Index

absolutism, 115, 272, 281. See also Moser, Johann Jacob, belief in experience over reason as a weapon against absolutism
Acosta, José de, 33, 75, 115, 177 n27; availability and impact of his work in the seventeenth century, 80; on the diversity of peoples in the Americas, 77; influence of Vitoria on, 75; on the justification of colonisation, 75;
on the progressive theory of anthropology,
177; and the redescription of Native Americans, 73–9; on religion as a measure of civilisation, 78; on ‘third class’ of barbarians of Brazil, 77; on ‘third class’ of barbarians of Florida, 77; use of cultural signs to categorise Native Americans (‘first’, ‘second’, and ‘third class of barbarians [theory of progressive barbarism]’), 76–8; years spent in America, 75
acquisition: acquisition of sovereignty, 250, 321, 326; international laws governing the acquisition of territory, 240; occupation as the original form of, 237; ‘primary acquisition’, 97; primitive acquisition, 104, 237. See also Bentlis, Henry, on the acquisition of territory; Hutcheson, Francis, on the acquisition of property; Kant, Immanuel, on original acquisition (‘original occupation’); Martens, Georg Friedrich von, on the acquisition of property by treaties or occupation
‘acquisition to legal title in terra nullius, The’
(Simsarian), 320
Acquisition of sovereignty over polar areas
(Smedal), 318
Act of the Berlin Conference (1885), 294–5
Adams, Alexander, 219
Adams, John, 203; expansionist position of concerning the Oregon Territory dispute, 211; knowledge of the law of nations, 210;
knowledge of Vattel, 210; on the property rights of Native Americans, 201 n120; response of to Twiss, 210–11
Adams-Onís Treaty (1819), 204, 206
Africa, 6, 9, 28, 170, 253–4, 273–4, 301, 309;
arguments justifying the colonisation of,
287; ‘carve-up’ (dismemberment) of Africa in the 1870s and 1880s, 310, 327;
colonisation of, 327; influence of commerce in, 297; property and limited sovereignty of Africans, 300; as territorium nullius, 327;
See also Berlin Conference (1884–85); Congo, the, territorium nullius (land belonging to no one), use of in the debate over Africa
African Conference (1885), 319
Ahrens, Heinrich, 225, 227; on Bentham’s theory of utility as immoral and relativistic, 225; on occupation and the reality of property in his own time, 226; rejection of Locke’s theory of labour, 226; rejection of the natural law theory of occupation, 226; support for Kant’s theory of convention as the basis for property, 226
Alaska, 306
Alcântara, Andrea, 16
Alexander VI (Pope), 46, 67, 101
Alexandrowicz, C. H., 98
Algonquian peoples: as belonging to the ‘third class’ of barbarism, 78; dispossession of, 78.
See also Pays d’En Haut, middle ground of the French and Algonquian nations in Alsace-Lorraine, 312
American colonists: British taxation of, 183; policy of the British Crown to control westward expansion in, 187; response in to British attempts to regulate and finance the colonies, 88; use of the argument of occupation by settlers to make claims against Indians and the British Crown, 189
American Indians. See Native Americans

© in this web service Cambridge University Press
www.cambridge.org
American Revolution, 24, 168, 171, 194; occupation and the American Revolution, 199–203
Amougou, Fouad, 327, 329; on the concept of terra nullius and occupation, 327
analysis of the Roman civil law, compared with the laws of England, An (Halloway), 260
Ancient law (Maine), 241
Anghie, Antony, 12, 48
‘Animadversions on the said Bull of Pope Alexander’ (Purchas), 67
Antarctic, the, 242
Antiquitate Republicae Batavicae
Ammoun, Fouad, 323
American Revolution, 246, 278, 282, 295, 298, 327; dismemberment of Africa following the conference, 127; on the indigenous peoples of Africa, 289; intentions of, 273; negotiations of over whether protectorates are bound by the obligations of effective sovereignty, 284; origins of, 273; response to by critics of empire, 290; on Sub-Saharan Africa as an immense terra nullius, 327. See also Act of the Berlin Conference (1884)
Beyona-Ba-Meya
Benton, Robert, 262
Berlin Conference (1884–), 28, 271, 28–9, 129, 246, 255, 278, 191, 298, 327; recognition of on the indigenous peoples of Africa, 289; intentions of, 273; of Africa following the conference, 127; on the indigenous peoples of Africa, 289; intentions of, 273; negotiations of over whether protectorates are bound by the obligations of effective sovereignty, 284; origins of, 273; response to by critics of empire, 290; on Sub-Saharan Africa as an immense terra nullius, 327. See also Act of the Berlin Conference (1884)
Beyona-Ba-Meya, 127; dismissal of the materialistic concept of terra nullius, 327; on sovereignty arising from spiritual ties, 327
Bluntschli, Johann Kaspar, 191
Bismarck, Otto von, 246, 273, 282
Black Legend propaganda, 61, 64
Blackstone, William, 118, 166, 171, 196 n105; concern of over landed empires, 169; and the domestication of occupation, 170; on the foundational role for occupation in the creation of property in America, 169; on definitions of occupation, 169; on ‘occupancy’ and the right to permanent property ‘in the substance of the earth itself’, 166; on occupation, property and common law, 168–9; on the reconciliation of the law of nations with common law, 167, 169; summary of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century writing on occupation and property rights, 167
Bland, Richard, 189, 199; on America as separate from England, 191; assertion of American colonists’ rights by, 189; on the law of nature and the rights that arise from occupation of territory, 189; on Native Americans, 191; rejection of the Hobbesian concept of rights derived exclusively from civil society, 190; on the rights of private adventurers, 191; on the Virginia colonists’ compact with the British Crown, 191
Bluntschli, Johann Kaspar, 246, 250; on civil society, 251; eclectic and dynamic understanding of the law, 251; enthusiasm for European sovereignty and empire, 252; on the occupation of the territory of ‘barbarian tribes’, 252; on the question of the acquisition of ‘territorial sovereignty’, 250; on the right to existence recognised by natural law, 253; support of Bismarck’s unification policy, 251; support of Prussian hegemony, 251
Bodin, Jean, 47

Index

American Revolution, 24, 168, 171, 194; occupation and the American Revolution, 199–203
Amougou, Fouad, 327, 329; on the concept of terra nullius and occupation, 327
analysis of the Roman civil law, compared with the laws of England, An (Halloway), 260
Ancient law (Maine), 241
Anghie, Antony, 12, 48
‘Animadversions on the said Bull of Pope Alexander’ (Purchas), 67
Antarctic, the, 242
Antiquitate Republicae Batavicae
Ammoun, Fouad, 323
American Revolution, 246, 278, 282, 295, 298, 327; dismemberment of Africa following the conference, 127; on the indigenous peoples of Africa, 289; intentions of, 273; negotiations of over whether protectorates are bound by the obligations of effective sovereignty, 284; origins of, 273; response to by critics of empire, 290; on Sub-Saharan Africa as an immense terra nullius, 327. See also Act of the Berlin Conference (1884)
Beyona-Ba-Meya, 127; dismissal of the materialistic concept of terra nullius, 327; on sovereignty arising from spiritual ties, 327
Bluntschli, Johann Kaspar, 191
Bismarck, Otto von, 246, 273, 282
Black Legend propaganda, 61, 64
Blackstone, William, 118, 166, 171, 196 n105; concern of over landed empires, 169; and the domestication of occupation, 170; on the foundational role for occupation in the creation of property in America, 169; on definitions of occupation, 169; on ‘occupancy’ and the right to permanent property ‘in the substance of the earth itself’, 166; on occupation, property and common law, 168–9; on the reconciliation of the law of nations with common law, 167, 169; summary of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century writing on occupation and property rights, 167
Bland, Richard, 189, 199; on America as separate from England, 191; assertion of American colonists’ rights by, 189; on the law of nature and the rights that arise from occupation of territory, 189; on Native Americans, 191; rejection of the Hobbesian concept of rights derived exclusively from civil society, 190; on the rights of private adventurers, 191; on the Virginia colonists’ compact with the British Crown, 191
Bluntschli, Johann Kaspar, 246, 250; on civil society, 251; eclectic and dynamic understanding of the law, 251; enthusiasm for European sovereignty and empire, 252; on the occupation of the territory of ‘barbarian tribes’, 252; on the question of the acquisition of ‘territorial sovereignty’, 250; on the right to existence recognised by natural law, 253; support of Bismarck’s unification policy, 251; support of Prussian hegemony, 251
Bodin, Jean, 47

