

Contents

Preface	page ix
Introduction	1
1 The correspondence theory and its rivals	6
1.1 Basic components	6
1.2 Versions of the correspondence theory	12
1.3 Correspondence and realism	16
1.4 Rivals of correspondence	18
2 Objections to correspondence	28
2.1 Classifying objections	28
2.2 Funny facts	29
2.3 More funny facts	44
2.4 The Problem of Matching	52
2.5 The Slingshot Argument	56
2.6 A diagnosis	60
3 A theory of facts	61
3.1 Corresponding to facts	61
3.2 Facts as arrangements	62
3.3 How to form a fact	72
3.4 Everything composes something	74
3.5 Abstract facts among other kinds	77
3.6 Identity conditions	79
3.7 Arrangements vis-à-vis states of affairs	82
3.8 Recap	83
4 Propositions	85
4.1 Pre-philosophical propositions	86
4.2 Abstract propositions	87
4.3 Propositions as arrangements	106
4.4 About aboutness	109
4.5 Objections and replies	113
4.6 Benefits of the theory	117

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-05774-6 - Defending the Correspondence Theory of Truth

Joshua Rasmussen

Table of Contents

More information

viii

Contents

5	Theories of correspondence	120
5.1	Benefits of an analysis	120
5.2	Previous theories of correspondence	121
5.3	Review: propositions and facts	129
5.4	The nature of correspondence	130
5.5	Test cases	133
5.6	Getting what we want	134
5.7	Avoiding circularity	136
5.8	A backup hypothesis	138
5.9	Correspondence without abstracta	140
5.10	The nature of falsehood	143
6	Funny facts revisited	147
6.1	Negative existentials	147
6.2	Conjunctions and disjunctions	159
6.3	Abstract reference	164
6.4	Universal quantification	165
6.5	Tensed propositions	168
6.6	Modal	171
6.7	Counterfactuals	173
6.8	Correspondence without arrangements	173
6.9	Closing remarks	175
7	The Slingshot Argument disarmed	176
7.1	The basic Slingshot Argument	176
7.2	The argument sharpened	178
7.3	Some solutions that fail	181
7.4	A solution that succeeds	187
7.5	Lessons learned	189
8	The Liar Paradox and beyond	191
8.1	Liars	191
8.2	A puzzle about aboutness	199
8.3	Belief and correspondence	203
8.4	Awareness and correspondence	203
8.5	Miscellaneous cases of correspondence	209
8.6	Conclusion	212
	Bibliography	214
	Index	222