JUS POST BELLUM AND TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE

This collection brings together jus post bellum and transitional justice theorists to explore the legal and moral questions that arise at the end of war and in the transition to less oppressive regimes. Transitional justice and jus post bellum share in common many concepts that are explored in this volume. In both transitional justice and jus post bellum, retribution is crucial. In some contexts, criminal trials will need to be held, and in others truth commissions and other hybrid trials will be considered more appropriate means for securing some form of retribution. But there is a difference between how jus post bellum, where the key is securing peace, and transitional justice, where the key is often greater democratization are conceptualized. This collection of essays highlights the overlap but also the differences between these emerging bodies of scholarship and incipient law.

Larry May is W. Alton Jones Professor of Philosophy and Professor of Law at Vanderbilt University, as well as Professorial Fellow at the Centre for Applied Philosophy and Public Ethics at Charles Sturt and Australian National Universities. He is the author of Crimes Against Humanity: A Normative Account (2005), War Crimes and Just War (2007), Aggression and Crimes Against Peace (2008), Genocide: A Normative Account (2010), and Global Justice and Due Process (2010). He is also the co-editor of International Criminal Law and Philosophy (2009 with Zachary Hosk) and Morality, Jus Post Bellum, and International Law (2013 with Andrew Forcehimes.)

Elizabeth Edenberg is currently working on her Ph.D. in philosophy at Vanderbilt University. Her article, “Unequal Consenters and Political Illegitimacy,” co-authored with Marilyn Friedman, is forthcoming in The Journal of Political Philosophy.

The purpose of the ASIL Studies in International Legal Theory series is to clarify and improve the theoretical foundations of international law. Too often the progressive development and implementation of international law has foundered on confusion about first principles. This series raises the level of public and scholarly discussion about the structure and purposes of the world legal order and how best to achieve global justice through law.

This series grows out of the International Legal Theory project of the American Society of International Law. The ASIL Studies in International Legal Theory series deepens this conversation by publishing scholarly monographs and edited volumes of essays considering subjects in international legal theory.

Volumes in the Series:
International Criminal Law and Philosophy edited by Larry May and Zachary Hoskins (2010)

The New Global Law by Rafael Domingo (2010)

The Role of Ethics in International Law edited by Donald Earl Childress III (2011)