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org
Index

Andrew Fitzmaurice

Cambridge University Press

978–1–107–07649–5 - Sovereignty, Property and Empire, 1500–2000

360

Bodley, Thomas, 62
Bonhils, Henry, 231, 268; on the acquisition of territory, 254; on international law as a means to an international community, 252; on occupation applying only to ‘uninhabited’ territory, 252; rejection of the ‘civilising mission’ and the expansion of empire, 254; on the roots of international law, 251; scepticism of the civilising mission, 292
Botero, Giovanni, 79–80, 87
Boucher, David, 303 n2
Bowyer, George, 231, 251 n57; on common law and civil law, 231 n57; on Roman law as the foundation of civil law, 251
Bracton, Henry de, 66–7
Brazil, Dutch attempts to form a colony in, 99 Braxza, Pierre Savorgnan, 287. See also Congo, the, Braxza’s civilising mission in Bret, Annabel, 41 n33
Brevisima relació de la destrucción de las Indias (de Las Casas), 61
Brink, John Matthias, 262
British East India Company, 126; conquests in India, 150
Buckland, William, 35, 259
Bulkley, John, 25, 182; on the creation of civil society without the establishment of property relations, 179–80; importance of property over sovereignty in his arguments, 179; on Indian rights and the state of nature and the civil state, 176–80, 181 n46; and the Lockean understanding of Indian property rights, 181–2; on Native American political organisation, 178; on Native American understanding of property and value, 180; on the nature of Native American compacts, 180–1; on ‘occupation and cultivation’ as the ‘indisputable title’ to land, 182 n47; on the ‘Premised Claims’ of the Mohegans, 177; on the question of ‘Native right’, 174–5; ‘refutation of the Mohegans’ claim to political society and property’, 174 n5; on the state of nature, 179; on the territorial rights of Indians, 175; treatise of on the use of the claim to occupation as a means of questioning the rights of the imperial state, 173–4
Bulls of Donation (1493), 46, 204
Burke, Edmund, 168
Burler, Joseph, 153
Byrd, Richard E., 323
Cajetanus, 101
Calvert, George, 18
Cambridge University Library, 62
Cano, Melchior, 40, 47
capitalism, 2 n2, 275
Carlisle Commission, 161
Carmichael, Gershom, 26, 152–3; dispute with Pufendorf over the necessity of political obedience, 152; dispute with Pufendorf over the understanding of the legal civil state and property, 152; on the first, second, and third laws of nature, 152; on the ‘Occupation of territory’ and the ‘Occupation of moveables’, 153; support of Locke’s labour theory, 132–4
Carmichael, Robert, 261
Carneades, 190; scepticism of, 158
Cavendish, William, 85
Cecil, Robert, 77
Chakrabarty, Dipesh, 14
Chamberlain, Joseph P., 319
Chandler, Thomas, 193
Charles I (King of England), 18
Charles V (Holy Roman Emperor), 10, 46, 49–50
Charron, Pierre, 99
Chater of Avalon (1623), 18
Chauvinism, cultural, 29
Chesapeake colony, 60–1, 82
Christiania Conference (1910), 313
Christianity: and the dispossession of Native Americans, 69; ways of preaching Christianity in Virginia, 69–70
Christianians, 162
Chrysippus, 36
 Cicero, 35–6, 158; moral philosophy of, 90; and the ‘theatre seat’ analogy of property and occupation, 116, 226, 244 city/cities, 21, 42; walled cities (urbis), 21 civil law, 36, 216; and common law in England, 223; and discussions of occupation in England, 229–32; in England, 260–1; European civil law, 262, 269; formal functions of, 231; origin of property in, 119. See also German civil law, and the law of nations; res nullius (nobody’s property), and civil law; Scotland, civil law as the foundation of the legal system in civil society, 8, 24, 42, 141, 251, 270; benefits of, 130; creation of, 89, 115, 138; fragility of, 124; and Native Americans, 65–6; non-European forms of sovereign civil society, 6; origins of in both self-preservation and the desire to preserve others, 154, 155; prior to the introduction of property, 95; property as a product of, 104, 118, 160, 165; and the pursuit of self-perfection, 145; and security, 155; and the ‘way of reason’ in civil society, 130

© in this web service Cambridge University Press
www.cambridge.org
civilisation, rhetoric of, 29
Cleveland, Grover, 307
Cobden, Richard, on empire as a hazard to free trade, 273
Cocceji, Samuel von, 260, 304
Coe, Paul, on the sovereignty of Aboriginal peoples of Australia, 328
Coe v. The Commonwealth (1991), 318–9; and the ‘enlarged’ concept of terra nullius, 329
Cold War, the, 324
‘colonial protectorates’, invention of, 284
colonisation, 70, 304; of Africa, 327; and the changing character of European colonisation, 115; critique of, 730; justification of, 30, 64, 115, 131–2, 327, 330; justification of by commerce, 72; justification of English colonisation, 25; peculiar understanding of by the English, 25; scepticism of, 265; scepticism of concerning colonisation motivated by the fear of losing liberty at home, 150; Spanish colonisation, 59. See occupation, as a justification for colonisation
Colquhoun, James, 261
Columbia Joint Seminar in International Law, 319–25, 327
Columbus, Christopher, 45
Commentaries on the Modern Civil Law (Bowyer), 231; as an ‘introduction to Grotius, Pufendorf and Vattel’, 232
Commentaries upon international law (Phyllimore), 231 commerce, 216; and the douceur of commerce, 5; freedom of the sea as essential to commerce, 332; influence of in Africa, 297; as a justification for colonisation, 72; and the law of nations, 72; the ‘softness’ of commerce, 150 commercial society: dangers of interest and property in, 159; and moral philosophy, 162 communication: ‘natural communication’, 112; right of, 70–3, 147–8 community: and a community’s decision to employ proprietorship, 113; cosmopolitan community, 149; ‘positive community’, 108, 112–14
Congo, the, 239, 290; Brazza’s civilising mission in, 254; efforts to occupy the Congo, 287; as the focus of European imperial enterprise, 273; reign of terror in conducted by Leopold II, 398; treaties signed by Congolese tribes with European powers, 288. See also International African Association; International Association of the Congo, recognition of as a state by the United States
Congo Free State, 29, 282; annexation of by Belgium, 298; constitution of, 281, 283 n40
Congress of Vienna (1814–15), 222
conquerors, redescription of as ‘settlers’, 22
Conrad, Joseph, 281 n34
Constitution of Carolina (1669), 182
‘contiguity’ (claim to adjacent territory), concept of, 213–14
Control of outer space and the Antarctic analogy (Jessup), 320, 324
Continuersariam illustrium (de Menchaca), 42–3
cosmopolitan right, concept of, 149
Council of Trent, 40
Court Probate Act (1857), 210
Covarrubias y Leyva, Diego de, 40, 46, 50, 253
Crashaw, William, 61 n15; on dispossession of Native Americans, 69; library of, 63 n15, 63; promotion of the Virginia Company by, 62
Creasy, Edward, 235, 278 n18; doubts of concerning the legal arguments used to justify empire, 235; on moral law, 236; on occupation, 236; on positive law, 236
Creation of rights of sovereignty through symbolic acts 1400–1800 (Keller, Lissitzyn and Mann), 213
Croghan, George, 194, 199 n14
cultural diversity/difference, 113–14
cultural relativism, 137
Cumberland, Richard, 133
 Darwinism, national, 275
Davis, Garrett, 211; belief of that occupation must follow discovery in order for sovereignty to be acquired, 211–13; citation of Vallet in support of his claims regarding discovery and possession, 211; views on the Oregon Territory dispute, 211–12
De Bry, Theodore, 80
De civis (Hobbes), 101, 110
De Indis (Grotius), 88, 97; differences between De Indis and On the law of war and peace, 96–7; views of property and occupation in, 91–4
De jure belli ac pacis (On the law of war and peace [Grotius]), 89, 90 n18, 97, 116, 304; differences between De Indis and On the law of war and peace, 96–7; view of property in, 94–8
De jure belli libri tres (Gentili), 69
De jure naturae et gentium (Pufendorf), 106–7, 109, 117, 127, 132, 259, 270
De jure praedae (Commentary on the law of prize and booty [Grotius]), See De Indis (Grotius)
De legibus et consuetudinibus Angliae (On the law and constitution of England [Bracton]), 56

