Talking About Right and Wrong

Though it is generally acknowledged that parents are directly implicated in how and what their children learn about right and wrong, little is known about how the process of moral socialization proceeds in the context of family life, and how it gets played out in actual parent–child conversations. This volume brings together psychological research conducted in different countries documenting how parents and their children of different ages talk about everyday issues that bear on right and wrong. More than 150 excerpts from real parent–child conversations about children’s own good and bad behaviors and about broader ethical concerns that interest both parents and children, such as global warming or gender equality, provide a unique window into the moral-socialization process in action. Talking About Right and Wrong also underscores distinct psychological and socio-cultural processes that explain how such everyday conversations may further, or hinder, children’s moral development.

CECILIA WAINRYB is a Professor of Developmental Psychology at the University of Utah.

HOLLY E. RECCHIA is an Assistant Professor of Education at Concordia University.
Talking About Right and Wrong

Parent–Child Conversations as Contexts for Moral Development

Cecilia Wainryb and Holly E. Recchia
To Julia and Samuel – our favorite conversation partners, and the most thrilling catalysts for our own development
Contents

List of figures \hspace{1cm} page x
List of tables \hspace{1cm} xi
List of contributors \hspace{1cm} xii
Acknowledgments \hspace{1cm} xiv

Part I  Introduction

1 Parent–child conversations as contexts for moral development: Why conversations, and why conversations with parents? \hspace{1cm} 3
CECILIA WAINRYB AND HOLLY E. RECCHIA

Part II  Parent–child conversations: Contents, contexts, and consequences

2 Family talk about moral issues: The toddler and preschool years \hspace{1cm} 21
JUDY DUNN AND CLAIRE HUGHES

3 Remember drawing on the cupboard? New Zealand Māori, European, and Pasifika parents’ conversations about children’s transgressions \hspace{1cm} 44
ELAINE REESE, MELE TAUMOEPEAU, AND TIA NEHA

4 Taiwanese parent–child conversations for moral guidance: Uncovering the ubiquitous but enigmatic process \hspace{1cm} 71
JIN LI, HEIDI FUNG, AND EVA CHIAN-HUI CHEN

5 Constructing moral, emotional, and relational understandings in the context of mother–child reminiscing \hspace{1cm} 98
DEBORAH LAIBLE AND TIA PANFILE MURPHY
Contents

6 Caught red-handed: How Italian parents engage children in moral discourse and action  122
LAURA STERPONI

7 Parent mediation of sibling conflict: Addressing issues of fairness and morality  143
HILDY ROSS

8 Judging fairness in the face of gender stereotypes: Examining the nature and impact of mother–child conversations  168
LACEY J. HILLIARD AND LYNN S. LIBEN

9 Discussions of moral issues emerging in family conversations about science  193
MAUREEN CALLANAN, ARACELI VALLE, MEGAN LUCE, AND JENNIFER RIGNEY

10 “Did you apologize?” Moral talk in European-American and Chinese immigrant mother–child conversations of peer experiences  217
QI WANG AND QINGFANG SONG

11 Mother–child conversations about hurting others: Supporting the construction of moral agency through childhood and adolescence  242
HOLLY E. RECCHIA AND CECILIA WAINRYB

12 Voice and power: Constructing moral agency through personal and intergenerational narratives  270
ROBYN FIVUSH, NATALIE MERRILL, AND KELLY MARIN

Part III Parent–child conversations: Processes and mechanisms

13 Moral development, conversation, and the development of internal working models  299
ROSS A. THOMPSON AND ABBY C. WINER

14 Parent–child conversations from the perspective of socialization theory  334
JOAN E. GRUSEC
Contents ix

15 Conversations in the home: The role of dialogue and resistance in children's emerging understandings of morality, convention, and the personal 367
LARRY NUCCI

16 Constructing the good enough self: Parent–child conversations and moral development from an identity framework 389
MONISHA PASUPATHI

