A HISTORY OF MODERN LIBYA
Second Edition

Dirk Vandewalle is one of only a handful of scholars who have made frequent visits to Libya over the last four decades. His formidable knowledge of the region is encapsulated in his history of Libya, which was first published in 2006. The book – based on original research and interviews with Libya’s political elite – traces Libya’s history back to the 1900s with a portrait of Libya’s desert terrain, its peoples, and the personalities that shaped its development. It then examines the harrowing years of the Italian occupation in the early twentieth century, through the Sanusi monarchy and, thereafter, to the revolution of 1969 and the accession of Qadhafi. The chapters that follow analyze the economics and politics of Qadhafi’s revolution, offering insights into the man and his ideology as reflected in his Green Book.

In the wake of the civil war and Qadhafi’s demise, the time is ripe for an updated edition of the history, which covers the years from 2005 to the present. These were the years when Libya finally came in from the cold after years of political and economic isolation. The agreement to give up the weapons of mass destruction program paved the way for improved relations with the West. By this time, however, Qadhafi had lost the support of his people and, despite attempts to liberalize the economy, real structural reform proved impossible. This, as Vandewalle contends in the preface to this new edition, coupled with tribal rivalries, regional divisions, and a general lack of unity, paved the way for revolution and civil war. In an epilogue, the author reflects on Qadhafi’s premiership, The Green Book’s stateless society, and the legacy that Qadhafi leaves behind.

A HISTORY OF MODERN LIBYA

Second Edition

DIRK VANDEWALLE

Dartmouth College
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>List of Illustrations</td>
<td>vi</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>List of Maps</td>
<td>vii</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Preface to the Second Edition</td>
<td>ix</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Preface to the First Edition</td>
<td>xiii</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chronology, 1900–2011</td>
<td>xvii</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>List of Acronyms</td>
<td>xxxv</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

List of Illustrations

- Introduction: Libya, the enigmatic oil state

List of Maps

- Libya’s geography
- Ottoman period and the Sanusiyya
- European intrusions and the Young Turk revolt
- Ottoman legacy

Introdution: Libya, the enigmatic oil state

1. “A tract which is wholly sand…” Herodotus
   - Libya’s geography
   - Ottoman period and the Sanusiyya
   - European intrusions and the Young Turk revolt
   - Ottoman legacy

2. Italy’s Fourth Shore and decolonization, 1911–1950
   - The Italian occupation, 1911–1923
   - Fascism and the Italian settler colony
   - World War II, Italy’s defeat, and the Great Power deliberations
   - Legacies at the eve of independence

3. The Sanusi monarchy as accidental state, 1951–1969
   - Politics of avoidance: the reluctant monarchy
   - The development challenges of the first decade
   - The Libyan oil industry
   - The unification of the kingdom
   - The social impact of oil and the early seeds of revolution
   - The monarchy in perspective
Contents

4 A Libyan sandstorm: from monarchy to republic, 1969–1973
   Libya’s young revolutionaries
   Popular revolution, participation, and legitimacy
   Charisma and rhetoric as mobilizational tools
   Oil and economic management
   The revolution on the eve of the 1973 oil crisis

   Revolutionaries, technocrats, and “The Green Book” as political primer
   “The Green Book’s” economic and social directives
   Oil and development
   The revolutionary society
   Symbols, myths, Islam, and opposition
   Terrorism, adventurism, and confrontation with the West
   The revolutionary decade revisited

6 The limits of the revolution, 1986–2000
   Curtailing revolutionary energy
   “The Great Green Charter of Human Rights”
   Protecting the regime: formal and informal means of power and control
   The economic sanctions and their impact
   Economic sanctions and oil policies
   Attempts at economic reform
   The lessons of failed reforms
   Confrontation, terrorism, and sanctions
   The revolution curtailed

7 Reconciliation, civil war, and fin de régime, 2003–2011
   The road to disarmament
   Pragmatism, economic reform, and political reality
   From Arab socialism to pan-African unity
   The delusions of Qadhafi and of the West
   The uprising in Cyrenaica and the civil war

Epilogue: Whither Libya?

Notes

Bibliography

Index
Illustrations

1. Omar al-Mukhtar. © Centre for Libyan Studies, Oxford page 31
2. Benito Mussolini in Libya in 1937. © Bettmann / CORBIS
   35
3. Proclamation of the creation of the United Kingdom of Libya at al-Manar Palace in Benghazi. © Centre for Libyan Studies, Oxford
   44
4. Richard Nixon in Libya. © Centre for Libyan Studies, Oxford
   73
   77
6. Lockerbie bombing. © Bryn Colton / Assignments Photographers / CORBIS
   168
7. Tripoli, Libyan Arab Jamahiriyya. © AFP / Getty Images
   179
8. Female soldier during the 34th anniversary of the revolution in September 2003. © AFP / Getty Images
   198
Maps