Index

Congo Free State, 29, 282; annexation of by Belgium, 298; constitution of, 281, 283 n40
Congress of Vienna (1814–15), 222
conquerors, redescription of as ‘settlers’, 22
Conrad, Joseph, 281 n34
Constitution of Carolina (1669), 182
‘contiguity’ (claim to adjacent territory), concept of, 213–14
Control of outer space and the Antarctic analogy (Jessup), 320, 324
Continuersariam illustrium (de Menchaca), 42–3
cosmopolitan right, concept of, 149
Council of Trent, 40
Court Probate Act (1857), 210
Covarrubias y Leyva, Diego de, 40, 46, 50, 253
Crashaw, William, 61 n15; on dispossession of Native Americans, 69; library of, 63 n15, 63; promotion of the Virginia Company by, 62
Creasy, Edward, 235, 278 n18; doubts of concerning the legal arguments used to justify empire, 235; on moral law, 236; on occupation, 236; on positive law, 236
Creation of rights of sovereignty through symbolic acts 1400–1800 (Keller, Lissitzyn and Mann), 213
Croghan, George, 194, 199 n14
cultural diversity/difference, 113–14
cultural relativism, 137
Cumberland, Richard, 133
 Darwinism, national, 275
Davis, Garrett, 211; belief of that occupation must follow discovery in order for sovereignty to be acquired, 211–13; citation of Vallet in support of his claims regarding discovery and possession, 211; views on the Oregon Territory dispute, 211–12
De Bry, Theodore, 80
De civis (Hobbes), 101, 110
De Indis (Grotius), 88, 97; differences between De Indis and On the law of war and peace, 96–7; views of property and occupation in, 91–4
De jure belli ac pacis (On the law of war and peace [Grotius]), 89, 90 n18, 97, 116, 304; differences between De Indis and On the law of war and peace, 96–7; view of property in, 94–8
De jure belli libri tres (Gentili), 69
De jure naturae et gentium (Pufendorf), 106–7, 109, 117, 127, 132, 259, 270
De jure praedae (Commentary on the law of prize and booty [Grotius]), See De Indis (Grotius)
De legibus et consuetudinibus Angliae (On the law and constitution of England [Bracton]), 56
Index

362

De officiiis (Cicero), 74
De officio hominum et civium (The whole duty of man, according to the law of nature (Pufendorf)), 105, 259
De procuranda indorum (Acosta), 75, 77, 79–80; and the redescription of Native Americans, 94
De rerum divisione (Bracton), 56
De societate publica cum infidelibus (On public society with non-Christian[s] (Grotius)), 98, 100
De temporibus novissimus (Acosta), 79
Decretists, 83
Declaration of the Rights of Man (1789), 276
decolonisation, 15
Decretum (A concord of discordant canons (Gratian)), 38
Defence of Chapter V of mare liberum (Grotius), 94
Denmark, 316
Des moyens d’acquérir le domaine international (Ortolan), 224
Despagnet, Frantz, 249, 268, 312 n25; on the abandonment of the ‘idealism’ of Hobbes and Pufendorf, 249; critique of empire while at the same time excusing it, 253–4; on the history of occupation, 249–50; on occupation as an historical and contemporary fact, 249; on occupation as a matter of private law, 250; scepticism of the civilising mission, 292; on theories of international law, 249; total respect of for sovereignty, 254
Dickens, Charles, 230
Dickinson, Daniel, 213; on discovery, 213; linking of the principle of occupation with the Monroe Doctrine through the concept of ‘contiguity’, 213–14; rejection of the rights of individual settlers in the Oregon Territory, 213; support of the right of occupation by nations, 213
Diderot, Denis, 221
Digest of Justinian (Justinian), 34–5, 45, 53, 270
Diogenes Laertius, 95
Discourse on inequality (Rousseau), 139
Discovery (invenient), 45, 213, 237; British rejection of discovery as a basis for title, 205 n132; European concepts/discussions of, 100–1; in international law, 312
Dispossession: anxiety and arguments concerning, 65–8; and Christianity as a justification for, 69; of Native Americans, 75; and natural law tradition, 83; warnings concerning among the promoters of the Virginia Company, 69

Doctors’ Commons, 229, 280; demise of, 230; members in favour of selling off the property of, 230; power of civilian lawyers in, 230 dominion, 76; as arising from consent, 113; claims of the Holy Roman Emperor to dominion over all the world, 46–8; ‘imperial’ dominion, 46; overlapping dominion, 46 dominium (ownership), 93, 238, 285
dominium (property), 293
dominium directum (true property), 37–8 dominium eminens (right of eminent domain), 210
dominium jurisdictionis (superiority of a ruler over subjects), 41, 45, 49
dominium utilis (right deriving from the use of property), 37, 50, 210
Donation of Alexander, 47, 67, 307
Donation of Constantine, 101
Donne, John, 73–4; on the colonisation of Virginia, 167–8
Dreghorn, John Maclaurin, 261
Droit des gens

