Jouhaux, Léon, 168, 169, 230, 249, 250, 254, 270, 279

luxury goods, taxation of, 74–76

May Day
ban on demonstration and riots that followed, 162–169 comparing May Day and Bastille Day (victory march), 156–157, 172–174, 175–180 comparing May Day and the metalworkers’ strike, 267, 273
description of demonstration, 149 exhibiting revolutionary spirit, 162, 231 images of disorder, 169
location of demonstrations, 169
not the largest example of working-class mobilization, 171 René Michaud as demonstrator, 164, 166, 167 meat
daily consumption as the norm, 48
importing and promoting frozen meat/beef, 54, 56 lowering price
by importing frozen beef, 54 fighting attempts of bourgeois and speculators to starve the people, 56 meatless days, 72
moral economy, frozen meat crisis, 56, 78 municipal butcher shops, establishing, 72 opposition to frozen beef, 56–57 selling frozen beef, 55–56
shortages, 28, 36, 50, 53, 54, 55, 72
steak socialism, 72 symbol of class conflict, 53 transportation for importing beef, 55
wartime Paris, in, 53

Merrheim, Alphonse, 248, 249, 251, 254, 276, 278

metalworkers’ strike of 1919
generally, 171, 238, 288
accompanied by large number and variety of strikes
generally, 258
garment workers’ strike, 257
other groups, 257
preclusion of a general strike, 259
railway workers, 259
transportation union strike, 257–258, 259, 266 agreement between Federation and Union, see below, first agreement between Federation and Union, and see second agreement between Federation and Union

choice between time and money, 242
city of Saint-Denis
center of the strike movement, 268 Commune, 263, 271
epicenter of the revolutionary Left, 265 impact of strike, 268
Inter-union committee, 269–270, 277, 278 legend of Saint Denis, 263 model of industrial suburbia, 268 response of city’s leaders, 271–272 soup kitchens, 272–273
spirit of revolution replicating journey of Saint Denis, 263–264 symbolizing revolutionary movement, 263, 268 colonial members of union, 248–249, 253–254
Commune, 263, 264, 265, 271, 273, 281 compared with consumer protests, 281 consumer issues played central role, 57, 281 cconversion from wartime production to peacetime economy, 260 defeat of the strike
generally, 273–282
consequences of defeat, 281–282 employer resistance, 274 failure to transform strike into national movement, 273–274, 275–276 failure to win over national leadership of Metals Federation and CGT, 276 gendered nature of movement, 275 limited geographic region of strike, 273–276 public reactions to the strike, 274–275
description, 267–268
devolved into series of local actions based on neighborhood and community, 266 dichotomy between economic and political issues, 240–241 disorderly nature of, 267 eight-hour-day agreement between Federation and Union, see below, first agreement between Federation and Union, and see second agreement between Federation and Union eight-hour-day dilemma, 242–243 Entente Committee (EC), 212, 255, 261–266 failure of the EC to control the strike, 265–266 first agreement between Federation and Union
generally, 249–252
differences between moderate and radical unionists, 252 Entente Committee (EC), establishment and demand of, 252 failure to consult constituents before signing, 251
Index

ideological contrast between major and minor unions, 231
increased productivity as key to resolving dispute, 250
problems with, 250
ratification requirement, 251 reaction by unions, 251
scientific management of industry problem, 250–251
first major strike, 253
frustrated consumerism basis, 241
gender, role of, 242, 248–249, 275 greatest impact in the suburbs, 265, 267, 272 growth of Metalworkers’ Federation, 248 growth of unions in metals industries, 248
historical perspective, 238–239
industry-wide strike context of decision to strike, 253, 254 demands, 254, 256
description, 255, 256–257
EC as strike committee, 255 revolutionary quality, 254, 255, 257 women and colonial workers, 253–254 international general strike failure, 279–281
key factor in outbreak and outcome, 249 major general strike, rejection and failure of,
277, 278, 282
May Day compared to, 267, 273
Metalworkers’ Federation
agreements with union as to eight-hour day, see above, first agreement, and see below, second agreement
growth of, 248
opposing the Union Sacrée, 248 split within, 249
misconceptions of the EC, 265–266 neighborhood and community action, 266 provoking strike, belief employers were, 253 race, role of, 242
reputation as militant groups of workers, 248 revolutionary tenor of the times
generally, 238, 239–240, 259
anger at the government, 261–262 center of revolutionary activism, 257 central reason, 248
connection between material concerns and lure of revolutionary ideology, 261–262 conversion from wartime production to peacetime economy, 260
expectations of people, 262 perception of attempt at revolution, 255 political demands, 254
roots of working-class insurgency, 262
Russian influence, 260, 265, 274, 295 strike as the key moment, 257 revolutionary vision of union activism, 249 route of demonstrations, 267–268
Saint-Denis, see above city of Saint-Denis second agreement between Federation and Union
generally, 252
Entente Committee, effect on, 252 reaction by metalworkers, 252–253
soup kitchens, 272–273
split of the French Left factions, 248 split within Metalworkers’ Federation, 249
strikes
first major strike, 253
transport workers, 257–258, 259, 266
wildcat strikes, 252–253
suburban orientation
generally, 267
disorderly nature of strike, 267
extremist positions taken, 272
heart of revolutionary vision, 272
moral support, 273
revolt in the suburbs, generally, 262
strength of community networks, 265
strike’s greatest impact, 265
symbolism, 263
weakness of union organization, 265 transport workers’ strike, effect of, 266 underscored the political and insurgent nature of consumption, 282
Union Syndicats de la Seine, 272 urban issues, 263
wildcat character of the 1919 strike, 263
wildcat strikes, 252–253
women members of union, 64, 242, 248–249, 253–254
Michaud, René
as demonstrator on May Day, 164, 166, 167 writings/memoir of, 81, 97, 98–109 middle class
crime, 231
consumer movement, issues resonating with, 184, 186, 222–223
see also under working-class identity modern era of Paris
centering around the spectacular, 142 see also political spectacle
moral economy
affordable housing, 211
blending with state mobilization, 78 consumer cooperation, 226
consumer movement, 184–185, 186
frozen meat crisis, 56
governmental accountability, 219
historical perspective, 13 moral economy (cont.)
  price controls on food, 235 themes of, 29
  war as strengthening, 26
  women workers, 288
  morale crisis, civilian, 57

