Drawn from the Ground

Sand stories from Central Australia are a traditional form of Aboriginal women’s verbal art that incorporates speech, song, sign, gesture and drawing. Small leaves and other objects may be used to represent story characters. This detailed study of Arandic sand stories takes a multimodal approach to the analysis of the stories and shows how the expressive elements used in the stories are orchestrated together.

This richly illustrated volume is essential reading for anyone interested in language and communication. It adds to the growing recognition that language encompasses much more than speech alone and shows how important it is to consider the various semiotic resources employed in communication as an integrated whole rather than in isolation.

Jennifer Green is a research fellow in the School of Languages and Linguistics at the University of Melbourne. She has over thirty years’ experience working on projects documenting Indigenous languages, history and visual arts.
This series looks at the role of language in human cognition – language in both its universal, psychological aspects and its variable, cultural aspects. Studies focus on the relation between semantic and conceptual categories and processes, especially as these are illuminated by cross-linguistic and cross-cultural studies, the study of language acquisition and conceptual development, and the study of the relation of speech production and comprehension to other kinds of behaviour in cultural context. Books come principally, though not exclusively, from research associated with the Max Planck Institute for Psycholinguistics in Nijmegen, and in particular the Language and Cognition Group.

1 Jan Nuyts and Eric Pederson (eds.) Language and Conceptualization
2 David McNeill (ed.) Language and Gesture
3 Melissa Bowerman and Stephen C. Levinson (eds.) Language Acquisition and Conceptual Development
4 Gunter Senft (ed.) Systems of Nominal Classification
5 Stephen C. Levinson Space in Language and Cognition
6 Stephen C. Levinson and David Wilkins (eds.) Grammars of Space
7 N. J. Enfield and Tanya Stivers (eds.) Person Reference in Interaction: Linguistic, cultural and social perspectives
8 N. J. Enfield The Anatomy of Meaning: Speech, gesture, and composite utterances
9 Giovanni Bennardo Language, Space, and Social Relationships: A foundational cultural model in Polynesia
10 Paul Kockelman Language, Culture, and Mind: Natural constructions and social kinds
11 Jürgen Bohnemeyer and Eric Pederson Event Representation in Language and Cognition
12 Jan P. de Ruiter (ed.) Questions: Formal, functional and interactional perspectives
13 Jennifer Green Drawn from the Ground: Sound, sign and inscription in Central Australian sand stories
Drawn from the Ground

Sound, Sign and Inscription in Central Australian Sand Stories

Jennifer Green

University of Melbourne
A storyteller’s practised hand inscribed in sand
a desert tale of spirits caught.
Composed of thought that’s burnished by an ancient tongue in verses sung,
she traced their footsteps in among the rocks and range and to a gap.
Her lines all linked to form a map inscribed in sand, composed of thought in verses sung.

DPW 2012
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>List of illustrations</th>
<th>page ix</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>List of tables</td>
<td>xv</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Acknowledgements</td>
<td>xvi</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1 Introduction

1.1 The Arandic language region 4
1.2 A multimodal approach to communication 6
1.3 Sign and gesture in sand stories 12
1.4 Tracks and traces: iconicity in sign, sand and gesture 16
1.5 Space and frames of reference 19
1.6 A multimodal perspective on gradient phenomena 28
1.7 Relationships between gesture and speech 30
1.8 Outline of the remainder of the book 32

2 Sand stories as social and cultural practice

2.1 Previous documentations of sand stories 35
2.2 Lexical semantics of the term tyepety 41
2.3 Dreamtime, Dreaming and the meanings of Altyerr 43
2.4 Sand story styles 44
2.5 Techniques and tools 53
2.6 Mapping, diagramming and games in Central Australia 59
2.7 Sand stories and awely ceremonies 64
2.8 The end of the story 66
2.9 Concluding comment 68

3 Catching a move as it flies: multimodal data collection and annotation

3.1 Recording naturalistic data in challenging conditions 71
3.2 Coding and transcription 74
3.3 The ‘sand quiz’: testing the meaning of V-units 88
3.4 Representing multimodal events as transcript 93
3.5 Concluding comment 98