Earl of Dartmouth, 186
Earl of Egremont, rulings of for the Southern American colonies concerning settlements on Native American lands, 186
Earl of Halifax, 187
Earl of Hillsborough, 188
Earl of Shaftesbury, 153; on virtue as innate to humans, 153
East Greenland debate, 29
East Indies, 9, 91–2, 101
El Dorado, 77
Elements of international law (Wheaton), 305
Elizabethans, as promoters of English colonies, 61 empires, 31 n76, 333 n13; abuses of, 333; commercial empire, 346; continental empires, 589, 5; critiques of, 11, 15, 29, 334; decline of continental empires and the rise of commercial empires, 5 n97; establishment of African and Asian empires based on commerce, 151; extension of through commerce rather than conquest, 5; global empires and the use of force, 7–8; ‘informal empire’, 31, 99; inherent European disposition to empire, 13 n32; liberal opposition to empire, 271–2; origins of in the Roman concept of imperium, 17–18; post-Enlightenment commercial empire, 6; reasons for the new race for empire in the 1870s and 1880s, 275–6; scepticism of, 26, 150–1; ‘second’ empires, 5; wealth and luxury created by empire as leading to effeminacy, 150; and Western political thought, 1–2, 10–14. See also empire, justification of; Grotius, Hugo, views on empire; Pufendorf, Samuel, views on empire empire, justification of, 7–8, 333; disingenuous nature of the practice, 47; through the use of treaties, 8; ideological justifications for, 29; influence of the Reformation in shaping justification by occupation, 9–10; and intra-European empire versus extra-European empire, 10; justification for the appropriation of territory, 350; in the sixteenth century, 22 Engelhard, Edouard, 285, 288; on the classic theory of occupation, 288; dissent of concerning Martitz’s conclusions regarding Africa, 288–9; on the extension of European sovereignty into colonial territory, 296 185 England/English empire, 8, 204–5, 262–3, 275, 282; claims of sovereignty west of the Appalachian Mountains, 16; commerce and English colonisation, 71; fear of the cost of conflict with Native Americans over their territory, 186–7; Lockean nature of attacks on the British Crown, 193; loss of British power in North America resulting from dispossession of its forts, 187–8; pacification of Native American nations after the Seven Years’ War, 183; seizure of Dutch colonies in Guiana, 306; shift in control of the empire after the Seven Years’ War, 189 1969; weak civil law tradition in, 167. See also American colonies; North America, English colonisers in English East India Company, 6, 71 Enlightenment, the, 7, 216; anti-imperial sentiment during, 15; cosmopolitan ideals of, 15; critique of the occupation of property during, 269; naturalism and historicism of, 232; primary natural rights theorists of, 217; scepticism of landed empires during, 220, 237; shift during from an emphasis on natural law to natural rights, 217 Epicureans/Epicureanism, 153, 158–9 Essay on the history of civil society (Ferguson), 156 essay on insurances, An (Magens), 263 Essays on Property and Labour (Liebert), 247 Ethiopia, 297 Étude théorique et pratique sur l’occupation (Jèze), 293 Europäisches Völkerrecht in Eriedenszeilen (Günther), 222–3 Europe, 75; democratic spirit of, 249; and the discovery of the new world, 12; relation between property and the European state, 123; self-conscious liberal tradition in, 14 expansionism, 13 Fabre, Joseph, 276 faith, Thomist doctrine of, 41 ferme bestiaire (law of wild beasts), 45–6, 57, 65, 73, 265 n22; Gentil’s view of, 74; reversal of the force of, 75; Vitoria’s use of, 145, 147, 156 Ferguson, Adam, 156, 169, 171, 192, 202–1, 217, 251, 263; on all human states as natural, 234; belief in the concept of human progress, 158; on civil society as the natural condition of mankind, 160; common-sense approach of to natural law, 157; on the law of res nullius, 266; on ‘mankind’ always existing in a civil state, 158, 160; moral philosophy of, 156; on observation as history, 157; on personal motivation, 157; rejection of Epicureanism by, 158–9; ridicule of Hobbes’ idea of equal rights, 160; on the right to property, 158–9; scepticism of concerning the pursuit of property and the claims of European colonising powers, 161–2; on the sociability of ancient natural law, 157; sociability theory of, 156–7, 160; on the state of nature, 158, 160, 266; understanding of the law of res nullius, 161 Ferty, Jules, 275, 288, 291; criticism of by both conservatives and liberals, 276 n15; on the Declaration of the Rights of Man, 276 Filmer, Robert, 122 first occupier’ rights, 139–40, 142, 213 First platform of international law (Cesaire), 233, 278 n19 Fisch, Jörg, 15, 286 Ficus papalis (Crashaw), 63 n1 Fort Chartres, 188 Fort Pitt, 188 France/French empire, 8, 138, 263, 275–6, 281; in Africa, 353; in New France, 8; unique civilising mission of, 276 n13 Francis I (King of France), 61 Franco-Prussian War (1870–4), 242, 250, 290 Franklin, Benjamin, 194 Frederick William I (King of Prussia), 134–5 Frederick William II (King of Prussia) (Frederick the Great), 134, 145, 260, 304; banishment of res nullius from his kingdom, 262–3 freedom, of the sea, 73; British and Russian government agreement to guarantee the freedom of, 206 n136; as essential to <table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Index</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>364</td>
<td>commerce, 332. See also Mare liberum (The free sea) (Grotius)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>French Revolution, 145, 227, 293</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Fundamental Constitutions of Carolina, 117</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Furquier, Francis, 187</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Fusinato, Guido: on the idea of territorium nullius, 289; support of for Martitz, 289</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Gage, Thomas, 186, 188</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Gaius, 240; works as a principal source of Roman law, 240</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Gallagher, John, 6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Gallatin, Alberico: on Grotius’ arguments for the right of occupation, 208 n140; Lockean position of concerning the Oregon Territory dispute, 207; on private individuals creating the rights of property, 208; on sovereignty arising from occupation, 208; on a voice of moderation in the Oregon Territory dispute, 207</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Galloway, Joseph, 193; dismissal by of claims to property based on occupation, 193</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Garnsey, Peter, 35</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Geffcken, Friedrich, 285</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Genêt, Charles, 210</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Geneva, 118</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Geneva Convention, 246–7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Gentili, Alberico, 67, 69, 72 n49, 101; adoption of private law principles as the basis for a law of peoples, 74–5; lands considered unoccupied by, 74; on men as beasts, 74</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>German civil law, and the law of nations, 217</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Germany (Tacitus), 143</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>German/German empire, 275, 281</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>globalisation, 4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Glorious Revolution (1688), 115, 132, 168</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Glossators, 37, 39, 52; and Roman law, 55. See also post-Glossators</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>God, 37, 166, 244; authority of, 76; as providing men with an ‘infinite right’ to the ‘earth and its products’, 113</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Gómez, Francisco López de, 79–80</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>good speed to Virginia, A (Gray), 83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Gratian, 38</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Gray, Robert, 69, 74, 83; description of Virginia Indians as ‘beasts and brutish savages’, 83</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Great Britain. See England/English empire</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Greenland, 25; Denmark’s desire to exclude all foreigners from Greenland, 316; as the focus of polar competition in the 1920s and 1930s between Denmark and Norway, 316; and Norway's claim that East Greenland was terra nullius, 316; settlement of the dispute concerning in the Permanent Court of International Justice, 316–17. See also Hyde, Charles Cheney, opinion of the East Greenland case</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Grimaldi, Edward, 77; translations of Acosta by, 80</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Grotius, Hugo, 1, 6, 11, 23, 44, 89, 104–5, 125, 211; credit given to as the founder of international law, 88, 99; defence of van Heemskerk, 91; on discovery, 45; on the dispossession of Indians, 68; escape of from prison, 88; exile of in France, 88; familiarity of with Acosta’s and Vitoria’s works, 94, 100; and the genealogy of the law of nations, 232; imprisonment of, 88; on the itemised bases of title per Vitoria, 101; on the law of the sea, 57, 313; on lawful society among ‘Indians’, 100; on natural and civil states, 85; on the nature of man, 90; on occupation as contract, 122; on occupation and the origin of property, 96, 167; on the origin of property, 24, 86, 96, 98 n15; Onis’ criticism of, 192; on Portuguese claims to the Moluccas, 120; on ‘primary acquisition’, 97; on property as a creation of agreement and compacts, 158; on property in land and the law of occupation, 121; on property and Roman law doctrine, 96; recognition of as one of the greatest writers on natural law, 88; response of to the capture of the Santa Catarina, 92; on self-interested sociability, 85; on self-preservation, 117; on Spanish authority over Indians, 100; on sociability and self-preservation, 87–91, 90 n18; on the sovereignty of non-Christians, 98; and the ‘theatre seat’ analogy of occupation and occupation, 116; on ‘trade supported by arms’, 99; training of in studia humanitatis, 88; understanding of Vitoria as condemning Spanish conquista, 112; use of res nullius in his theory of ius gentium, 257–8; views on empire, 98–101; work at and support of the Dutch East India Company, 50, 85</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Guatamala Bay, 334</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Guiana. See also terra nullius, and Guiana/Venezuela</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Günther, K. G., 222</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Habermas, Jürgen, 275</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Hague Convention, 247</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Halkiyy, Richard, 68, 71; on the colonisation of America, 71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Hakluytus Posthumus (Purchas his pilgrimage) [Purchas], 62, 67, 79–80; citations of Acosta in, 79; concern of with the ‘second’ and ‘third’ class of barbarians in the...</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Index