1. General map of Libya  page 13
2. Ethnic and tribal map of Libya  25
3. Economic activity  97
The uprising against the government of Muammar al-Qadhafi that started in eastern Libya in February 2011 questioned many of the assumptions even seasoned observers of the country had made about the regime and about its durability. To many, the carapace of security organizations and other measures to protect the regime had long seemed unassailable. Yet, slightly over six months later, on the 1 September 2011 anniversary of Qadhafi’s revolution, the Libyan leader was in hiding, and an international conference in Paris announced measures to provide international support to the Libyan opposition to help rebuild Libya. Seven weeks later, on 20 October, Qadhafi was dead. The willingness, by a population that had for more than four decades been cowered by the diktats of Qadhafi’s revolution, to stand up for its rights seemed almost beyond belief. The surprise was even greater in light of internal developments in Libya since December 2003 when the government had agreed to hand over its weapons of mass destruction to the West and had embarked on a period of economic liberalization and reintegration into the international community that had seemingly provided a safety valve for the regime.

In the first edition of this book I covered developments in Libya roughly through 2005. In the conclusion to the final chapter I wrote about the challenges Libya would face as it moved toward becoming part of the international community once more. The assumption that underpinned much of the chapter’s analysis was that Libya would somehow muddle through under Qadhafi, sustained by its oil revenues – but that serious economic reform would also entail political reform, something the regime was unlikely to allow (despite the entreaties of Saif al-Islam al-Qadhafi, the Libyan leader’s son).

In retrospect, it is clear that none of Libya’s essential political problems were seriously addressed between 2003 and the eruption of popular anger in 2011. This at least had come as no surprise. As I argued in the first edition, Qadhafi’s self-styled revolution had become a self-reverential and...
Preface

self-centered political experiment that would only change upon the death or the replacement of its creator. Most observers and most Libyans therefore had resigned themselves to a prolonged period of muddling through, aided by oil revenues that had once more dramatically increased by 2011. The uprising, therefore, marked a clear, surprising break with politics – or lack thereof – as usual in Libya.

When my editor, Marigold Acland, approached me to consider a second edition of A Modern History of Libya, her request afforded me the chance to not only bring the earlier volume up to date, but also to reflect in the Epilogue on what I see as the larger theme of political and economic development in an exceptionally rich oil exporter whose ruler has squandered much of that wealth in pursuit of a number of visions that to most Western observers looked quixotic, if not incomprehensible. The major question, as this book goes to press, is whether Libya’s current and future rulers, now facing the enormous tasks of state and nation building, will do better.

The Libya that I visited prior to 2003 and the Libya that had emerged by the spring of 2011 – the period covered in the final chapter of this edition – was, at least at the surface, very different. The agreement on WMDs, the settlement of the Lockerbie claims, the reestablishment of more open trade relations with the rest of the world, and the renewal of diplomatic relations with the United States all contributed in various ways to help change the physical appearance of the country. Long an economic backwater as a result of the economic and diplomatic sanctions by the international community, the return of international oil companies and the renewed influx of oil money created virtually overnight a building boom the like of which Libya had never experienced in its history. For a short while, aided by the assurances by Saif al-Islam al-Qadhafi that Libya had turned a corner, it seemed as if the country would finally embark on a path of development relatively untainted by Qadhafi’s earlier ideological preoccupations. When Libya reestablished diplomatic relations with the United States and then became its favored partner in the fight against Islamic radicalism in the region, the country’s newfound direction seemed confirmed.

In the concluding chapter of the first edition I had remarked that “inexorably, the combination of economic necessity, generational turn-over, and reintegration into the global economy will continue to change Libya’s political and economic life.” When I wrote those words in 2006, many close observers were cautiously optimistic about the country’s future. There were, however, some warning signs that little had structurally changed in how the country was being governed. The events I describe in the final chapter of this second edition, particularly the cult of personality and the propaganda campaign to burnish Qadhafi’s international image after 2005 – eagerly underwritten by a bevy of Western intellectuals and public figures – should have made us more aware of some of the immutable aspects of Libyan politics. The uprising against the regime came at a point when Libya’s fortunes looked somewhat promising. The regime seemed firmly entrenched once more, with ample oil revenues capable of lubricating the regime’s extensive patronage mechanisms. As the battles along the littoranea in spring and early summer 2011 became stalemated, however, the vicious fighting by both Qadhafi’s supporters and the rebels starkly exposed some of the old faultlines the regime’s policies since 1969 has obscured but never obliterated: the lingering suspicion between the tribes, between the provinces, among Libyans generally, and the more general lack of national identity. Above all, as the country descended into a war of attrition, there were hints of the chaos to come – the result of first the monarchy’s and then Qadhafi’s unwillingness to create this sense of identity that could have transcended the primordial divisions within a country that was formed willy-nilly and ex nihilo six decades ago.
Preface

History has never been kind to modern Libya, and it will no doubt be equally unkind in the few months and years ahead. The civil war was only a harbinger of the equally daunting difficulties that lie ahead in whatever configuration post-conflict Libya emerges. Hopefully, as the reconstruction – or, perhaps more accurately, the construction, for the first time – of Libya as a political community with a truly national identity takes place, the sad shadows of the country’s past can be erased. However, as I point out in the Epilogue to this book, the dual challenges of state and nation building will undoubtedly prove arduous in light of the tortuous political path the country has stumbled along since its independence.