4 Lines in the sand

4.1 Conventionalized ground-ground type V-units 100
4.2 Visible paths in sand 101
4.3 Combinations of static and dynamic elements 115

© in this web service Cambridge University Press  www.cambridge.org
Contents

4.4 Motion and multimodality 121
4.5 The interpretation of motion in space 128
4.6 Innovation and change 131
4.7 Concluding comment 135

5 Body-anchored and airborne action 137
5.1 Previous work on Aboriginal sign languages and gesture in Australia 137
5.2 Handsigns in sand stories 145
5.3 Pointing in sand stories 152
5.4 A tunnel ball game in sand 157
5.5 Concluding comment 163

6 Ordering, redrawing and erasure 166
6.1 V-units and the order of narrative events 166
6.2 Erasing the story space 176
6.3 The role of deictic units in transitions between frames 191

7 Vocal style in sand stories 195
7.1 'Talking song' and 'singing story' 196
7.2 Some features of Arandic songs 198
7.3 Doodlebugs and bogeymen: repeated text and borrowed words in a sand story 203
7.4 A 'sung' sand story 209
7.5 Concluding comment 219

8 Crossing boundaries 222
8.1 Multimodality, forms and functions in sand stories 223
8.2 Alternative representations in sand, sign and gesture 224
8.3 Convention or continuously varying forms? 227
8.4 Coordination across modalities 230
8.5 Verbal art, visual art 231
8.6 Inscriptive practices: beyond Central Australia 235
8.7 Concluding comment 240

Appendix 1: Abbreviations, glossing and orthographic conventions 244
Appendix 2: Summary of six stories annotated in detail 247
Bibliography 248
Index 265

The colour plates can be found between pages 110 and 111
Illustrations

Maps

1 Map showing the location of Arandic languages and their neighbouring languages (languages belonging to the Arandic group are in bold italics) page 5

Figures

1.1 A continuum from gesticulation to sign 13
1.2 Two interlocking spatial frames used in sand stories. Interlocutors are shown in varying orientations to the drawing space 19
1.3 North-south orientation of a drawn windbreak in an Alyawarr sand story 23
1.4 Cave painting of an emu sitting on eggs, recorded by Baldwin Spencer in the Gill Range. Spencer, B. (1896) Part IV. Anthropology. Plate 4 (detail) 24
1.5 Gestures accompanying the Kaytetye whirlywind song 27
1.6 Ceremony: Hunting and fishing. Tommy McCrae (c. 1860). Pen and ink on blue paper, 22 cm × 32.3 cm. Pictures collection, State Library of Victoria. Reproduced with permission 32
2.1 Child drawing wati mumu or devil man on the Ooldea sandhills (1934). N.B. Tindale Collection, South Australian Museum, Series AA 338/5/13/7 38
2.2 Sand drawing of a vehicle with passengers 39
2.3 A grandmother and granddaughter practise drawing 47
2.4 Women telling a tyepetye story. Margaret Kemarre Turner (2007). Acrylic on canvas. Reproduced with permission of the artist 49
2.5 Story-wire drawing session with three participants 50
2.6 Variations in the shape and size of story-wires. The shorter one was specifically made for a small child to use and the longer for teenage girls 54
2.7 Story-wire worn around the neck in Ngaanyatjarra communities

2.8 Open handshape with palm contacting the ground. Used for drawing and erasing

2.9 Inverted open handshape with fingers trailing across the ground

2.10 Handshape used for painting awely ceremonial designs

2.11 Handshape used to impact on the ground

2.12 Narrator moves two leaves across the story space, leaving a trail of dots

2.13 Drawing lines on the ground to represent bird species

2.14 Arrernte string figures demonstrated by Veronica Perrurle Dobson, Alice Springs, August 2007: (a) arrwe iltingke ‘group of wallabies’, (b) angentye ‘soakage’, (c) iretye ‘eaglehawk’, (d) eaglehawk and chick