Peace of Versailles
Philippe, Gaston, 268, 269, 270, 271
  political spectacle
    generally, 17, 143
    bridging the gap between diplomats and
    workers, 154
    colonial subjects followed events closely, 153–154
  foreign views of Paris after Armistice, 147 linkage of the local and international class struggles, 152, 154, 181
  music halls programs, 190
  Paris as capital of the world, 146
  Paris as world city, 146 peace negotiations in Paris, 144 popular views of the peace negotiations and international elite, 150
  racialized dimension, 171
  Russian civil war matters, 151 shaped city’s global role, 144 shaping the subjective identity of working people, 114
  Woodrow Wilson’s arrival in Paris
    generally, 146
    support of the revolutionary French Left, 151
    symbolic importance, 147 workers of Paris’ concerns after Armistice, 149 postwar unrest in Paris principal themes, 25
  potatoes
    free distribution by city, 72
    rising prices and shortages, 28, 29, 49, 67, 213
  price controls
    demand for state action by tenants’ union (FLS), 203, 205
    state involvement with the national economy, 190–193
  produce
    daily consumption as the norm, 48
    rising prices and shortages, 29, 36, 49
  race
  Algerians’ demonstration/riot over curfew, 170–171
  “iron triangle” of race, class, and gender as to working-class identity, 112

Index
restructuring working class, as, 130 spectacular politics, racialized dimension, 171 urban public space and class identity, gender and race distinctions, 157 see also working-class identity regulations of the state
  demand for state action by tenants’ union (FLS), 203, 205
  new relationship between working-class militancy and the state, 290
state involvement with the national economy, 190–193
  revolutionary movement
    generally, 2–3, 4–5, 6, 284–285, 286–287, 290
    Algerians’ demonstration/riot over curfew, 170–171
    Basilica of Sacré Coeur, importance of, 264 basis of, 2–3, 4–5, 22–23, 76–77, 78 concept of consumers’ war in wartime Paris, 77, 78
    connection between material concerns and lure of revolutionary ideology, 261–262, 282 consumer movements as important aspect of, 237, 282
    conversion from wartime production to
    peace-time economy, 260
    dichotomy between reform and revolution, 8, 298
    expectations of people, 262 heart of movement, struggles over basic commodities, 182, 190, 192 invasion metaphor, 169
    location of demonstrations, 169
    May Day as symbol of revolutionary spirit, 162, 231
    Montmartre as symbol of everything revolutionary about Parisian life, 263, 264
    Paris Commune, 6, 263, 264, 265, 271, 273, 281
    roots of working-class insurgency, 262
    suburbs
      center of urban marginality and revolutionary politics, 264
      disorderly nature of strike, 267
      extremist positions taken, 272
      heart of revolutionary vision, 272
      moral support, 273
      revolt in the suburbs, generally, 262
      strength of community networks, 265
      strike’s greatest impact, 265
      symbolism, 263
      tenants’ unions, 210–211
  war as the mother of revolution, 66 working-class identity as key factor, 15, 26
see also metalworkers’ strike of 1919
Index