London,
28 October 2011
Preface to the First Edition

This book is the result of almost three decades of observing and writing about Libya. In the process, countless individuals in a number of countries have talked to me and corresponded with me about Libya. Many of them I have acknowledged earlier in my Libya Since Independence. Since then, however, I have incurred additional debts to a number of others who kindly provided additional help and insights since the late 1990s. In no particular order, they include Dr. Saleh Ibrahim and Milad Saad Milad at the Academy of Higher Education in Tripoli; Ms. Salma al-Gaer of the Academy of Higher Education and the Green Book Center; Youssef Sawani of the Green Book Center; Zahi Mogherbi of Gar Yunis University; Muhammad Siala, Secretary for International Cooperation; Mehdi Emberish, Secretary of Culture; Ahmed Jalala of the Academy of Graduate Studies; Engineer Jadalla al-Talhi, former Prime Minister and Foreign Minister of the Jamahiriyya; Abu Zayed Dorda, former Prime Minister and Minister of the Economy; Saif al-Islam al-Qadhafi; Saleem al-Manar and Tony Allan of the School of Oriental and African Studies in London; Ethan Chorin of the United States Liaison Office in Tripoli; Tarik Yousef of Georgetown University; David Mack at the Middle East Institute in Washington; Moncef Dijirizi at the University of Geneva; and Saad al-Ghariani of the Academy of Higher Education in Tripoli.

A very special thanks to Rosemary Hollis of the Royal Institute of International Affairs in London. My gratitude as well to Robert Springborg and Arnold Luethold, who organized two conferences at, respectively, the London Middle East Centre (at the School of Oriental and African Studies) and the Geneva Centre for the Democratic Control of Armed Forces. Last but not least, my gratitude to Mustafa Ben Halim, Prime Minister of Libya during the monarchy, who agreed to meet in London in order to shed light on the tumultuous developments that took place during his tenure in office. A sabbatical leave from Dartmouth College allowed me to finish the manuscript. Marigold Acland and two anonymous readers for Cambridge University Press provided insightful and thoughtful comments as the manuscript progressed.
Preface

Transliterations from the Arabic in this book use the classical Arabic spelling except where any attempt to do so would render names unintelligible to some readers – hence Tripoli rather than Tarabulus. For the transliteration of place names I have relied on Gazetteer No. 41 – Libya (June 1958) published by the United States Board on Geographic Names. The ta marbuta, however, when not in construct state, is rendered a and not ah as in the Gazetteer: Zuwarah rather than Zuwarah. Arabic words familiar to a western audience – such as ulama and sharia – are written without diacritical marks. Unless in quotations from original sources – that, for example, render Jaghbub as Giarbub or Giarabub in official Italian documents – I have chosen to adopt the spelling used by the Gazetteer, with the caveat noted above.

The General People’s Congress and Committee system (Libya’s equivalent of a parliament and a cabinet) used a complex and confusing set of designations for its institutions and for those who represent it. The Secretary of the General People’s Committee for Foreign Affairs is simply “the Foreign Minister” or “the Secretary of Foreign Affairs” in this book. The General Secretariat of the People’s Bureau for Planning is simply “the Ministry of Planning.”

A final note on sources: the literature on Libya is by now enormous, and of widely varying quality. In order to provide some guidance, and to keep the text manageable and accessible, readers will find in the bibliography and in the endnotes to each chapter references to some of what are, in my estimation, the most important works on Libya’s modern history. Most, except for references to newspaper articles and Libyan documents, and excluding a handful of French sources, are in English. A more exhaustive bibliography, as well as references to additional Arabic sources, can be found in my Libya Since Independence and in specialized bibliographies of Libya. Just before going to press, the Centre for Libyan Studies in Oxford graciously provided me with the first three (of a projected eight) volumes of Libya Between the Past and the Present (in Arabic) by Dr. Muhammad Mugharyif [Mohamed Yousef Al-Magariaf]. They provide an extremely valuable overview of Libyan history, and include a collection of historical documents as well as previously unavailable pictures – some of which were provided, courtesy of the Centre for Libyan Studies, for this book. My sincere thanks to Yousef El-Megreisi for making them available.

