Index

action language
action compatibility effects, abstract language, 193–4 behavioral studies, action computability effects (ACE), 189–92, 194–5 behavioral studies, de Vega et al, 190–1 embodied cognition, 182, 205–6 embodied inferences, 187–8 embodiment, communication, 185–7 embodiment, evaluation, 187 embodiment, functional advantages, 184–7 embodiment, interface with physical world, 184–5 linguistic meaning, symbolic vs. embodiment, 182–4 neuroanatomy of, 195–8
neuroimaging studies, 203–4 neurophysiology of, 199–203
activation vs. instantiation, 32–5 affective states tracking, 307
anaphoric inferences, 22–3, 366–7, 377–8
The Art of Fielding (Harbach), 371–3 automatic, strategic processes, 94–8 automatic-strategic combination, coherence standards, inference validation, 98–100 causal inference, mental representation of text, situation model, 107–8 causal inference, text comprehension, 100–7 comprehension skills, processes, 106 elaborative inferences, 104 general cognitive reader characteristics, 106 inferential processes during reading, 95–107 instrument inferences, 104
Landscape Model, 108–9
predictive inferences, 102–3 reader comprehension skills, 106 reader differences, 105
bridging inferences, 9, 23–4, 68–9.
See also causal inferences; narrative causal bridges
British Picture Vocabulary Scale (BPVS), 141, 146
The Butterfly (Hanley), 396, 402–6 causal consistent, inconsistent, temporal control conditions sample materials, 73–6 causal inference causal bridging inferences, validation, 71 mental representation of text, situation model, 107–8 text comprehension, 100–7 Child, I., 362, 373, 379–81 children, inference processing, vocabulary knowledge Perfetti’s lexical quality hypothesis, 141 receptive vocabulary assessments, 141–2 research conclusions, future directions, 155–7 skilled reading, 140
Study 1: ability assessments and procedure, reading ability, 145–6
Study 1: ability assessments and procedure, vocabulary, 146 Study 1: conclusions, 148–9
Study 1: inference and integration task, 146
Study 1: vocabulary and comprehension, depth/breadth relations for different information types, 146–8
Study 1, vocabulary knowledge aspects and inference types, 144–9
Study 2: accuracy and speed, 149–50, 152–5
Study 2: assessments and procedure, judgment tasks, 151
Study 2: assessments and procedure, production tasks, 151–2

416
Index

Study 2: assessments and procedure, reading ability, 150 Study 2: assessments and procedure, theme word task, 152 vocabulary semantic skills, reading comprehension relation, 142–4 word-level skills, 140 Cisneros, Sandra, 402

cognitive mechanisms, neural correlates, xvi cognitive reader characteristics, 106 coherece judgment, functional neuroimaging, 240–5 dmPFC activation as diagnostic tool, 245–6 future research, 251–3 individual differences, background knowledge on inference creation, 210–13 interference comprehension, flexible control, 222–4 methodological developments, 248–9 neuroanatomy of, 195–8, 230–2
neuroimaging studies, 203–4
neurophysiology of, 199–203 non-aphasic language deficits, 232–4 patient studies on inferencing, 234–40 reading skill and neural efficiency, individual differences, 215–20 research implications, 224–5 resource constraints, role on inferential processes, 213–15 special populations, 249–50 text comprehension models, 246–8 theoretical proposals, 250–1 working capacity and neural ability, individual differences, 220–2 coherence, 98–100, 240–5, 296–300
Coh-Metrix measures, indexes, 301–3
The Color Purple (Walker), 392
compound-cue model, 45
comprehension. See also implicit meaning comprehension memory measurement, 45–51 skills, processes, 106 theories, 85–7
comprehension strategies tracking, 306–7
construction-integration (CI) model, 291, 323–4 constructionist model, claims and current status, 293–4 context retrieval process, 44 conversational pedagogical agents, 307–8
Cook et al example filler, 29–30 high context condition, 30 low context condition, 30 correct inferences, misconception from natural language tracking, 305–6 Cumming, C., 366–7
degrees of availability, resonance framework, memory models, 58–60 diffusion model, 62–5
actress-dead inferences, 64 associative recognition, 63–4 discourse processing research, cognitive theories compound-cue model, 45
comprehension, memory measurement, 45–51 correct retrieval process, 44
degrees of availability, resonance framework, memory models, 58–60
diffusion model, 62–5
diffusion model, actress-dead inferences, 64 diffusion model, associative recognition, 63–4 empirical methods, 42
future research directions, 61–5 inference, available and encoded, 52–3 inference, available but not relevant, 53–4 memory, resonance retrieval, 42–4 pronoun resolution, without pronouns, 54–6 Ratcliff-McKoon model, 44 retrieval context effects, 60 saliency, 59–60
strategic effort, 42
text elements, connections, 54 text information, general knowledge integration, 56–8
Distribution Situation Space (DDS) model, 281–3
The Dog and His Shadow (Aesop), 390
The Dogs of Rome (Fitzgerald), 366, 375–6
elaborative inferences, 24–9, 104
Eleven (Cisneros), 402 embodied approach. See action language embodied inferences, 187–8 embodiment communication, 185–7
embodied cognition, 182, 205–6 evaluation, 187
embodiment (cont.)
functional advantages, 184–7 interface with physical world, 184–5 emotion inferences applied perspectives, 135–6 complex issues, theoretical perspectives, 133–5 emotional narratives, new ways to consider, 131–2 Gillioz-Gygax (2012) saliency conditions, moderated version, 133 Gillioz-Gygax (2012) saliency conditions, optimal version, 133 grounding research, 123–7 intermediate conclusions, 130–1 encoding, xvi
event indexing model, 291
explicit meaning process or inference?, 8–10 explicit text context, validation, 80 expository causal bridges validation, 76–8 expository text, narrative experiences anaphoric inferences, 366–7, 377–8 causality and, 348
convergent, divergent thinking, 373–81 expository text complexity, 354–5 individual differences, 371–3, 381–2 inference-making during processing of, 351–2 inference-making in context of expository text, less sufficient prior knowledge, 353–4 metacomprehension skills role, 356–8 modal model of inference-making, 349–51
mysteries, 373–7
participatory responses, 363–6
predictive inferences, 367–9, 377–8 reader’s preferences, 369–71 Remote Associates Test (RAT), 381 strategic processing role, 355–6