Americas, 81; contradictions in concerning colonisation, 82–3; full title of, 81; religion as the main form of, 81

Hallifax, Samuel, 260

Hariot, Thomas, 77

Harrison, Benjamin, 309

Hobbes, Thomas, 215

Hegemony, American hegemony, 223

Hegemony, human perfectibility, 140–1, 143–5

Hermans, 50

Hermeneutics (Conrad), 281 n34

Heemskerck, Jacob van, 91–2

Heffer, Augustine-Wilhelm, 223, 267 n10; on the ‘absolute state’ as belonging to the ‘ancien régime’, 223; on a constitutional state as the highest form of political development, 223; as a founding member of the Institut de droit international, 223; influence of within the Vormärz School, 223; on occupation over wandering or savage peoples, 224; on public opinion as the arbiter of international law, 223–4; scepticism of concerning general colonial propaganda and the ‘civilising mission’ in particular, 224, 234

Hegemony: American hegemony, 12; European cultural and political hegemony, 99; justification of European hegemony, 12–13

Hill, Norman, 330

Histoire philosophique des établissements des Européens aux Indes (Raynal et al.), 221

Historia natural y moral de las Indias (Acosta), 77–8; as an authority on New World cosmology, 78; as a model for Purchas his pilgrimage, 81; pragmatic nature of, 78

Historical consciousness, 20

Historicism, 215, 274

Histoire de travell into Virginia Britannia (Strachey), 78, 83

History, progressive theory of, 23, 26, 117, 121–2, 227; stadial theory of, 22, 119, 271

History of Rome (Niebuhr), 240

Hobbes, Thomas, 23–4, 98, 104 n81, 105, 122, 125; as an adherent of the compact theory of property, 25, 111; on contracts as the basis for all social relations, 103; on the creation of property prior to civil society, 103; on individuals driven by the ‘Fear of Death’, 103; on justice and injustice, 102; on natural and civil states, 85; on the origin of property, 24; rejection of the Aristotelian concept of human sociability, 102; rejection of occupation theory, 102–5, 111; on the relation of law and justice to nature, 103; role of in the Virginia Company, 85; on the state of nature as a state of war, 102

Holst, Adolf, 335; as an advocate for Norway’s claim to Greenland, 317; and the occupation of East Greenland, 316

Holst, Hermann Eduard von, 306

Holy Roman Empire: claims of dominion over all the world by the Holy Roman Emperor, 46–8; imperium of, 38; sovereignty of, 37

Hooker, Richard, 62

Hottentots, 46

Hudson Bay Company, 204

Huguccio (Hugo of Pisa), 38

Human behaviour, as governed by virtue, 87

Human perfectibility, 140–1, 143–5

Human rights, 275 n11, 299

Humanism, 90; legal humanism, 61

Humanitarians, as apologists for empire, 272

Hume, David, y–y, 26, 127, 154, 156, 162, 169, 171, 245; agreements and disagreements with Hobbes concerning civil society, 162–3; attempt to reconcile moral philosophy with commercial society, 162; joy of at the prospect of American independence, 162; on the law of occupation, 165–5; on the notion of imperial decimation, 162; on occupation as central to the understanding of the law of property, 162; support of trade and commerce, 162

Hutcheson, Francis, 152, 217, 264, 266; on the acquisition of property, 155; the appreciation of beauty by humans, 154; break of with Carmichael’s moral philosophy, 152; on the centrality of benevolence to moral sense, 154; on civil society, 154; critique of empire, 156; critique of Hobbes and Pufendorf, 153; moderation and toleration of, 152; on moral sense, 154; on natural sociability, 153; on the natural state, 152; on nature and natural law, 152; on the origin of property, 154–5; on the ‘rights of mother-countries over colonies’, 156; on the seizing (occupation) of animals, 155; on self-preservation, 153; on the state prior to the civil state, 152; struggle of with the ascendance and glorification of commercial society, 152

Hyde, Charles Cheney, 239; opinion of the East Greenland case, 320–1

Imperialism, 298; development of anti-imperial critique, 334; passim; ‘free trade imperialism’, 6; ‘new imperialisms’, 275, 277

Imperium (absolute power), 293; of Christian princes, 76; of European colonisers, 242; Spanish and Portuguese claims to, 99; territorial imperium, 235

Indigenous peoples/societies, 25, 84; in Australia, 114; destruction of, 17; See also Native Americans; Virginia Indians