A special thanks to Ian Martin who asked me to serve as his political advisor at the United Nations during its pre-assessment phase for Libyan post-conflict planning in Summer 2011. Finally, as a result of Libya’s civil war, several people mentioned in this Preface have either been killed or have left the country. This second edition is dedicated to the memory of Dr. Salma al-Gaer, a close and longtime friend, who unfortunately did not survive her country’s civil war.
Preface

Chronology, 1900–2011

The Ottoman and Italian Period

1517  The Ottoman Empire occupies Cyrenaica.
1551  The Ottoman Empire occupies Tripoli.
1711  Ahmed Bey Qaramanli, the Ottoman governor of Tripoli, establishes the Qaramanli dynasty.
1803  The Philadelphina, a United States frigate, is captured off Tripoli harbor.
1835  End of the Qaramanli dynasty; the Ottoman Empire re-occupies Tripolitania, Fazzan, and Cyrenaica during three campaigns of conquest.
1843  Muhammad Abd al-Wahhab al-Sanusi, founder of the Sanusiyya, establishes his headquarters in Cyrenaica.
1843  The Ottomans occupy Ghadames.
1855  The Sanusiyya moves its headquarters to Jaghbub.
1859  Muhammad al-Sanusi dies in Jaghbub.
1890  Anglo-French convention delineates British and Ottoman spheres of influence in North Africa.
1895  The Sanusiyya moves its headquarters to Kufra.
1902  Ahmad al-Shariff al-Sanusi becomes head of the Sanusiyya.
1908  The Young Turk revolt takes place in Constantinople, briefly raising hopes for political independence in Tripolitania.
1910  A French–Ottoman agreement settles the borders between Tripolitania, Algeria, and Tunisia.
26 September 1911  Italy sends the Ottoman sultan an ultimatum, announcing its intent to occupy Tripolitania and Cyrenaica.
Chronology, 1900—2011

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>5 November 1911</td>
<td>Italy announces the annexation of Tripolitania and Cyrenaica and does so formally on 25 February 1912.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>October 1912</td>
<td>The Ottoman Empire and Italy sign an ambiguous agreement at Ouchy, Italy, claiming sovereignty while Constantinople refuses to renounce its claim.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1912</td>
<td>Ahmad al-Shariff assumes the leadership of resistance against the Italians in Cyrenaica.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 1913</td>
<td>Sulayman Al-Baruni, a Berber leader from Tripolitania, and his followers, are defeated at the Battle of Asabaa by the Italians. Al-Baruni flees to Turkey.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1913</td>
<td>Italian forces attempt the occupation of Tripolitania, Cyrenaica, and Fazzan, but make little initial headway.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1915</td>
<td>The Italians suffer a defeat at the hand of Ramadan al-Suwayhli of Misrata, at the battle of Qasr Bu Hadi.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1915</td>
<td>Sulayman Al-Baruni returns from Istanbul to Libya as governor of Tripolitania.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1915</td>
<td>Ramadan al-Suwayhli and his followers form an independent republic at Misrata.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>April 1917</td>
<td>Sayyid Idris al-Sanusi, now head of the Sanusiyya, signs the Akrama Agreement with Italy, which placed virtually all of Cyrenaica under Sanusi control.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18 October 1918</td>
<td>Italian–Turkish peace treaty gives Italy nominal control over Tripolitania and Cyrenaica.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>October 1918</td>
<td>The defeated Ottoman Empire formally signs the Armistice agreements.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>November 1918</td>
<td>Al-Baruni and Suwayhli formally declare Tripolitania independent, resulting in the creation of the Tripolitanian Republic.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 June 1919</td>
<td>Italy recognizes, and issues statutes for, the Tripolitanian Republic.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>October 1919</td>
<td>Separate statutes known as the Legge Fondamentale, for Cyrenaica and Tripolitania, accepted by Italy; each province to have its own parliament and local councils.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>August 1920</td>
<td>Ramadan al-Suwayhli is killed in a battle with rival tribesmen who object to the Tripolitanian Republic.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Chronology, 1900–2011

October 1920
The al-Rajma Agreement between the Italians and the Sanusiyya confirms Sayyid Idris al-Sanusi as Amir of Cyrenaica.

November 1920
At the Gharyan conference Tripolitanian leaders attempt to forge a common agenda to press their demands vis-à-vis Italy.

28 July 1922
Representatives from the Gharyan conference offer the Amirate of Tripolitania to Sayyid Idris al-Sanusi.

October 1922
Benito Mussolini comes to power in Italy.

November 1922
Sayyid Idris accepts the Amirate of Tripolitania, and is now the recognized Amir of both Cyrenaica and Tripolitania.

December 1922
Sayyid Idris al-Sanusi leaves Cyrenaica for exile in Cairo where he will remain until after World War II.

1923
Umar al-Mukhtar organizes the resistance to the Italians in Cyrenaica after Sayyid Idris's exile to Cairo.

11 September 1931
Umar al-Mukhtar is captured by the Italians.

16 September 1931
Umar al-Mukhtar is executed.

June 1934
Mussolini visits Libya to inaugurate the Litoranea Libica and to have himself proclaimed Protector of Islam.