17 Placing discursive practices front and center: A socio-cultural approach to the study of early socialization 416
PEGGY J. MILLER

Subject index 448
Figures

2.1 Association between mothers’ references to baby and children’s friendly approaches

2.2 Percentage of conflict incidents in which different justifications used
Tables

3.1 Description of studies of moral talk from three New Zealand cultures
   page 52
3.2 Coding parent–child transgression talk
   54
3.3 Percentages of conversations from each New Zealand culture for each coding category
   55
6.1 Types of priming moves and expected remedial responses
   136
6.2 Frequencies and percentages of types of priming moves
   137
6.3 Frequencies and percentages of types of priming moves in two age groups
   137
7.1 Parents and children discuss the children’s interests and emotions during conflict
   150
7.2 Effects of parent mediation on children’s independent conflict negotiations: Blame, emotions, and interests
   162
8.1 Range, mean, and variance of coded categories in mother–child conversations
   176
9.1 Coding categories for mentions of moral issues in parent–child conversations
   201
Contributors

MAUREEN CALLANAN, Department of Psychology, University of California, Santa Cruz

EVA CHIAN-HUI CHEN, Department of Psychological Sciences, Benedictine College

JUDY DUNN, Institute of Psychiatry, King’s College London

ROBYN FIVUSH, Department of Psychology, Emory University

HEIDI FUNG, Institute of Ethnology, Academia Sinica, Taiwan

JOAN E. GRUSEC, Department of Psychology, University of Toronto

LACEY J. HILLIARD, Institute for Applied Research in Youth Development, Tufts University

CLAIRE HUGHES, Centre for Family Research, Social and Political Sciences, University of Cambridge

DEBORAH LAIBLE, Department of Psychology, Lehigh University

JIN LI, Department of Education, Brown University

LYNN S. LIBEN, Department of Psychology, The Pennsylvania State University

MEGAN LUCE, Graduate School of Education, Stanford University

KELLY MARIN, Department of Psychology, Manhattan College

NATALIE MERRILL, Department of Psychology, Emory University

PEGGY J. MILLER, Department of Psychology, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

TIA NEHA, Department of Psychology, University of Otago
List of contributors

LARRY NUCCI, Graduate School of Education, University of California, Berkeley
TIA PANFILE MURPHY, Department of Psychology, Washington College
MONISHA PASUPATHI, Department of Psychology, University of Utah
HOLLY E. RECCHIA, Department of Education, Concordia University
ELAINE REESE, Department of Psychology, University of Otago
JENNIFER RIGNEY, Visitor Research Department, Monterey Bay Aquarium
HILDY ROSS, Department of Psychology, University of Waterloo
QINGFANG SONG, Department of Human Development, Cornell University
LAURA STERPONI, Graduate School of Education, University of California, Berkeley
MELE TAUMOEPEAU, Department of Psychology, University of Otago
ROSS A. THOMPSON, Department of Psychology, University of California, Davis
ARACELI VALLE, School of Education, University of Alaska, Fairbanks
CECILIA WAINRYB, Department of Psychology, University of Utah
QI WANG, Department of Human Development, Cornell University
ABBY C. WAINER, Department of Human Development, University of California, Davis
Acknowledgments

The catalyst for this volume was a research symposium on “Parent–Child Conversations as Contexts for Moral Development” that we organized at the biennial meetings of the Society for Research in Child Development in 2011. We are thankful to Debbie Laible, Tia Panfile, Laura Sterponi, and Ross Thompson for their wonderful contributions to that symposium and for the most thoughtful discussions that followed it. We are also indebted to the members of the Social Development Laboratory at the University of Utah for many enriching conversations about the ideas that form the focus of this volume. Finally, we would like to thank Stacia Bourne and Kris Oldroyd for their thorough reading of the final draft of the manuscript, and Hetty Marx, Rebecca Taylor, Carrie Parkinson, Jenny Slater, and the editorial staff at Cambridge University Press for their enthusiastic support and guidance in bringing the final volume to fruition.