Inheritance, 54 n91
Index

Innocent IV (Pope), 39, 94 inquiry into the rights of British colonies, An (Bland), 189
Institut de droit international, 216, 218, 223, 242, 246, 267, 276, 283, 290, 295, 308; 1888 meeting of concerning the subject of occupation, 288–90; 292; as apologists for the projection of European sovereignty, 210; commission of to decide the question of effective occupation, 288–6; and the Congo question, 279; differences within on the question of sovereignty, 252; fear of despotism among, 248; founding of, 223, 247; influence of Vitoria among the members of, 254; liberal nature of its members, 252; on the meaning and scope of territorm nullius, 289; and occupation, 246–7; as the premier forum for debate concerning international law, 243; scepticism of concerning colonisation, 289; varied spectrum of imperial critique among, 252–5. See also Revue générale de droit international public
Institutes (Gaius), 240
Institutes of Justinian (Justiniian), 34–5, 37, 53, 240
Institutes of natural law (Rutherford), 196 n103, 196 insurance (shipping insurance), 263
International African Association, 263
International Association of the Congo, 283 n49; recognition of as a state by the United States, 287 International Court of Justice, 325–6, 328 international law, 12, 215–16, 249, 269, 312, 328; creation of credited to Grotius, 88, 99; and debates concerning empire within international law, 273; as directed by experience, history, and public opinion, 249; as European international law, 14; laws of governing the acquisition of territory, 240; natural law foundations of, 99, 216; popularisation of the idea of terra nullius in, 312 n25; public opinion as the arbiter of, 223–4; rise of in the nineteenth century, 311; role of in the relationship of liberalism to empire, 299. See also Twiss, Travers, on the development of theories of international law international lawyers, polarisation of, 289 internationalism, 380–90
Inupiat people, 306 islands, rising of in the sea, 54 n91, 55 n94 ius gentium. See law of nations (ius gentium) ius in rem (right to a thing), 37
James I (King of England), 18, 61, 65
James II (King of England), 115
Jamestown, 78
Jefferson, Thomas, on all of America as held by allodial title, 200; criticism of both commercial society and that of ‘savage Americans’, 202; as a Lockean, 201–2; on occupation as a justification for the American Revolution, 203; on the rights of British Americans, 200–1; on the Powhatan confederacy, 202; on the Rocky Mountains as the natural western boundary of the United States, 207; scepticism of civil society, 201; theory of liberty, 203; on the use of occupation, 199–200, 203; view of property, 203
Jeffersonians, and the right of occupation, 27
Jessup, Philip C., 319–20, 322–3; as a judge on the International Court of Justice, 326; motives of concerning terra nullius in the polar regions, 333–4
Jèze, Gaston, 255, 291, 293, 297 n87; on the anti-imperial tradition, 295; articles proposed by concerning occupation, 256–7; on the Berlin Act, 295; challenge of to German occupation of the French Jewish community, 298; on the conditions necessary for a territory to be a territorium nullius, 295–6; on criticism of the Berlin Conference, 294; on European powers’ dependence on colonisation, 294; on the extension of European sovereignty into colonial territory, 196; French monarchist demonstrations against, 297; on the history of occupation from Roman law through natural law, 294; on the justice of occupation, 294; opposition to of the legal recognition of the Congo Free State, 297; as representative for Haile Selassie in the League of Nations, 297–8
Joanna Catherina (ship, formerly John and Robert of Newcastle), 262
Johnson, Thomas, 219
Johnson, William, 186, 188, 194
Joint Seminar in International Law (Columbia University), 29 jurists, nineteenth-century, 217 n2, 218–19, 268 n31, 276, 283; lack of interest in extra-European imperial expansion, 219; reforms pursued by, 218
Jus privatum Romanum Germanum (Titius), 127 just war, 75; Vitoria on, 40, 48–9
justification, Protestant doctrine of, 41
Kant, Immanuel, 29, 121, 127, 134, 151, 220, 293, 295; anti-imperialist arguments of, 147–8;
on civil constitutions, 145–7; on ‘civil union’, 146; on the concept of res nullius, 148 n113; on the constitution of a legitimate treaty, 296; on contracts, 296 n84; on hospitality to strangers (‘universal hospitality’), 147–9; on the idea that community could become a universal state, 252; linkage of the violation of the rights of colonised peoples to the violation of all rights, 148; on the natural right of communication, 147; on original acquisition (‘original occupation’), 146–7; repudiation of Locke’s idea of cultivation as necessary for occupation, 146; on the Roman law of occupation as an explanation for the origin of property, 145–6; on ‘taking control’ as the interpretation of ‘occupation’, 146; use of the concept of perfectibility to critique the state, 144–5
Kekulé, Paul, on the historical use of terra nullius, 303 n2
Keene, Edward, 98
Keller, Arthur, 320–1; on the meaning of terra nullius as land not under any sovereignty, 322
Keller, Frederic-Louis, 251
King Aramamet, 216
Kléber, Johann Ludwig, 216, 221, 233, 267; on legitimate occupation, 221; on the possibility of a universal world state, 222; on universal rights, 222
Koskenniemi, Martti, 50, 217 n2, 218–19, 233 n69, 268 n31
L’Afrique Equatoriale, 282
Lansing, Robert, 314; on ‘political sovereignty’, 314
Las Casas, Bartolomé de, 41, 61, 254
Laslett, Peter, 117
Latin, medieval, influence of European vernacular grammar on, 55
Lavleye, Émile de, 285 law: division between domestic and external law, 168; human law, 46–7; imperial law, 167; municipal law, 167; universal laws, 299.
See also civil law; international law; law of the first taker; law of nations (ius gentium); law of occupation; law of the sea; natural law; private law law of the first taker, 118–19, 259–60, 312 n24 law of nations (ius gentium), 10, 45, 57, 70, 210, 216, 231, 236–7, 261–2; and commerce, 72;
common debates over the occupation of territory in writing concerning the law of nations, 215–17; community of, 289; in the context of legal exchanges with non-European peoples, 16; as a creation of natural law, 258; diplomatic uses of, 205; and the distinction between barbarians and civilised men, 295; as the European law of nations, 15; as evolutionary, 222; foundation of in Roman and civil law, 261; Grotian values in, 99; as a hybrid of positive and natural law, 220–1; reconciliation of with common law, 167; and the right to establish sovereignty to sovereign nations, 259
See also German civil law, and the law of nations; law of nations (ius gentium), genealogy of law of nations (ius gentium), genealogy of, 232–9; development of the two great branches of the law of nations (natural law and positivism), 233; first period of dominated by Grotius, 232; fourth period of characterised by the fusion of natural and positive law, 235; second period of dominated by Pufendorf, 232; third period of dominated by Wolff, 232 law of nations, The (Droit des gens [Vattel]), 140, 190 law of nations, The (The [Twiss]), 232 law of nature, 119, 175, 234, 237.
See also Pufendorf, Samuel, on breach of the law of nature; Pufendorf, Samuel, on the ‘fundamental law of nature’ law of occupation, 1, 15, 21, 33; critique of its use in justifying colonisation, 242; French jurists’ concern with, 243; and the Roman law of occupation, 31, 43, 45, 60, 98, 110, 120–1, 195, 240; See also Hume, David, on the law of occupation; Kant, Immanuel, on the Roman law of occupation as an explanation for the origin of property; Maine, Henry Sumner, scepticism concerning Roman law and the law of occupation law of the sea: Grotius’ view of, 57, 313; Prussian view of, 305 laws of war; and disputes arising from the law of prizes in war, 263; during the American Civil War, 247; main issue of, 242
Lee, John, 230
Leibnitz, Gottfried Wilhelm, 233
Lemkis, Raphaël, 208
Leopold II (King of Belgium), 239, 276; commissioning of the draft constitution of the Congo Free State, 282; complaints brought against by the Portuguese government, 281;
Index

Leopold II (King of Belgium) (cont.) creation of the International African Association by, 279; failure to interest the Belgian government in his colonising of the Congo, 279; opposition to within the British Foreign Office, 281; political and legal opposition to colonial ambitions of, 279; reign of terror of in the Congo, 298

Leviathan (Hobbes), 102

liberals/liberalism, 274, 299; and the civilising mission, 272; complicity of in empire building, 274, 275; divisions within liberal political theory over the question of rights, 275; ‘Janus-faced nature’ of liberalism, 275;
liberal reformers as internationalists, 300;
opposition of to empire, 272–2, 275; origins of, 274 n5; post-colonial critique of, 13;
role of international law in the relationship of liberalism to empire, 299; self-interest as a basis for liberal critique of empire, 299;
use of international law by to legitimise empire, 272

liberty, 11, 299

Lieber, Francis, 247; on civilisation as man’s true state of nature, 247; and the ‘Lieber Code’, 247; on occupation leading to appropriation, 247; on occupation as the origin of property, 247; scepticism concerning the state of nature as anything but hypothetical, 247

linguistic turn, the, 19

Lipsius, Justus, 87, 90

Lissitzyn, Joseph P., 240–1; on the meaning of terra nullius as land not under any sovereignty, 321