March 1937
The Libyan–Sudan border is agreed upon between Great Britain and Italy.

1938
Italy embarks upon grand-scale agricultural settlements in Libya.

August 1940
During a meeting in Cairo with Libyan exiles, Sayyid Idris al-Sanusi is authorized to negotiate with the British after the war for independence.

October–December 1942
Second battle of al-Alamein. As a result of the battles in Cyrenaica and western Egypt, the Italian settlers leave Cyrenaica and the Italians withdraw from Libya.

1943
The Allies’ expulsion of Germany and Italy from North Africa leads to the creation of a British Military Administration in Tripolitania and Cyrenaica, and of a French Military Administration in Fazzan.
LIBYA IN THE AFTERMATH OF WORLD WAR II

15 February 1947  Italy formally relinquishes its sovereignty over Libya.

6 March 1948  The Four Power Commission of Investigation arrives in Libya and finishes its work on 20 May.

15 September 1948  The United Nations General Assembly takes up the matter of Libyan independence.

10 May 1949  France and Great Britain publish the Bevin-Sforza plan, proposing ten-year trusteeships for the Libyan provinces. A resolution in support of the plan is defeated in the UN General Assembly.

June 1949  Cyrenaica creates an independent administration. Tripolitania, under British administration, creates municipal councils. Fazzan remains governed under French Military Administration.

21 November 1949  The United Nations General Assembly passes a resolution creating an “independent and sovereign state” of Libya, assigning to a future National Assembly the task of creating a provisional government of Libya.

25 November 1949  Libya’s National Assembly, consisting of sixty selected members chosen equally from the three provinces – Tripolitania, Cyrenaica, and Fazzan – meets in Tripoli for the first time in order to prepare the country’s constitution. It declares that Libya will be a federal state.

10 December 1949  The United Nations appoints Adrian Pelt as the UN Commissioner in Libya.

2 December 1950  Libya’s National Assembly decides to create as soon as possible a United Kingdom of Libya and offers Idris al-Sanusi the throne.

4 December 1950  The National Assembly creates a Committee of the Constitution to prepare a draft constitution.

March 1951  Provincial governments are created in Tripolitania and Fazzan.

29 March 1951  Libya’s National Assembly creates a provisional government.

10 September 1951  Discussions begin in the National Assembly on a draft constitution.
Chronology, 1900–2011

7 October 1951  Libya’s Constitution is promulgated by the National Assembly.

24 December 1951  The United Kingdom of Libya proclaims its independence and is headed by King Idris al-Sanusi.

19 February 1952  Libya holds its first general election. Political parties are banned in its aftermath.

25 March 1952  Libya’s Parliament meets for the first time.

12 February 1953  Libya joins the Arab League.

26 July 1953  Libya signs a twenty-year military agreement with Great Britain.

9 September 1954  Libya signs a military agreement with the United States.

5 October 1955  Assassination of Ibrahim al-Shalhi, Councilor to King Idris, by Al-Shariff Bin al-Sayyid Muhi al-Din al-Sanusi, grandson of Sayyid Ahmad al-Shariff and cousin of King Idris.

1955  Libyan Petroleum Law comes into effect, also creating the country’s Petroleum Commission.

24 May 1957  Mustafa Bin Halim resigns as Prime Minister.

1961  Amendments are added to the 1955 Libyan Petroleum Law.

25 October 1961  Libya’s first oil shipment leaves from Marsa al-Burayqa [Brega].

1962  Libya joins the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

January 1963  Re-establishment of Sanusi zuwaya (religious lodges).

April 1963  The federal arrangement is abandoned in favor of a unitary state.

May 1963  Libya launches its first five-year plan for economic and social development. Creation of a Ministry of Planning.

1963  First development plan from 1963 to 1968.

1965  Second set of amendments added to the 1955 Libyan Petroleum Law, followed by the creation of the Libyan National Oil Company.

April 1968  Creation of the Libyan Petroleum Company (LIPETCO).
July 1968
Libya announces that it will no longer award concession agreements, and that all future agreements will be awarded under joint ventures with LIPETCO.

1 September 1969
A military coup, headed by Mu’ammar al-Qadhafi, overthrows the monarchy.

29 October 1969
The Libyan government demands the withdrawal of all British troops and the liquidation of its military bases.

14 November 1969
The first foreign banks and hospitals in Libya are nationalized.

28 November 1969
First major speech by Qadhafi on why representative democracy is unsuited to Libya.

11 December 1969
Proclamation of the new Provisional Constitutional Declaration.

27 December 1969
Libya, Egypt, and Sudan sign the Tripoli Charter.

28 March 1970
British forces are requested to evacuate Al-Adem Airbase.

5 May 1970
First colloquium of Libyan intellectuals and revolutionaries to debate the revolutionary orientations of the country.

