

A SOCIOLOGY OF TRANSNATIONAL CONSTITUTIONS

This book is the second in a series of volumes on the Sociology of Constitutions. This volume focuses on the rise of transnational constitutional laws, primarily created by the interaction between national and international courts and by the domestic transformation of international law. Through detailed analysis of patterns of institutional formation at key historical junctures in a number of national societies, it examines the social processes that have locked national states into an increasingly transnational constitutional order, and it explains how the growth of global constitutional norms has provided a stabilizing framework for the functions of state institutions.

The book adopts a distinctive historical–sociological approach to these questions, examining the deep continuities between national constitutional law and contemporary models of global law. The volume makes an important contribution to the sociology of constitutional law, to the sociology of post-national legal processes and to the sociology of human rights law.

CHRIS THORNHILL is Professor of Law at the University of Manchester. His research is mainly focused on the sociology of constitutional law, both in domestic and transnational contexts, and he has published a number of influential works in this area. His work has been published in many languages, including Chinese, Japanese, Spanish, German, and Russian.

CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN LAW AND SOCIETY

Cambridge Studies in Law and Society aims to publish the best scholarly work on legal discourse and practice in its social and institutional contexts, combining theoretical insights and empirical research.

The fields that it covers are studies of law in action, the sociology of law, the anthropology of law, cultural studies of law, including the role of legal discourses in social formations, law and economics, law and politics and studies of governance. The books consider all forms of legal discourse across societies, rather than being limited to lawyers' discourses alone.

The series editors come from a range of disciplines: academic law, socio-legal studies, sociology and anthropology. All have been actively involved in teaching and writing about law in context.

Series editors

Chris Arup Monash University, Victoria

Sally Engle Merry New York University

Susan Silbey Massachusetts Institute of Technology

A list of books in the series can be found at the back of this book.

A SOCIOLOGY OF TRANSNATIONAL
CONSTITUTIONS

Social Foundations of the Post-National Legal Structure

Chris Thornhill

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-03852-3 — A Sociology of Transnational Constitutions
Chris Thornhill
Frontmatter
More Information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

University Printing House, Cambridge CB2 8BS, United Kingdom

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781107038523

© Chris Thornhill 2016

This work is in copyright. It is subject to statutory exceptions and to the provisions of relevant licensing agreements; with the exception of the Creative Commons version the link for which is provided below, no reproduction of any part of this work may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

An online version of this work is published at <http://dx.doi.org/10.1017/CBO9781139833905> under a Creative Commons Open Access license CC-BY-NC 4.0 which permits re-use, distribution and reproduction in any medium for non-commercial purposes providing appropriate credit to the original work is given and any changes made are indicated. To view a copy of this license, visit <https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc/4.0>.

All versions of this work may contain content reproduced under license from third parties. Permission to reproduce this third-party content must be obtained from these third-parties directly.

When citing this work, please include a reference to the DOI 10.1017/CBO9781139833905

First published 2016

A catalog record for this publication is available from the British Library

ISBN 978-1-107-03852-3 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication, and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-03852-3 — A Sociology of Transnational Constitutions
Chris Thornhill
Frontmatter
More Information

---

For Atina, and for Grace and John

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	page viii
Citing this work	x
Introduction	1
1 The national political system and the classical constitutional formula	31
2 Constitutional rights and the global political system	69
3 The constitution of international law: A sociological approach	102
4 The crisis of social inclusion and the paradox of the nation state	130
5 Constitutional rights and the inclusion of the nation: Systemic transformations I	163
6 Constitutional rights and the inclusion of the nation: Systemic transformations II	231
7 The autonomy of the post-national legal structure: The auto-constituent constitution	366
Conclusion	419
Bibliography	430
Index	506

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Much of the research for this book was funded by a grant from the European Research Council (Advanced Grant: 323656-STC). This grant provided me with quite unique academic opportunities, and I am immensely grateful to the ERC for this support. I am also grateful to the researchers that I have been able to employ because of this grant: Carina Calabria, Jessica Carlisle, Rodrigo Cespedes, Dominic Dagbanja, Gianluca Gentili, Wim Muller, Elizabeth O'Loughlin and Maria Smirnova. Our collaboration has been both pleasurable and at times deeply enlightening.

Research for this book was conducted in many locations, in Europe, Latin America and Africa, and I would like to thank everyone who has assisted me along the way. I have often been inspired by the judges and lawyers that I have met in different societies, and I hope that my admiration for their attempts to construct solutions for the at times intensely challenging problems which they have faced is evident throughout this book. My special gratitude is due to the academic and administrative staff at the Max-Planck-Institut für europäische Rechtsgeschichte in Frankfurt am Main. Two extended stays at the Institute, a magnificent place to undertake focused academic research, enabled me to write some of the historical sections of this book.

Preliminary papers containing some of the research in this book have been presented at many seminars, lectures and conferences, and it is not possible for me to thank all the people whose commentaries and criticisms have influenced its development in such contexts. However, I received particularly stimulating feedback following research presentations at the Humboldt Universität in Berlin (May 2013), at the Johann Wolfgang Goethe Universität in Frankfurt am Main (December 2013), at Copenhagen Business School (January 2014), at Unisinos in São Leopoldo (August 2014), at the Universität Bremen (October 2014) and at the Instituto de Ciências Sociais da Universidade de Lisboa (April 2015). I would like to thank all participants in these events for their responses to my research, and I have tried to incorporate their observations at appropriate points in my analyses.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

While writing this book, I had the privilege to participate in discussions with many academics of very high quality, and I would like to thank them all for such stimulating exchanges. Prominent among these are my former colleagues at Glasgow University – Chris Berry, Emilios Christodoulidis, Johan van der Walt, Adam Tomkins and Stephen White; my new colleagues at the University of Manchester – Jean d’Aspremont, Tom Gibbons, Kirsty Keywood and Robert Thomas; and my friends, Paul Blokker, Poul Kjaer, Atina Krajewska, Mikael Rask Madsen, Aldo Mascareño, William Outhwaite and Darrow Schechter. However, the research in this book has been most deeply influenced by the work and thought of Hauke Brunkhorst and Gunther Teubner, both of whom I have had the good fortune to meet regularly over the last few years, and with both of whom I have engaged in at times sharply critical debate. My admiration for their work remains immense, although the claims that I advance in this book dispute many of their assumptions and conclusions.

In addition, I owe an extremely warm debt of gratitude to Finola O’Sullivan at Cambridge University Press, who has always provided me with wonderful support and encouragement.

CITING THIS WORK

As per the provisions of section 3.a.I.A.i of the CC BY-NC license, when attributing this work, we request that you reproduce the following elements in your citation: Thornhill, A Sociology of Transnational Constitutions (Cambridge University Press: 2016) and the URL <http://dx.doi.org/10.1017/CBO9781139833905>. If a derivative, you should acknowledge this fact. Although we cannot legally enforce it under the license, we would be grateful if you would summarise any changes made in a derivative.