Lister, Thomas, 282

Livinoff, Maxim, 297–8

L’occupation des territoires sans maître (Salomon), 291

Locke, John, 1, 3, 11, 23, 82, 104, 125, 167, 174; devolution of the theory of particular property, 118; on distinguishing the chief object of particular property from a state of nature, 121; on enclosure, 120 n159; influence of among American revolutionaries, 184; interest of in the colonisation of America, 115; on land as the chief matter of property, 120; Lockean nature of attacks on the British Crown by writers other than Locke, 193; on natural law, 59, 85; on natural law justifications for Indian dispossession, 59–60; on Native American property rights, 181–2; on the ‘origin of ownership’, 133; on primitive and civil historical stages, 118 n149; professional involvement of in the colonisation of Carolina, 115; on the progressive theory of history, 122; rejection of the idea of occupation as symbolic acts, 120; on the Roman law of occupation, 120; on sovereignty, 122–3; on the state of nature and the state of war, 177; on the status of American ‘Indians’, 115; on the two senses of property (common and particular), 116; on use creating both property and value, 117; on value as the basis of a progressive understanding of history, 117; view of understanding of property, 24–5, 116, 258
See also Locke, John, labour theory of Locke, John, labour theory of, 26, 109, 118 n51, 126, 172, 196 n105, 202; and the act of ‘taking’ as ‘labor’, 119; Blackstone’s view of, 169; contrast of with ‘occupation theory’, 118–19; dismissal of by Ahrens, 226;
dismissal of by Hume, 164; and the examples (from Roman law) of wild beasts and ‘pears’ of the sea, 119–20; labour and property value, 117; occupation as labour, 114–22. See also Barbeyrac, Jean, support of Locke’s labour theory; Carmichael,
Gershon, support of Locke’s labour theory;
Titus, Gottlieb Gerhard, support of Locke’s labour theory

Lord Dunmore, 186

Lord Granville, 282

Lord Salisbury, 307

Lords Proprietor of Carolina, 182

Lorimer, James, 238; as an advocate of the civilising mission, 238; on the recognition of equal racial equality between whites and blacks in America, 238

Lovejoy, A. O., 19

Mabry, Gabriel Bonno de, 244

Mabo, Edward Koiki, 288

Machiavelli, Niccolò, 7, 87, 150

Macpherson, C. B., 2 n2

Magens, Nicholas, 263

Maigne, Jules, 276

Maine, Henry Sumner, 217, 249–42, 249; as the chief exponent of the British historical school in international law, 239; critique of landed empires by, 244; influence of the German historical school on, 239; scepticism concerning Roman law and the law of occupation, 240–1; on the use of occupancy to understand the origin of property, 241

Mallet, Edward, 282, 288

Mallet-Provost, Savero, 309

Mandeville, Bernard, 153
Index

Mann, Frederick, 320–1; on the meaning of terra nullius as land not under any sovereignty, 321
Manning, William Oke, 232
Mare liberum (The free sea (Grotius)), 68, 71, 91–2, 97–8, 100; attack on, 94; Hakluyt’s translation of, 71–2; primary argument of, 93–3
Martens, Frédéric de, 308
Martens, Georg Friedrich von, 322
Martens, Frédéric de, 308
Martinez, J. E. G. de, 207
Martins, Georg Friedrich von, 220; on occupation as a means of creating title, 221
Martins, Frédéric de, 220; on occupation as a means of creating title, 221; relativism of, 222; understanding of the law of nations as a hybrid of positive and natural law, 220, 233
Martitz, Ferdinand, 285, 308; on regions considered to be territorium nullius, 285
Mauritania, 325–6
Mbeumbe, Achille, on the ‘territorialisation of the sovereign state’, 286 men, as beasts, 74
Menchaca, Fernando Vázquez de, 40, 42, 46; views on prescription, 43–4, 226; views on private property, 43
Mercer, George, 187
Meriam people, 328
Metaphysical elements of the doctrine of law (Kant), 295
Metaphysics of morals (Kant), 145, 147
Michell, Abraham Louis, 262–3
Mill, John Stuart, 1, 11, 227–8; influence of the Scottish historical school on his theory of occupation, 229; on the origin of private property, 228; on two types of natural laws, 228
Miller, David, 314; on the Arctic regions becoming occupied and subsumed under sovereignty, 314
Mitterrand, François, 297
Mohawks, 187
Mohican case, the (dispute of the Mohicans with the colony of Connecticut), 173, 180; position of the British Crown concerning, 174. See also Bulkeley, John Molina, Luis de, 40, 64
Monroe, James, response of to British and Russian claims to the Oregon Territory, 207
Monroe Doctrine, 27, 123, 212; use of in the terra nullius debate concerning Venezuela, 306–7. See also Dickinson, Daniel, linking of the principle of occupation with the Monroe Doctrine through the concept of ‘contiguity’
Montaigne, Michel de, 97, 90, 114
Montesquieu, 4, 58, 150, 226; on the douceur of commerce, 5; on the softness of commerce, 50
Montezuma, 75
Montesquieu, J. E. G. de, 314–15 moral philosophy, 15; and commercial society, 162
Moro, Thomas, 60–1
Moroeco, 290, 325–6
Moser, Johann Jacob, 233; belief in experience over reason as a weapon against absolutism, 233
Moyn, Samuel, 275
Moynier, Gustave, 246
Murray, William, 168
Murray Islands, 128
Musolfini, Benito, 297 nationalism, 274; anti-imperial nationalism, 298; in the nineteenth century, 15, 217
Native Americans, 97, 146, 155, 225; dispossession of, 171–3; failure of to create political societies, 73; recognition of as civil society, 64–70; redescription of as non-civil or devoid of society, 73–9; rights of and the concept of occupation, 85; and the struggle over sovereignty, 186; use of the arguments of occupation by American colonists against Native Americans, 172. See also Algomquian peoples; Mohawks; Mohican case, the natural law, 36, 46, 59, 105, 209, 215, 222, 274; argument of natural law that property is created by taking something, 258–9; development of and the emergence of the ‘modern’ school of natural law, 88–9; development of natural law theory by Spanish theologians, 73; distinction between ‘modern’ and ‘ancient’ natural law traditions, 213–2; distinction between scholastic and seventeenth-century natural law, 89; inversion of the polemical force of natural law arguments of Spanish theologians, 84; late eighteenth-century natural law as empty in terms of ‘practical directives for government’, 219; natural law arguments of trade and friendship, 60; natural law defence of the rights of non-European peoples, 137; natural law justifications of Indian dispossession, 59–60, 83; and the natural law of the moral world, 228; and positive law, 268; primary role of, 235; Protestant account of natural law and property, 160; and the pursuit of perfection, 220–1; redescription by Purchas of Vitoria’s natural law assumptions in defence of Indian rights, 82; role of in international law, 234; Roman concept of, 33; synthetic understanding of, 216; tensions between natural law and customary law, 38–9; theories and theorists of in the seventeenth century, 23–4; utilitarian objections to, 248.
Index