16 June 1970
The last American troops evacuate Wheelus Airbase.

21 June 1970
Confiscation of Italian-owned properties announced.

5 July 1970
First major laws on the nationalization of the oil industry, initially limited to the nationalization of the internal distribution networks of Shell and Esso.

1 August 1970
The internal distribution networks of the remaining oil companies are nationalized.

28 September 1970
President Nasser of Egypt dies.

14 November 1970
Administrative reorganization: creation of governorates (muhafadhat) and municipalities (baladiyyat) or districts (mudiriyyat) to break down traditional tribal administrative boundaries.

December 1970
Nationalization of all banks.

14 January 1971
At Zawiya, Qadhafi announces the creation of Popular Congresses.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>15 January 1971</td>
<td>Libyan Producers’ Agreements announced.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17 April 1971</td>
<td>Libya, Egypt, and Syria agree to create the Union of Arab Republics, to officially come into effect on 1 January 1972.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5 June 1971</td>
<td>All foreign cultural centers, except that of France, are closed.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12 June 1971</td>
<td>Creation of the Arab Socialist Union (ASU).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15 October 1971</td>
<td>All Libyan insurance companies are nationalized.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28 October 1971</td>
<td>Creation of a commission by the Revolutionary Command Council to revise the country’s legal system in conformity with Islamic law.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7 December 1971</td>
<td>British Petroleum nationalized.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28 March–7 April 1972</td>
<td>First national ASU congress in Tripoli.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12 April 1972</td>
<td>Abolition of the right to strike.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>30 May 1972</td>
<td>The ASU adopts a law making all political activities outside the single party punishable by death.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 August 1972</td>
<td>The United States reduces its embassy staff in Tripoli to fifteen members at Libya’s request.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>November 1972</td>
<td>Qadhafi for the first time specifically proclaims sovereignty over the Gulf of Sirt.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16 April 1973</td>
<td>Qadhafi issues his Third Universal Theory and announces the popular revolution in a speech at Zuwara.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18 April 1973</td>
<td>Creation of the first popular committees.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 June 1973</td>
<td>Popular committees take over the country’s television and radio stations.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8 June 1973</td>
<td>Libya accuses the United States of infringing its 100-mile “restricted air zone” off the Mediterranean coast. Tripoli expels a U.S. diplomat for not having an Arabic passport.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11 June 1973</td>
<td>The popular committees take over education, agriculture, and culture in the country.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11 August 1973</td>
<td>The Libyan government nationalizes 51% of Occidental Petroleum.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 September 1973</td>
<td>51% of all remaining foreign oil companies nationalized.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Chronology, 1900–2011

6 October 1973 Start of the Ramadan / Yom Kippur War, leading to the end of Qadhafi’s unity plans with Egypt.
18 October 1973 The average price of Libyan crude oil jumps from $4.604 to $9.061 per barrel.
26 October 1973 Libya embargoes oil exports to the United States for its support of Israel.
1 January 1974 The price of Libyan crude jumps from roughly $9 per barrel to $15.768 per barrel.
11 February 1974 Libya nationalizes three U.S. oil companies: Texaco, the Libyan American Oil Company, and California Asiatic.
7 April 1974 Qadhafi resigns to devote himself to revolutionary activities, becoming the qa’id ath-thawra (Leader of the Revolution), but remains head of the armed forces. Abd as-Salam Jallud becomes head of state.
May 1974 Jallud visits the Soviet Union and concludes the first major Soviet–Libyan arms agreement.
6 September 1974 Reinvigoration of the popular revolution.
1974 Libya concludes its first Exploration and Production-Sharing Arrangements (EPSA I).
2 March 1975 Student demonstrations against the Qadhafi government in Benghazi.
27 April 1975 New statutes of the ASU announced.
13 August 1975 First major abortive coup against the Qadhafi regime, led by two Revolutionary Command Council (RCC) members.
26 August 1975 Creation of Revolutionary Courts.
3 September 1975 Three major “socialist” laws are announced, restricting real-estate speculation and imports of certain goods.
12 September 1975 The United States announces restrictions on strategic equipment purchased by Libya and restrictions on training of Libyans in the use of certain types of aircraft.
17 September 1975 Publication of the first of several essays in Al-Fajr al-Jadid that will eventually become The Green Book.
November 1975 First Basic People’s Congresses created.
Chronology, 1900–2011