2.15 Wild fig leaves (used to represent story characters) and story-stick bundled up at the end of a sand story

3.1 Sand story recording set-up with one camera attached to a ladder and another mounted on a tripod

3.2 Screen shot from an elan annotation file with two video clips imported and synchronized

3.3 Tier structure of elan annotation file

3.4 A schematic representation of a G-unit, showing the difference between Kendon’s and McNeill’s definitions of a gesture ‘phrase’

3.5 A deictic move of the ground-air type

3.6 Diagram showing preparation/recovery phases for ground-ground moves

3.7 The ordering of moves in a V-unit representing ‘fire’

3.8 Three V-units representing ‘motion’

3.9 A schematic representation of a visual frame consisting of a series of three V-units

3.10 The accumulation of ground-ground and ground-air units in a visual frame just prior to total erasure and just after it: (a) the end of a visual frame, (b) the beginning of a new frame after erasure

3.11 An example of three sequential V-units in a leaf-story (Story 3)

3.12 Sand drawing of a traditional shelter

3.13 A schematic representation of the spatial arrangements of V-units in a sequence of two visual frames: (a) visual frame 1, (b) visual frame 2

3.14 Anmatyerr sign EMU

4.1 Some variations in the representation of ‘person’: (a) drawn with a ‘flat’ hand, (b) drawn with fingers, (c) drawn with a stick, (d) a person with a wounded leg
List of illustrations

4.2 Sand drawing of two nested figures, representing a mother and child 103

4.3 (a) Leaves with women’s ceremonial designs scratched onto them, (b) leaf (on right) modified to represent a mother carrying a child on her hip or shoulder 104

4.4 Varying representations of ‘fire’: (a), (b) drawn with the hand; (c) drawn with a stick 105

4.5 A pair of ‘person’ V-units facing each other 109

4.6 Sand drawing of the trackprints of a person and several dogs 112

4.7 A V-unit representing motion around a plant 114

4.8 Sand drawing of figures in motion 116

4.9 A man from the arnkenty and a woman from the arlweker move towards each other 117

4.10 Path of four referents (1) 118

4.11 Path of four referents (2) 118

4.12 Broken lines representing ‘walking’ 118

4.13 Sand drawing of the path a character follows to exit a house 120

4.14 Motion of two characters towards a creek 120

4.15 Two moves in a sand story about picking desert raisins (Story 2) 123

4.16 Three sequential V-units (Story 2) 124

4.17 Whirlywind brothers story (Unit 1) 125

4.18 Whirlywind brothers story (Units 2 and 4) 126

4.20 ‘Flattening’ of the computer screen when viewing sand story data 129

4.21 Interpreting spatial aspects of motion (1): (a) orientation of narrator, (b) orientation of viewer 129

4.22 Interpreting spatial aspects of motion (2): (a) orientation of narrator, (b) orientation of first viewer, (c) orientation of second viewer 130

4.23 (a) Spatially dissonant view of three people behind a windbreak (interlocutor facing east), (b) spatially congruent view (interlocutor facing south) 131

4.24 Sand drawing of a camp scene 132

4.25 Teenage narrator draws an orthographic ‘w’ 133

4.26 Representations of the Alice Springs football oval and the town centre by two teenage narrators 134

4.27 A drawing representing sleeping figures (with heads shown) 135
xii List of illustrations

5.1 (a) Sign for Solanum chippendalei (bush tomato), (b) base of the sign – cleaning out the bitter seeds using the katjalarra/katyelarr tool 142

