

INDEX

- Allison, Henry, 33–35, 45–46, 69, 76, 106–107, 110, 123–124, 126–127, 133,
138–149, 153, 156, 194, 198–199, 203,
265, 271
- Ameriks, Karl, 33–34, 110, 112, 124
- Aristotle, 205
- attentiveness
as common, 9, 25, 27, 79–80, 89–90, 94–95, 116, 180–182, 184,
281–282
- in the Critique of Practical Reason, 23, 26, 161–162, 177–184
- definition of, 10, 23–24, 53, 182–183, 185
- and Descartes, 290–292
- the Gallows Man's, 157, 164, 183,
188, 198, 222, 232, 249–250, 259,
288
- as ground of practical cognition, 9, 161–163, 182
- in the Groundwork, 26, 108, 161–162, 177–184
- and Leibniz, 291–292
- to the moral feeling of respect, 66,
174–175, 235
- to necessity, 40, 53, 56–57, 157–158,
161–163, 170, 179, 183, 214–216, 222,
287, 292
- obstacles to, 24
- as perception, 24–25
- as philosophical, 187–188, 214–215, 222, 249–250, 261
- versus deductive inference/argument,
8–10, 23–24, 53–56, 262–263
- versus inductive appeal to experience, 32, 38–40, 103–104, 214–215
- autonomy
Darwall's criticism of Kant's conception of, 211–214
- Fichtean criticisms of Kant's conception
of, 154–155
- formulation of Categorical Imperative, 201
- and the Gallows Man, 223–234, 236–237
- and God, 225
- and the moral feeling of respect, 147, 234–236
- as positive freedom, 117–118
- autonomy-informed interpretation of First Formulation of the Categorical Imperative, 237–242
- autonomy-informed interpretation of the Humanity Formulation of the Categorical Imperative, 242–247
- Beck, Lewis White, 138–139, 149, 193–197, 199, 271–272, 285
- Categorical Imperative
Autonomy Formulation of, 201
- common ground of Humanity
Formulation of, 247–248
- common understanding of, 26, 85, 145–147
- felt experience of, 102, 217–219
- first formulation of accessed first-personally, 77
- Humanity Formulation of, 242–247
- no experience of, 96, 102–104
and self-deception, 184
- taken first-personally, 4

- Categorical Imperative (cont.)
 as uncommon, 2
 Universalizability Formulation of, 237–242
 common experience
 of categorical obligation, 5
 of the conflict between happiness and morality, 76, 161–169, 177–182
 as the grounding of practical philosophy, 5 versus expert, 4 versus philosophical, 4
 common human understanding/common human reason, 3, 77–80, 84–85, 90–91, 115–116
 common person fallen/corrupt, 83–85, 87–95
 innocent, 5–6, 77–78, 86–87, 89–95 conscience, 17, 150–157, 177, 204, 212
- Darwall, Stephen, 72, 207–216, 223, 234–235, 242–243, 249
- dear self, 3, 8, 24, 55
- Descartes, René, 12, 201, 205, 290–292
- determination of the will autonomous, 239–244
 content of autonomous, 244–245
 definition of, 98
 and Fact of Reason, 191–192
 and feeling, 58–59, 166–167, 279–281
 formal, 216, 237–239
 intersubjectively shared, 273, 277–279
 objective versus subjective, 98–101
 and practical cognition, 273–274
- enabling, 10, 32, 58–59, 68–69, 121, 175, 215, 218, 222, 234, 249, 281
- evidential, 10, 32, 58–59, 69, 121, 175, 215, 222, 249, 281
- Fact of Reason, 11–12, 23
 Allison's interpretation of, 33, 140–148
 and autonomy, 223–234
 Beck's interpretation of, 138–140, 197
 Darwall's interpretation of, 207–214, 241
 and the deduction of freedom, 261–263, 265
 definition of, 190–193
 and feeling, 199–206, 219–223, 279–281
 Fichtean interpretations of, 99, 199–206, 241
 and the Gallows Man, 186, 189, 216–219, 223–234, 277–279
 and Iris Murdoch, 293
 and nonhuman agents, 282–285
 objective versus subjective readings of, 138–140
 as phenomenological fact, 193–199
 and practical cognition, 273–274, 277–279, 285–288
 rational cause of, 219–223
 recent interpretations of, 137–138, 140
- Fichte, J. G., 112, 139, 148, 154–155
- Franks, Paul, 149–152, 155–158, 167, 185, 199–200, 203, 235, 271–272
- freedom, 6
 and autonomous determination of will, 240–241
 as common, 124–125
 deduction of, 27, 191, 263–269 and the deduction of the moral law in Groundwork III, 114–118, 125–133 experience of, 34, 36–37, 46, 201–203
 felt experience of, 104, 118–120, 159–161
 felt experience of in Groundwork III, 108–114
 and the Gallows Man, 175–177, 230–231
 practical cognition of, 114–118
 as practical premise, 122–124
 recent interpretations of in Groundwork III, 106–108
- Gallows Man. See throughout
- German Idealism, 199, 203
- Guyer, Paul, 106–107, 118–119, 131, 134, 137, 199, 209
- happiness
 conflict between morality and, 2–4 principle of, 227–228
- Henrich, Dieter, 140
- Hill, Thomas, 153, 156
- humanity
 common appeal to, 231–232
- Hume, David, 1, 7, 30, 292
- Husserl, Edmund, 12, 292
- intellectual intuition
 and the Fact of Reason, 193–195, 197, 271
- interest (in morality), 117, 141