The Family Fang (Wilson), 379, 382
Fitzgerald, C., 366, 375–6 Gillioz-Gygax (2012), saliency conditions moderated version, 133
optimal version, 133
Gygax et al (2004), ambiguous narrative ambiguous version, 129–30
short version, 129
Gygax et al (2004), experimental narrative extended version, 128
short version, 128
target sentences, 128
Hanley, James, 396, 402–6
Harbach, C., 371–3
Harrison Bergeron (Vonnegut), 398–400
Hell & Gone (Swierczynski), 380 Hitchcock, Alfred, 363–4 immediacy, language validation, 80–1 implicit meaning comprehension, without making inferences bridging inferences, 9
in comprehension skill, 15–16
explicit meaning process or inference?, 8–10 hierarchical model, 2–3 intermediate level inference, close-to-the text inferences, 3–4 intermediate level inference, word-to-text integration (WTI), 4–6 linguistic sources, taxonomies and, 1–2 N400 component, 6–7
paraphrase effect, 7–12
pronoun binding, co-reference meaning processes, 3–4 studying WTI through event-related potential (ERP), 6–8 text meaning processes, mirrored pyramid view, 15–16 WTI, individual differences, 13–15 WTI, mechanisms, 10–12
indirect inference validation, consistency effects, 78–80 inference, available and encoded, 52–3
inference, available but not relevant, 53–4 inference generation, naturalist reading contexts affective states tracking, 307 coherence, explanation assumptions, 296–300
Coh-Metrix measures, indexes, 301–3

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org
Index

comprehension strategies tracking, 306–7 construction-integration model, 291 constructionist model, claims and 195–7 current status, 293–4 conversational pedagogical agents, 307–8 correct inferences, misconception from natural language tracking, 305–6
event indexing model, 291
future research, xvi historical research on, xv intermediate constructionist position, 290 iSTART (Interactive Strategy Trainer for Active Reading and Thinking, 308–9 landscape model, 291
language, discourse technology, 300 memory-resonance models, 291 metacognition, self-regulated learning with agents training, 309
MetaTutor, 309
minimalist vs. promiscuous position, 290–1
Operation ARIES!, Operation ARA, 310 reader goal assumption, 294–6
Reading Assessment Tool (RSAT), 306–7
reading strategies with agents tracking, 308–9
reading times, text difficulty, 303–5 research trends, 291–3 structure building frameworks, 291 technologies that promote learning, comprehension assessment, 303–11 text scaling, language and discourse levels, 301–3 trials in scientific reasoning, 309–11 inference generation, online study and multimedia learning comprehension process, 324–6
construction-integration (CI) model application, 323–4 graphical overviews, 334–7 integrate visual-verbal materials and, 332–3
learner behaviors, interactions, 334–40
multimedia content, strategic processing, 337–40
multimedia materials for learning, 322–3 traditional texts vs., 321 visual cues impact, 330–2 visual representations, 327–8 visually-supported inference generation limitations, 328–30
inference skill (general) assessment, interventions, 170–1 compotent reading and, 160 development patterns in, 166–7 evidence for, 167–9