5.2 Three handshapes used in Arrernte manual pointing, and the ‘horned’ handshape 143

5.3a ‘Elder sister’ sand story graphic schema 146
5.3b Narrator signs DIE over the story space 146
5.4 Narrator signs KURDATIChA 147
5.5 Arandic sign HUSBAND/WIFE, etc. 148
5.6 Representation of picking fruit (Unit 1) 150
5.7 Representation of placing fruit into dish (Unit 2, highlighted) 150
5.8 Representation of tewem ‘rubbing fruits on the ground’ (Unit 3) 151
5.9 Arandic sign PICK 151
5.10 Arandic sign PUT 151
5.11 Wide-hand point denoting plural reference in a leaf-story 153
5.12 One-finger point indicating singular reference 154
5.13 Two-finger point in a leaf-story 155
5.14 ‘Forked’ two-finger point in a leaf-story 156
5.15 A point to the plane behind the narrator 156
5.16 Sand drawing of a tunnel ball game (Story 5, F1:1–4) 158
5.17 Sand drawing of a tunnel ball game (Story 5, F1:5–14) 159
5.18 Sand drawing of a tunnel ball game (Story 5, F1:17–39) 160
5.19 Air-air units in a sand story about a tunnel ball game: (a) ‘They would stand with their legs wide apart’ (F1:10), (b) ‘. . . throw the tunnel ball under’ (F1:24) (Illustrations Jenny Taylor) 162
5.20 Two views of a deictic gesture that signals a shift from one sand story frame to the next 164

6.1 Twelve sequential V-units in a sand story (Story 1) 168
6.2 Units 1–8 in a sand story about collecting pencil yams 169
6.3 Units 9–12 in a sand story about collecting pencil yams 171
6.4 (a) Arrangement of leaf characters in a Kaytetye leaf-story (Story 3); (b) Units 1, 2 and 3 173
6.5 Two sequential units in a Kaytetye leaf-story (Story 3): (a) Unit 4, (b) Unit 5 174
6.6 Two sequential units in a Kaytetye leaf-story (Story 3): (a) Unit 7, (b) Unit 9 175
6.7 Get up after sleep 179
6.8 Example of partial erasure: change of stance 180
6.9 Example of partial erasure: change of orientation 180
6.10 Relocation of objects: (a) a woman with a dish and digging stick, (b) the woman stands up, (c) the woman moves off 181
6.11 (a) Sand drawing of a woman with a dish in front of her, (b) the woman is erased and one dish is redrawn
6.12 Dancing action of women (units 7–12) and redraw of man (13)
6.13 (a) Three units preceding erasure of frame, (b) four units at the beginning of a new frame
6.14 (a) Units 38, 39, 40, 41 prior to partial erasure of the space, (b) after the partial erasure
6.15 Drawing of dishes of food and motion lines
6.16 Drawing space filled with representations of desert raisin plants
6.17 (a) Dishes with fruits, (b) grinding and transfer of fruit, (c) grinding the fruit (handshape used)
6.18 Schematic representation of two alternate spaces in a sand story
6.19 Ground-air units at the end of visual frames: (a) end of visual frame 2 (Story 1, F2:12–15), (b) end of visual frame 4 (Story 1, F4:1–4)
6.20 Simplification of the transitions between two narrative spaces (A and B)
7.1 Pitch contours showing contrast between ‘song’ and rapidly intoned speech. The first part is ‘sung’ and corresponds to (7:06) and the second part is rapidly intoned speech (7:08)
7.2 Eastern Anmatyerr ‘Elder sister’ sand story, showing the spiral path followed by the two sisters
7.3 The falling pitch contour associated with the journey of the younger sister after her encounter with the kurdaicha, inwards along the spiral path
7.4 Establishment of visual frame (F1:1–6)
7.5 Dancing action of women (Units 7–12) and redraw of man (13)
7.6 Enactment of covering head with feathers (F1:15)
7.7 Units showing dancing action of women (F1:17–20)
7.8 The seated men are redrawn (Units 22, 23, 24, 26)
7.9 Units showing dancing action of women (F1:30–34)
8.1 Variations in the sign COOLAMON: (a) demonstrated by April Pengart Campbell, (b) demonstrated by Janie Pwerrelr Long
8.2 Young Bethel girl using her ivory storyknife to draw the floorplan of a house while telling a tale. Photograph Hans Himmelheber, Alaska, Bethel, 1936. Copyright by Museum Rietberg Zürich, gift of the community of heirs of Hans Himmelheber
8.3 Sand drawing depicting the creation of the Rom mask, drawn by Benjamin Tekon from Ranvetlam village, North Ambrym. Photograph Mike Franjieh. Reproduced with permission of the artist
List of illustrations