Robert, Jean-Louis, 50, 137, 239, 253, 263, 267
Russian civil war matters, 151
Russian influence, 151, 260, 265, 274, 295
Saint-Denis, city of, see metalworkers’ strike of 1919 shaping Parisian public life, see political spectacle surrounding peace treaty, and see urban public space and class identity shoes, creation of “national shoe,” 72–73, 74 soup kitchens, 49–50, 107, 266, 272–273 source material relied on by author, 24 strikes generally, 290
Confédération Générale du Travail’s strike, 231
crisis of civilian morale, 57
dressmakers, see fashion/garment industry first major strike, 57 general strike, rejection and failure of, 258, 259, 277, 278, 282
international general strike failure, 279–281
railway workers, 259
renewal of strike activity, 57, 64–65, 66
transportation union strike, 257–258, 259, 266 war plants, women working in, 64
see also metalworkers’ strike of 1919
suburban spaces generally, 267 center of urban marginality and revolutionary politics, 264 disorderly nature of strike, 267
extremist positions taken, 272
heart of revolutionary vision, 272
moral support, 273
revels in the suburbs, generally, 262
strength of community networks, 265
strike’s greatest impact, 265
symbolism, 263
weakness of union organization, 265
see also metalworkers’ strike of 1919
sugar shortages, 26, 36, 70, 71 taxation of luxury goods, 74–76 tobacco shortages and restrictions, 49, 68, 76 transitional character of 1919 (from war to peace), 144–145 transnational history generally, 18–22, 295 goal of, 19
postcolonial concept, defined, 21
postcolonial studies, 19

Union Sacrée appeal to national exigencies, effect of, 30
ban on specialty breads, 52, 56
class hierarchy, the enemy at home, 56 clothing, attitude toward, 33, 57 shaped consumer culture, 27 consumers’ war, effect of, 78 decline and collapse of, 70 defined, 27
expression of class differences, 29 identity forsaken for national unity, 106 landlords and tenants, 39
May Day, 162
Metalworkers Federation, 248
opposition to, 248
promotion of frozen meat, 56 shaping consumer culture, 27
uniforms worn by soldiers, 33 victory celebrations as rebirth of, 174 Vilain trial, 158
unions political activism, 209–210 tenants’ unions, see housing union of trade unions, high cost of living issue, 25 urban public space and class identity generally, 155 Algerians’ demonstration/riot over curfew, 170–171
comparing May Day and Bastille Day (victory march), 156–157, 172–174, 175–180 creation of broad new boulevards, effect of, 155 demolishing the walls/fortifications around the city, 172 discontent of working-class demonstration following Cottin verdict, 159–161 funeral of Charles Lorne, public activity of Parisian workers, 171 gender and race distinctions, 157
location of demonstrations, 169
metalworkers’ strike, 171 military parades, impact of, 157 monumentality, effect of, 155 parades and demonstrations, generally, 155 Vilain, Raoul, 103–104, 142
Vilain and Cottin verdicts contrasted, 158–159
demonstration after, 159–161
Vilain trial, 158–159, 161
war manufacturing plants, strikes by women working in, 64
war years
conversion from wartime production to peacetime economy, 260
first consumer movement in wartime Paris, 30 new forms of worker radicalism, 23, 27, 80 overview of its importance, 2 parallels between battlefield and home front, 25–26 politicization of consumerism, 26, 190, 290 rental housing crisis when war started, 37
shopkeepers profiteering wrongfully from the war effort, attacking, 32 state involvement in the consumer movement, 190–193 store owners deemed enemies of the nation, attacking, 31–32
xenophobia, 30
welfare state, creation of, 191, 193, 294
Wilson, Woodrow, 288
welfare state, creation of, 294
xenophobia, 30

women
generally, 285–286, 288–289
clerical work, 116
clothing industry, 116
central characteristic of occupational diversity, 131 consumer activism increase, 183–184 demobilization of women war workers generally, 131–139, 140, 288–289 attitude of male workers, 137–138 attitude of unions, 136–137, 138
increased women’s consumer activism, 183–184 reasons for changing postwar role, 132–133 domestic service, 116, 131 exclusion of women workers postwar, 120, 133–139, 140, 288–289 food riots, gender of rioters
generally, 216, 218
vigilance committees, role of women, 229 housewives, work as, 116, 135 metalworkers, 64
neighborhood contrast, 116 occupations of, generally, 114–117, 131–139 organizing women workers, 133
redefining working class, 131–139, 140, 183–184, 288–289
women workers