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>5–18 January 1976</td>
<td>The first General People’s Congress (GPC) convenes; the ASU is abolished.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7 April 1976</td>
<td>The government puts down student demonstrations.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25 May 1976</td>
<td>Qadhafi announces the creation of special committees that will intensify the revolution. They will eventually become the Revolutionary Committees.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17 September 1976</td>
<td>Official publication of Democracy, the first volume of The Green Book.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13–24 November 1976</td>
<td>Second meeting of the General People's Congress.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 February 1977</td>
<td>Libya is added to the United States Defense Department’s list of potential enemies of the United States.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28 February 1977</td>
<td>Extraordinary GPC meeting at Sabha to ratify the declaration of People’s Power.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 March 1977</td>
<td>Sabha Declaration: the GPC special congress declares Libya a Jamahiriyya – a state managed directly by its citizens. The Declaration on the Authority of the People replaces the Provisional Constitutional Declaration of 11 December 1969.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3 July 1977</td>
<td>Major debate between Qadhafi and the ulama at Tripoli’s Moulay Muhammad Mosque regarding the political and economic role of Islam in modern societies.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6 November 1977</td>
<td>Establishment of the first Revolutionary Committee in Tripoli.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 1978</td>
<td>Announcement of the elimination of private property.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 September 1978</td>
<td>First calls for the separation of “the instruments of the revolution” and “the instruments of governing.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Date</td>
<td>Event Description</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>--------------------</td>
<td>--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19 December 1978</td>
<td>Qadhafi resigns as Secretary General of the General People's Congress to dedicate himself to the intensification of the revolution.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>December 1978</td>
<td>Intensification of the campaign to abolish all retail and private trading.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 March 1979</td>
<td>Remaining Revolutionary Command Council members are relieved of their duties. The GPC issues “The Declaration on the Separation of Rule and Revolution,” officially separating the “instruments of the revolution” and the “instruments of government.”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 June 1979</td>
<td>Publication of The Social Basis of the Third Universal Theory, the third part of The Green Book.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 September 1979</td>
<td>Libyan embassies are converted into People's Bureaus. Announcement of the creation of Revolutionary Committees within the Libyan army.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 December 1979</td>
<td>Attack on the U.S. embassy in Tripoli; the embassy is set on fire.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>29 December 1979</td>
<td>Libya is put on the U.S. State Department’s list of sponsors of state terrorism.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1979</td>
<td>Libya concludes its second Exploration and Production-Sharing Arrangements (EPSA II).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3 February 1980</td>
<td>Qadhafi calls for the physical liquidation of Libyan dissidents – “stray dogs” – living abroad.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15 February 1980</td>
<td>The U.S. embassy in Tripoli closes.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spring through Fall 1980</td>
<td>First campaign spearheaded by the Revolutionary Committees to eliminate Libyan opponents – “stray dogs” – overseas.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 1980</td>
<td>Elimination of private savings accounts.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16 May 1980</td>
<td>26 U.S. citizens expelled from Libya; the United States withdraws its two remaining diplomats.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 September 1980</td>
<td>Libyan–Syrian union announced. Libya opens itself up to all Arabs and creates Arab passports.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6 May 1981</td>
<td>The United States closes the Libyan embassy in Washington.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12 May 1981</td>
<td>The right to maintain private practices for all professional occupations is abolished.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Chronology, 1900–2011

19 August 1981 Two Libyan aircraft downed by the United States over the Gulf of Sirt.
7 October 1981 Creation of the National Front for the Salvation of Libya, an opposition movement to Qadhafi.
4 November 1981 Exxon withdraws its operations from Libya.
10 March 1982 The United States bans all exports except food and medicine to Libya; the import of Libyan oil into the United States is prohibited.
13 December 1982 Qadhafi announces the replacement of the country's armed forces by a popular army.
January 1983 Exxon withdraws its operations from Libya.
June 1983 Second major Libyan invasion of Chad.
Spring 1984 New campaign against “stray dogs.” Creation of state supermarkets.
17 April 1984 British policewoman Yvonne Fletcher is fatally shot by Libyan security personnel outside the Libyan embassy in London, leading to a rupture in British–Libyan relations.
July/September 1985 Libya expels large numbers of foreign laborers, in an effort to help balance the country's budget in the wake of lowered oil revenues.
15 November 1985 President Reagan bans the import of all refined petroleum products from Libya.
7 January 1986 The United States invokes the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, halting imports of all goods and services of Libyan origin. U.S. companies are prohibited from engaging in industrial or commercial contracts with Libya.
5 April 1986 A bomb explodes at a discotheque in West Berlin, killing three people.
15 April 1986 U.S. aerial attack on Tripoli and Benghazi. In its aftermath, officially organized demonstrations in Tripoli are lackluster. Qadhafi fails to make public addresses for several weeks. The European Union agrees to more restrictive visa policies for Libyan nationals.
6 May 1986 The leaders of the G7 countries vow to fight terrorism and single out Libya as a major perpetrator.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>30 June 1986</td>
<td>The U.S. Treasury Department forces remaining U.S. oil companies to leave Libya but allows them to negotiate standstill agreements, retaining ownership for three years while allowing the Libyan National Oil Company to operate the fields.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 1987</td>
<td>At the GPC meeting, criticism of the country’s economic hardships paves the way for an attempted economic and political liberalization.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26 March 1987</td>
<td>Announcement of Libya’s first infitah (economic liberalization).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23 May 1987</td>
<td>Qadhafi speech on industrial and agricultural reform.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 September 1987</td>
<td>Qadhafi speech at the anniversary celebrations of the revolution, allowing the re-introduction of a private sector.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>22 November 1987</td>
<td>The Revolutionary Committees are severely criticized at the thirteenth General People’s Congress.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 1988</td>
<td>Creation of the Ministry of Mass Mobilization and Revolutionary Orientation to limit and institutionalize the power of the revolutionary committees.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>May 1988</td>
<td>Curtailment of the power of the Jamahiriyya’s revolutionary courts. They are replaced by People’s Courts.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>21 December 1988</td>
<td>Pan Am flight 103 explodes over Lockerbie.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1988</td>
<td>Libya concludes its third Exploration and Production Sharing Arrangements (EPSA-III).</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 January 1989</td>
<td>U.S. fighter jets down two Libyan aircraft over the Gulf of Sirt.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 September 1989</td>
<td>Libya agrees to submit the Aouzou dispute to the International Court of Justice.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19 September 1989</td>
<td>French airliner UTA 772 explodes over Niger.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15 November 1991</td>
<td>Libya is indicted by the United States and Great Britain in connection with the 1988 Lockerbie bombing of Pan Am 103. Two Libyans are charged with the bombing.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| 21 January 1992   | The United Nations Security Council unanimously approves a resolution requiring Libya to cooperate with investigations made by the United States and Great Britain in the Lockerbie incident by surrendering two of its citizens.