See also Otronal, Eugène, on the difference between natural and positive law natural resources, exploitation of, 4 natural rights, 24, 48, 215, 235
naturalism, 232, 339
natural and moral history of the east and west Index, The (Acosta), 77, 79; Grimstone’s translation of, 80 nature, 37, 42; exploitation of, 164; the release of nature’s potential as necessary to the establishment of property, 85
‘Nature’ (Mill), 328
Nebuchadnezzer, 46
Nesselrode, Karl, 205
Netherlands, the. See Dutch empire
Neuchâtel, 138
New Guinea, 328
New institute of the imperial or civil law (Wood), 264
New Zealand, 6
Niebuhr, Barthold Georg, 212
Nootka Sound Treaty (Nootka crisis, 204
Nootka Sound Treaty (Nootka crisis), 212
Norway, 311
Notes on the state of Virginia (Jefferson), 202
Nys, Ernst, 255, 297 n87, 312 n25
Observations on some points of law (Dreghorn), 261 occupation, 34, 45, 81, 94, 216, 236, 287 n56; as an act of self-preservation, 25, 104; adaptability of the theory of, 332; attitudes of British jurists toward, 236–8; Barbeyrac and Titius’ modification of the claim that occupation is constituted by intention, 128–9; changing historical contexts of, 18–20, 26–7; Cicero’s ‘theatre seat’ analogy of property and occupation, 116; concept of in the sixteenth century, 215–16; and the concept of rights created by occupation, 86; and the concepts of rights and progress, 3–4; in the context of Western political thought, 332–4; development of a concept of occupation appropriate to commercial empires, 5–6; distinction between physical occupation and intention to occupy, 129; employment of in the eighteenth century for the rights of colonisers against the claims of the imperial state, 172; endorsement of as the basis of title, 205; engagement between Europeans and non-Europeans concerning the question of occupation, 17 n45; European occupation, 31; as a global concept, 15; history of, 249–50; as an idea used to legitimise empire, 13; imperial occupation, 7; as a justification for colonisation, 16–17, 24–5; as the origin of property, 116 n2, 159, 160, 215, 226, 243, 247; as the original form of acquisition, 237; as a private law principle, 74; resiliency of as a theory in Western political thought, 332; right of for citizens of the United States moving westward, 237; and terra nullius as a ‘cardinal condition’ of valid occupation, 326; of territory, 8; theories of in sixteenth-, seventeenth- and eighteenth-century Europe, 3, 22–3, 125–6; as a universal doctrine of appropriation, 16, 332; and the use of occupation to determine acquisition of territory, 241. See also De Indis (Grotius), views of property and occupation in; law of occupation; occupation (occupatio), concept of in the Middle Ages; occupation of sovereignty; Pufendorf, Samuel, on occupation as contract; Smith, Adam, on property, occupation, and the four stages of human society occupation (occupatio), concept of in the Middle Ages, 2, 4, 21; difference between medieval and seventeenth-century conceptions of, 86–7; in medieval civil and canon law, 36–9 occupation of sovereignty, 6, 164, 166, 239, 250, 252; occupation as the basis for sovereignty, 138–9; preoccupation with in sixteenth-century legal discourse, 6–7. See also Berlin Conference (1884–8)
Of occupancy (Pufendorf), 109
aokeios (approx. ‘appropriate actions’), 89
Oldenbarnevelt, Jan van, 88
Olivcrona, Karl, 118 n111
On the American Indians (Vitoria), 49
On civil power (Vitoria), 49
On ends (Cicero), 36
On the natural sociability of mankind (Hutcheson), 112
‘On property’ (Locke), 120
‘On the use and abuse of the word right’ (Bentham), 227

© in this web service Cambridge University Press
www.cambridge.org
Index

| Oregon Territory, The (Twiss), 209–10, 238 | Oregon Territory dispute, 27, 144, 170–1, 225; claims of the rights of sovereignty in the Northwest by Spain and Russia, 206; claims of the rights of sovereignty in the Northwest by the United States and England, 206–7; Gallatin’s proposed compromise concerning the dispute, 207; lack of discussion of terra nullius in the dispute, 205; refusal of the British to relinquish their interests in the territory, 207; Spanish claims to the Oregon Territory based on the ‘rights’ of discovery, 206, 211; use of occupation to test the claims of Russia, Spain, England, Spain and the United States concerning Oregon, 205–6, 206 n334. See also Dickinson, Daniel, rejection of the rights of individual settlers in Oregon Territory; Oregon Territory dispute, views of Vattel versus Locke concerning Oregon Territory dispute, views of Vattel versus Locke concerning, 203–4, 207–9, 211; Gallatin’s Lockean position concerning the dispute, 207; and the Lockean notion of individuals establishing sovereignty rights, 208–9; Lockean views concerning the dispute held by members of Congress, 208–9. See also Davis, Garrett, views on the Oregon Territory dispute; Oregon Territory, The (Twiss) |
| Oregon Trail, 207 | Oregon Territory dispute, 27, 144, 170–1, 225; claims of the rights of sovereignty in the Northwest by Spain and Russia, 206; claims of the rights of sovereignty in the Northwest by the United States and England, 206–7; Gallatin’s proposed compromise concerning the dispute, 207; lack of discussion of terra nullius in the dispute, 205; refusal of the British to relinquish their interests in the territory, 207; Spanish claims to the Oregon Territory based on the ‘rights’ of discovery, 206, 211; use of occupation to test the claims of Russia, Spain, England, Spain and the United States concerning Oregon, 205–6, 206 n334. See also Dickinson, Daniel, rejection of the rights of individual settlers in Oregon Territory; Oregon Territory dispute, views of Vattel versus Locke concerning Oregon Territory dispute, views of Vattel versus Locke concerning, 203–4, 207–9, 211; Gallatin’s Lockean position concerning the dispute, 207; and the Lockean notion of individuals establishing sovereignty rights, 208–9; Lockean views concerning the dispute held by members of Congress, 208–9. See also Davis, Garrett, views on the Oregon Territory dispute; Oregon Territory, The (Twiss) |
| Ortolan, Eugène, 224, 225 n31; on American Indians compared to nomadic peoples, 225; on the difference between natural and positive law, 236; on occupation, 224–5 | Ortolan, Jean-Félicité-Théodore, 225 n31 |
| Orts, James, 189; on the concept of autonomy that derives from occupation, 192; dismissal of seventeenth-century compact theory by, 192; legal training of, 192 | Owen, Robert, 208 |
| Owen, Robert Dale, 208 | Oxford University Library, 62 |
| Pagden, Anthony, 51, 72 n49, 265 n122; on employment of terra nullius in the law of nations, 302 n2 | Palmas Island arbitration, 320 |
| Palmer, Roundell, 230 | Papal Bull inter caetera (1493), 8 |
| Papal Bull inter caetera | Paris Commune, 290 n68 |
| Paul, 95 | Paucenfet, Julian, 282, 307–8 |
| Pays d’En Haut, 188; middle ground of the French and Algonquian nations in, 188 | Percy, George, 62 |
| Percy, Henry, 62 | perfection, pursuit of in society, 220 |
| Permanent Court of International Justice (PCIJ), 316–17, 320 | Peters, Richard, 186 |
| philanthropy, 294; philanthropists as apologists for empire, 372 | Philimore, Robert Joseph, 229; on cultivation as an obligation imposed on man, 238; on occupation by a discoverer, 237; on occupation as the original form of acquisition, 237; as a member of the Doctors Commons, 230; and the Prince of Wales incident, 230; as Queen’s Advocate General, 230 |
| Philo | Philo, 228, 229, 233, 236, 237, 238, 239; on American political ideas/concepts: persistence of throughout history, 210; use of by political elites and theorists, 20–1; political institutions, strength of, 66; political obedience, 115 |
| Political Science Quarterly, 320 | political society, 21–2, 52, 144, 332; as res publica, 21. See also Native Americans, failure of to create political societies |
| Political theory of possessive individualism (Macpherson), 2 n2 | Politics (Aristotle), 42 |
| Porphyry, 95 | Portugal/Portuguese empire, 8, 101, 282; Portuguese claims in the Congo, 280; Portuguese claims to the Moluccas, 120; positivism, 215, 217, 239, 267, 274; advances in, 233; encouragement of the concept that one possesses rights by possessing sovereignty, 274; as hostile to natural law, 253 |
| possession, 128, 160; occupation as the origin of, 226 possessive discourse, history of, 2 n2 post-Glossators, 37, 46–7; and the concept of overlapping domination, 46 | Pradier-Fodéré, Paul, 248; as an editor of Vattel and Grotius, 248; identification of occupation with labour, 248–9; as a member of the Institut de droit international, 248; on rights as anterior to the creation of civil society, 248; on the rights of nomadic peoples, 253 |
| ‘Presidential address’ (E. Scott), 312–3 | