1 Syntactic Data, Patterns, and Structure
1.1 Introduction: The Problem, and a Possible Solution
1.1.1 Natural Language Data
1.1.2 A Possible Line of Solution
1.2 Structure: Some Clues
1.2.1 Displacement: A Basic Natural Language Pattern
1.2.2 VP Proform Replacement
1.3 Labeling Phrasal Categories: Why VP?
1.4 Subconstituents of VP
1.4.1 Evidence for NPs
1.4.2 V versions of the Displacement Test
1.4.3 Evidence for PP
1.5 Tree Representation of Constituent Structure
1.6 A Worked Example: Solution Procedure
1.7 Trees and Grammars: A Preview
1.8 What Comes Next?

2 Syntactic Rules and Lexical Valence
2.1 The Setting
2.2 Where Do Syntactic Structures Come From?
2.2.1 Phrase Structure Rules, Continued
2.3 The Valence Problem
2.4 The Valence Solution
2.5 Refinements
2.6 Subject Selection
2.7 NPs
2.7.1 One Replacement
2.7.2 Generalizing the NP System
2.8 Adjuncts
2.9 Markers
2.10 A Unitary Architecture for Syntactic Categories?
2.11 What Comes Next?

3 The Auxiliary Dependency
3.1 Auxiliary Phenomena: What Are Auxiliaries?
3.1.1 The NICE Properties

Contents

3.1.2 The Auxiliary System Dependency .......................... 108
3.1.3 How Modals Reveal Themselves to Be Verbs ................. 110
3.2 What is the Phrase Structure of Clauses with Auxiliaries? .... 113
  3.2.1 Auxiliaries as VP Heads? .................................. 113
  3.2.2 Coordination .................................................. 120
  3.2.3 Null Subjects: An Alternative That Doesn’t Work .......... 123
3.3 Capturing Auxiliaries ............................................. 125
  3.3.1 Some Stocktaking ........................................... 125
  3.3.2 Solving the Auxiliary Puzzle Via Valence .................. 126
  3.3.3 Capturing Auxiliary Ordering ............................... 132
3.4 Auxiliaries and Subject Selection ............................... 133
  3.4.1 Basic Data .................................................... 133
3.5 Where Does Inversion Come From? ............................... 136
  3.5.1 Basic Data .................................................... 136
3.6 What Comes Next? ............................................... 141

4 Local Dependencies and Lexical Rules ......................... 143
  4.1 Case and Agreement ............................................. 143
    4.1.1 Case ....................................................... 143
    4.1.2 Agreement ............................................... 146
  4.2 Passive .......................................................... 151
    4.2.1 The Basic Cases .......................................... 151
    4.2.2 Passive Imposters ........................................ 155
  4.3 Infinitival Complements ....................................... 159
  4.4 Extraposition ................................................... 166
    4.4.1 Basic Data ................................................ 166
    4.4.2 Phrase Structure of the Extraposition VP ............... 167
  4.5 There .............................................................. 174
    4.5.1 Basic Data ................................................ 176
    4.5.2 There Is a Subject ....................................... 178
    4.5.3 There Is a (Pronominal) NP ............................... 179
    4.5.4 There VPs Immediately Dominate the Predicate .......... 180
    4.5.5 Accounting for There ................................... 182
  4.6 Ergative and Antipassive ..................................... 188
  4.7 What Comes Next? .............................................. 192

5 Infinitival Complements ........................................ 194
  5.1 Consequences of the V NP VP Analysis ........................ 194
  5.2 What Is Infinitival to? ....................................... 202
    5.2.1 to as a Preposition? ................................... 202
    5.2.2 to as a Complementizer? ................................. 204
    5.2.3 NICE Revisited ......................................... 208
  5.3 Raising Verbs, Continued .................................... 218
  5.4 ‘Super-Raising’: The French Tense Auxiliaries ............... 226
  5.5 What Comes Next? ............................................. 234

6 The Limits of Valence: Topicalization ...................... 236
  6.1 Beyond Valence: Data ......................................... 236
  6.2 Beyond Valence: Structure ................................... 237
  6.3 Beyond Valence: Mechanism .................................. 245