31 March 1992 The United Nations Security Council passes Resolution 748, asking Libya to turn over suspects in the Lockerbie and UTA cases.

11 November 1993 The UN passes Resolution 883, strengthening existing sanctions and freezing Libyan assets in foreign banks, as well as banning imports of spare parts for the country’s oil industry.

3 February 1994 The International Court of Justice assigns the Aouzou strip to Chad, voiding Libya’s claim to the disputed territory.

October 1994 Major rebellion by army units near Misrata are put down by units loyal to Qadhafi.

11 November 1994 The United Nations Security Council further extends its embargo against Libya.

5 August 1996 The United States adopts the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act that penalizes all firms (including foreign ones) that invest more than $40 million in the Libyan energy sector.

April 1998 Libya confirms that it will allow a trial of the Lockerbie defendants in a neutral country, operating under Scottish law.

24 August 1998 The United States and Great Britain agree to a trial in the Netherlands for the Lockerbie suspects.

27 August 1998 The United Nations Security Council passes Resolution 1192, promising to suspend economic sanctions if Libya turns over the Lockerbie suspects.

5 April 1999 Libya agrees to surrender the two Lockerbie suspects for trial in the Netherlands.

11 June 1999 Libyan and U.S. officials meet for the first time in eighteen years to discuss the UN sanctions.

September 1999 Libya organizes a special meeting of the Organization of African Unity in Sirt.
Chronology, 1900–2011

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Date</th>
<th>Event Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>25 March 2000</td>
<td>U.S. State Department officials visit Libya to assess lifting the ban on travel into Libya.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3 May 2000</td>
<td>The Lockerbie trial opens.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>31 January 2001</td>
<td>A panel of three judges finds one of the Libyan Lockerbie defendants guilty and acquits the other.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>March 2003</td>
<td>The GPC adopts legislation to reform the Libyan economy.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>June 2003</td>
<td>Dr. Shukri Ghanem is appointed as Prime Minister, in part to guide the economic reform efforts.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>May 2003</td>
<td>Libya approaches Britain and the United States to discuss outstanding issues, including weapons of mass destruction. Libya makes an offer to the Lockerbie families for a settlement that ties compensation to the lifting of sanctions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>August 2003</td>
<td>Libya and the Lockerbie victims’ families agree on a framework for compensation totaling $2.7 billion.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18 August 2003</td>
<td>Libya and the International Monetary Fund (IMF) conclude Article IV consultations.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12 September 2003</td>
<td>The UN Security Council votes to lift sanctions against Libya.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23 October 2003</td>
<td>The IMF issues Public Information Notice 03/125 following the conclusion of Article IV consultations.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19 December 2003</td>
<td>The Libyan government announces that the country will abandon its pursuit of weapons of mass destruction.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>January 2004</td>
<td>The United States removes from Libya equipment and documents related to the country’s nuclear and missile programs, and starts to destroy its chemical munitions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9 January 2004</td>
<td>Libya agrees to pay additional compensation to the families of victims of a French UTA airliner that exploded in 1989 over Niger.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>February 2004</td>
<td>Muhammad Al-Baradei, Director General of the International Atomic Energy Agency, arrives in Tripoli for discussions to dismantle Libya’s nuclear program.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26 February 2004</td>
<td>President Bush issues an executive order that will allow American companies to begin negotiating a</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>