8.4 The late Kenneth Hale at work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1988. Photographs courtesy of MIT. Photographer S. D. Sloan. Reproduced with permission of the Hale family 238

8.5 Sonogram of Dusky Grasswren's song (detail). John Wolseley (2005). Watercolour, graphite, carbonised wood on paper, 56 cm x 76 cm. Reproduced with permission of the artist 240

Colour plates

1 A sand story ‘stage set’ with leaf characters, a fire pit and branches for putting cooked meat on (Veronica Perrurle Dobson recorded at Emily Gap, NT, July 2007). Photograph J. Green

2 The rich red palate of the ground in an Eastern Anmatyerr sand story (Rosie Pwerl, Utopia, NT, August 2011). Photograph J. Green

3 Recording Kaytetye sand stories near Artarr community, July 2011 (Tommy Thompson Kngwarreye, Myfany Turpin and Carol Thompson). Photograph J. Green

6 Awerratherre – Hamilton Downs. Wenten Rubuntja (1982). Synthetic polymer paint on hardboard, 60 cm x 91 cm. Gift of Papunya Tula Artists Pty Ltd. Painting courtesy of the National Gallery of Australia (see Rubuntja and Green 2002: 83)

7 Violet Petyarr telling the ‘Elder sister’ sand story. Iylenty outstation, Utopia, NT, November 2011. Photograph J. Green

8 Using the story-wire in Western Desert. Elizabeth Marrkilyi Ellis, Tjukurla 2012. Photograph J. Green

10 Grandmother’s stories (2012). Christine Laidlaw preparing a mould for making slumped glass by tracing designs in a bed of fine sand. Photograph Gary Proctor, Warburton Arts, reproduced with permission
Tables

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Table</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1.1</td>
<td>Modalities and semiotic systems used in sand stories</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3.1</td>
<td>Transcript conventions for move types and for total and partial erasure</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.1</td>
<td>A selection of static sand drawing elements</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.2</td>
<td>Pluralized V-units</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.3</td>
<td>V-units representing relations of enclosure and containment</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.4</td>
<td>Some composite V-units</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.5</td>
<td>Orientation of ‘person’ V-units to each other</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.6</td>
<td>Some relations between ‘person’ V-units and other items</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.7</td>
<td>Variation in forms of motion paths</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.8</td>
<td>V-units composed of sequences of static and dynamic elements</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6.1</td>
<td>Frequency and types of erasure in the sand story corpus</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.1</td>
<td>Words for ‘ant-lion’ and ‘elder sister’ in some Arandic languages</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.2</td>
<td>Distribution and functions of V-units in a sand story</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8.1</td>
<td>Distribution of V-unit types in the sand story corpus</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>95</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>106</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>107</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>108</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>109</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>110</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>111</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>119</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>121</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>182</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>205</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>219</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>224</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Acknowledgements

I am deeply grateful to the Aboriginal people from Central Australia who have contributed to the research for this study of sand stories. Many have been my mentors and teachers, some over decades. The research represented in this book is the culmination of long and valued collaborations between us, beginning with work on Aboriginal spoken-language dictionaries and on oral histories and then moving into the visual realm of sign language, gesture and some forms of drawing. I am indebted to these women and men for their generosity and their patience as teachers, and for allowing me the opportunity to begin to understand something of the richness and diversity of their languages and narrative practices. This book is dedicated to all those who endeavour to keep these traditions alive. I particularly thank Hilda (Cookie) Menmatwek Pwerl, who was amongst my first Anmatyerr teachers at Utopia, in Central Australia, in the mid 1970s. Cookie taught me spoken language, and then we moved on to sign and sand. I also thank many others, including Margaret Kemapur Turner (OAM), Veronica Perrurle Dobson (AM), Margaret Pengarte Heffeman, Violet Petyarr, Janie Metyaylan Briscoe, Eileen Pwererl Campbell, Clarrie Kemarr Long, Amy Ngamperle, Mary Nangala, April Pengart Campbell, Janie Pwererl Long, Mary Kemarr, Mary Ngal, Katie Kemarr, Lucky Ngwarray, Fanny Metyaylan, Renee Metyaylan Mclean, Dorothy Metyaylan, Weetji Metyaylan, Weeta Ngwarray, Wendy Metyaylan, Peggy Metyaylan, Rita Ngal, Kitty Peltharr, Kitty Kakatiew Peltharr, Jessie Peltharr, Myrtle Petyarr, Nancy Petyarr, Patsy Metyaylan Morton, Rosie Pwerl, Lena Pwerl, Rosie Ngwarray Kunoth, Alison Ngamperle Ross, Acacia Lewis, Letishia Bartlett, Marissa Gibson, Elisha Garawirrtja, Maria Long, Jancita Dixon, Josephine Foster, Josie Douglas, Kathleen Kemaputur, Tommy Thompson Kngwarreye and Elizabeth Marrkilyi Ellis.

For providing guidance and inspiration during the initial process of researching and writing about sand stories, I thank my PhD dissertation supervisors, Barbara Kelly and Lesley Stirling, and my associate supervisors Nicholas Evans and Nick Enfield. I also thank other staff and colleagues in the School of Languages and Linguistics at the University of Melbourne. A number of other people gave encouragement and insightful feedback along the way. Thanks go to Inge Kral, Carmel O’Shannessy, Jane Simpson, David Nash, Myfany Turpin, Stephen Levinson, Gunter Senft, Adam Kendon, Marianne Gullberg, Alison French, Petronella Vaarzon-Morel, Claire Farago, Donald Preziosi, Philip Batty, David Wilkins, Tim Rowse, Judith Lovell, Julia Murray, Robyn Davidson, Adam Schembri, Gabrielle Hodge and David Strickland. My family was also drawn in, and in particular I thank my mother, Avril Green, whose support has always been there.

It was a privilege to be hosted at the Max Planck Institute for Psycholinguistics in Nijmegen during their winter of 2005–2006, and again in 2007. The Charles Darwin University provided me with office space in Alice Springs during my fieldwork in 2007 and 2009, and the CSIRO at the Desert Knowledge Precinct in Alice Springs continues to do so. Thanks also go to the Central Land Council, Alice Springs. I am particularly grateful to William McGregor, Inge Kral and Ruth Singer, who read a final draft of this manuscript and provided invaluable comments. I also thank Jenny Taylor, who created several of the line drawings that appear in this volume, Chris Storey, who helped me to get the most out of a large and diverse collection of images and who drafted the map, and Pamela Lofts, John Wolseley, Judith Lovell, Mike Franjieh and Gary Proctor, who supplied additional photographs. The Museum Rietberg Zürich, the National Gallery of Australia, the Powerhouse Museum in Sydney, the Museum of South Australia and the State Library of Victoria also supplied images that appear in this book. For careful production and editorial skills, I thank Christina Sarigiannidou and Jacqueline French.

In particular I thank David Wilkins for his friendship, support and encouragement, and for the many carefully observed and invaluable insights into Arandic languages that he has shared with me over the years. It was my reading of his 1997 paper on Arrernte sand drawing that crystallised my resolve to investigate sand drawing as a way of understanding issues of multimodality, and to use a multimodal approach to try and understand sand drawing. Special thanks also go to Myfany Turpin who has been a friend and colleague throughout much of the fieldwork that underpins this book. She has attempted to fill in some of the gaps in my understanding of music and assisted me with translations of Kaytetye texts. I also thank Nicholas Evans for encouraging me to take on doctoral research. A conversation in the shade of a large tree at the Australian Languages Workshop at Blackwood in 2004 kick-started my plan to do a PhD. In the final phase of completing this book, I was supported by an ELDP (Endangered Languages Documentation Programme, SOAS, London) Postdoctoral Award (IPF0173) and an ARC Fellowship (DP110102767). This book was also supported by the Faculty of Arts Publication Subsidy Scheme from the University of Melbourne.

Every effort has been made to secure necessary permissions to reproduce copyright material in this work, though in some cases it has proved impossible to trace or contact copyright holders. If any omissions are brought to our notice, we will be happy to include appropriate acknowledgments on reprinting, and/or in any subsequent edition.