table/chart, 115
tenant union activists, as, 207–209 unskilled, 116

working-class identity
generally, 80, 285–286, 287–291
absence of any homogeneous working class, 95 after Armistice, generally, 80
Algerians’ demonstration/riot over curfew, 170–171
artisans and shopkeepers, 94
autobiographical literature, 97
Berlanstein’s challenge of the embourgeoisement thesis, 84–85
Bouligne-Billancourt suburban municipality
generally, 92
absence of homogeneous working class, 96
ethnicity and foreign population, 97
gendered nature of occupations, 85, 116, 117 geographic concentration of skill levels of workers, 96 middle-class population, 94 census data, use of, 83, 84, 86, 96
central characteristic of occupational diversity, 97 changing nature of identity, 181 colonial labor, see ethnicity and foreign population central ideas, see conceptual frameworks and ultimate ideologies, 82 contrast of “Cottin” and “Vilain” verdicts
generally, 158–159
demonstration after verdicts, 159–161
Coulée-Barbe quarter of Paris (thirteenth district)
generally, 91
absence of homogeneous working class, 95
gendered nature of occupations, 115
middle-class population, 94
defining working class in 1919, generally, 112 Deletang writings/memoir, 83, 97, 98–109 description by reporters, 174–175 differentiating urban and suburban workers, 89 distinguishing workers and employees, 85, 91–94 diversity of experiences, 109 diversity of occupations, 97, 288 Drancy community
generally, 92
artisans and shopkeepers, 94
compared to Folle-Méricourt, 93
gendered nature of occupations, 115, 116, 117
middle-class population, 94 separation of social classes, 95
embourgeoisement thesis, 84, 87, 89, 94 employees distinguished from worker class, 91–94 essential characteristics of working class of Paris and its suburbs, generally, 90
Index

ethnicity and foreign population
generally, 117–130, 288, 289, 295–296
Algerians as exception to exclusion, 129 closure and reopening of borders to immigrants, 127
colonial workers more controlled than European foreigners, 123 controls of French government, 122, 123 exclusion from the Parisian working class before 1919, 123
exclusion of colonial labor in 1919, generally, 120, 133–140, 285–286
expulsion of colonial labor, 22, 127–128, 289 race as restructing working class, 130 reasons for need for colonial workers, 126 reasons for opposition to colonial workers, 125–126, 128
relations between nonwhite workers and French women, 124
restructuring the working class, generally, 140 statistics, 120–121, 127, 129
table/chart, 118
unions’ support for exclusion, 129–130
wartime immigration differed from prewar, 122 Folie-Méricourt quarter of Paris (eleventh district) generally, 90–91
absence of homogeneous working class, 93
artisans and shopkeepers, 94, 96
compared to Croulebarbe, 91 compared to Drancy, 92
craftspeople, 96
ethnicity and foreign population, 119
food industry workers, 95
gendered nature of occupations, 115
other occupations and varying skill levels, 95 taxi and truck drivers, 95
gendered nature of occupations
generally, 114–117, 120, 285–286, 288–289
exclusion of women workers postwar, 120, 133–139
redefining working class, 131–139, 140
table/chart, 115
see also women
geographic concentration of skill levels of
workers, 97
globalization of working-class experience, 18 heterogeneous quality, 81, 82, 84, 95, 287 immigrants, see ethnicity and foreign population industrial population, sectors analysis
generally, 87–89, 95–97
table/chart, 88, 93

“iron triangle” of race, class, and gender, 112 key differences in the working-class population ethnicity and foreign nationality, 117–120
gender, 114–117, 120
key factor in revolutionary tenor, 15, 26 melting pot, 110
memoirs of workers, 97
Michaud’s writings/memoir, 83, 97, 98–109
middle-class and working-class Parisians, perceptions of, 82, 97–109 middle-class occupations, 94
middle-class population Boulogne-Billancourt suburban municipality, 94
Croulebarbe quarter of Paris (thirteenth district), 94
Drancy community, 94
nature of the working class, 14–15
objective factors, 81, 86 oppositional dualities concept (either/or patterns of thought), 82–83 perceptions of middle-class and working-class Parisians, 82, 97–109
politics of, generally, 15–16
race, see above ethnicity and foreign population Rancière’s memoir, 98
relationship between workers and employees, 85, 86–87
relevance of class analysis, 81 restructuring working class
generally, 130, 138–139, 140, 183
gendered nature of occupations, 120, 131–139, 183–184
importance of consumer struggles, 183
see also above, ethnicity and foreign population rise of a more unified and internally variegated working class, 291
self-perception, 97–109 shaped geography and politics, 82 shifting of, 2, 17
skill levels of occupations
generally, 95–97
table/chart, 95
skill subcategories and gradations among the working-class population, 85–86, 95–97
social class in the Paris area
generally, 92–97
table/chart, 93
socioprofessional categories of census, 86 statistical analysis, generally, 83–97 study of lives of two people (self-presentation method of analysis), 83
Index

working-class identity (cont.)
subjective phenomenon, 81, 86 transformation of, 26
transitional nature of oppositional dualities, 83 transnational character of, 18

women’s effect on nature of, 27, 65, 183–184 worker class distinguished from employees, 93–94 see also May Day, urban public space and class identity, women