- Kemp Smith, Norman, 118, 277
- Korsgaard, Christine, 32–33, 110, 124, 209
- Kripke, Saul, 58
- Leibniz, G. W., 12, 290–292
- moral feeling of respect, 72
 as a priori, 62–63, 218
 is caused by autonomous rational nature, 148
 as common, 63–66, 144–145, 147
 definition of, 36
 does not replace reason, 68–69
 as the effect of an intelligible cause, 62–63, 147
 as enabling not evidential, 60, 222–223, 234
 and the Fact of Reason, 140–144, 148, 293
 and the Gallows Man, 149–150, 156, 165, 169, 175, 219, 222, 234
 as having inscrutable source, 50
 motivational role of, 156
 as necessary not contingent, 70
 is not about happiness, 69
 not moral sense, 68
 as objective, 279
 as sensible, 61
- moral sense theory
 definition of, 67
 Kant's rejection of, 67–72
- motives, 177
 of duty, 168
 and Fact of Reason, 141, 194
 opacity of, 87–89, 97–100, 179–182
 and ought implies can, 254–255
 versus imperatives, 254
- Moyar, Dean, 88, 99, 155, 172, 177, 185, 199–200, 203–204, 212, 214, 225, 235, 241, 271–272, 276, 281
- Murdoch, Iris, 12, 292–293
- necessity
 practical experience of, 40, 52, 56, 59, 104, 133, 157, 170, 215–216, 219–222, 275–279, 282, 287
- Nietzsche, Friedrich, 1–2, 293
- ought implies can, 251
 as experienced by Gallows Man, 253–258 limits to, 258–259
 philosophical understanding of, 265
- Paralogisms, 201–205
- personality
 definition of, 229–230, 246
 and the Gallows Man, 223–229
 shared with all rational beings, 230–231
- phenomenological experience attentiveness to, 22–25, 51–56, 169–186
 of categorical obligation, 85–89, 92–104, 169–182
 as common, 20–21
 of the conflict between happiness and morality, 159–169
 definition of, 16–17, 40–46
 and Descartes, 290–291
 and the Fact of Reason, 193–199, 263
 as felt, 21–22, 40–46
 as first-personal, 17
 of the Gallows Man, 163–169, 258–259
 as ground of a priori morality, 72–73, 125–132, 162, 214–234, 285–288
 in Groundwork 1, 85–89
 and Husserl, 292
 limits of, 288
 and necessity, 41, 102–104
 of negative freedom, 107–114, 118–120, 124–125
 not of positive freedom, 258–259
 objectivity of practical cognition based in, 285–288 and the phenomenological self, 204–205 philosophical attentiveness to, 25–28
 and practical cognition, 115–118, 270–273
 as practical premise, 121–124, 263
 subjectivity of, 270–273
 versus empirical experience, 16–17, 36–37 versus third-personal experience, 17–19, 46
 wonder at cause of, 47–51
- practical cognition, 7, 69
 and attentiveness, 52, 162, 285–286
 definition of, 273–274, 285–286
 and experience, 41
 and the Gallows Man, 169–174, 270, 277–279
 limits of, 287–288
 objectivity of, 16, 66, 149, 270, 274–277

- practical cognition (cont.)
 relation to feeling, 22, 55, 59, 70, 115, 117, 159, 281 relation to wonder, 48
 synthetic a priori, 30, 104
- practical philosophy grounding of, 5, 189–190
 like chemistry, 26–27
 versus theoretical philosophy, 2
- premise
 practical, 54–55, 108, 121–123, 126, 134 theoretical, 53, 55, 105–106, 122, 127–128, 130, 133, 137, 236
- Proops, Ian, 150–152, 155, 276
- pure apperception, 118–119
- reactive attitudes, 210–212
- Reath, Andrews, 71
- receptivity, 143, 156–157, 185–186, 193, 198, 201, 204–206, 283, 293
- representations (mental) being active in relation to, 113–114, 119
 being passive in relation to, 111
- Second Analogy, 38, 51–53, 59, 104, 275
- self-deception
 and attentiveness, 125
 and blameworthiness, 181
 in common experience, 8–9, 16, 87
 and the Gallows Man, 171
 in Groundwork, 83–84
 in Groundwork II, 92–94, 96–104
- and Iris Murdoch, 293
 as obstacle to attentiveness, 90, 174, 177, 183–185, 234 and radical evil, 289
 as undermining knowledge of categorical obligation, 134, 256
- sensibility, 48, 61, 67, 114, 128, 141–144, 147, 194–199, 205–206, 222–223, 280, 284, 291 See receptivity
- sensible intuition, 21, 35
 and the Fact of Reason, 196
 limits of, 34
 versus sensible feeling, 43, 48
 versus sensible feeling in Fact of Reason, 194–195, 197
- Strawson, P. F., 18, 72, 210–211
- theoretical cognition, 6, 47–48, 60, 71, 102, 222, 267, 275, 285, 287
- Third Antinomy, 18–19, 105, 118–119, 288
- Williamson, Timothy, 58
- wonder
 and attentiveness, 51–53, 57
 moral law as object of, 47–51
- Wood, Allen, 137, 199, 209
- world of the understanding and attentiveness, 116–117, 126–129
 definition of, 116
 not given in felt experience, 129–131
 not intuited, 120