future research directions, 171–2
high-order skill, low/high boundaries, 160 inference, defined, 161–3 inference, taxonomies, 163–6 See also validation
infferential processes during reading, research directions development of inference-making, 109–10
neurology, neurological research, 110
Institute of Education Services, US Department of Education, 291
instrument inferences, 104 interference effect, memory, word knowledge, in retrieval processes, 14–15
intermediate constructionist position, 290 intermediate level inference close-to-the text inferences, 3–4 word-to-text integration (WTI), 4–6 interpretive inferences, literary texts author generalizations, 391 cultural modeling, 397 displacement of meaning, duplicity of code and, 386–8
The Dog and His Shadow, 390 empirical evidence, experts studies, 392–7
novices adoption of interpretive stance, 397–8
situatetd approach, 387–8
Study 1: argument condition, Big Brother, 401
Study 1: argument condition, human condition, 401–2
Study 1: plot condition, 401 Study 1: task instructions that promote interpretive stance, 398–400 Study 2: spontaneous, prompted process evidenence sources, 402–6 iSTART (Interactive Strategy Trainer for Active Reading and Thinking, 308–9
knowledge, knowledge-based inference computational models, 278–86 conjunction presence, effect simulation, 283 knowledge, knowledge-based inference (cont.)
- Distribution Situation Space (DDS) model, 281–3
- experimental studies, 263–78
- familiar relations, inferred, 267–9
- familiar relations, inferred supported by conjunction, 269–71
- knowledge manipulation, expert and non-expert readers, 271
- knowledge manipulation, familiar and unfamiliar information, 263
- knowledge representation, expert and non-experts, 271–5
- microworld approach, knowledge implementation, 279–80
- reader’s knowledge, effect simulation, 283–6
- reading, expert and non-experts, 275–8
- reading goals, effect simulation, 283
- theoretical background, 260–3
- unfamiliar relations, not inferred unless motivated by readers goal, 265–7
- world knowledge implementation, 280–1

Landscape Model, 108–9
- landscape model, 291
- language, discourse technology, 300
- language validation principles
  - immediacy, 80–1
  - memory processes, intentional retrieval, 82–3
  - other candidate principles, 83
  - representational updating, 82
  - validation failures, 84–5
- Lexical Quality Hypothesis, 14–15
- linguistic meaning, symbolic vs embodiment, 182–4
- linguistic sources, taxonomies, 1–2
- Lovesey, P., 374–5, 379, 381–2

Marnie (Hitchcock), 363–4, 369
- memory processes, intentional retrieval, 82–3
- memory, resonance retrieval, 42–4
- memory-resonance models, 291
- metacognition, self-regulated learning with agents training, 309
- metacomprehension skills role, 356–8
- MetaTutor, 309
- Michaund, J., 377–8
- microworld approach, knowledge implementation, 279–80

minimalist vs promiscuous position, 290–1
- mirrored pyramid view, text meaning processes, 15–16
- modal model of inference-making, 349–51
- Moses Illusion, 85
- motivational causation, 74–6
- multimedia content, strategic processing, 337–40
- multimedia materials for learning, 322–3
- mysteries, 373–7

N400 component, 6–7
- narrative causal bridges, validation physical causation, 71–2
- related effects, 72–3
- narrative experiences. See expository text, narrative experiences
- National Science Foundation, 292
- Neal Analysis of Reading Ability: Revised (NARA-R), 145–6, 150
- neural correlates. See cognitive mechanisms, neural correlates
- O’Brien, Shank, Myers, & Rayner example, 25–6
- O’Brien-Albrecht example
  - filler, 22
  - high context, 22
  - low context, 22
- Office of Naval Research, 292
- online study, multimedia learning. See inference generation, online study and multimedia learning
- Operation ARIES!, Operation ARA, 310
- paraphrase effect, 7–12
- participatory responses, 363–6
- passive activation, instantiation of inferences during reading, 19
- activation vs instantiation, 32–3
- activation vs. instantiation, framework, 33–5
- anaphoric inferences, 22–3
- bridging inferences, 23–4
- Cook et al example, filler, 29–30
- Cook et al example, high context condition, 30
- Cook et al example, low context condition, 30
- elaborative inferences, 24–9
- O’Brien, Shank, Myers, & Rayner example, 25–6
- O’Brien-Albrecht example, filler, 22
- O’Brien-Albrecht example, high context, 22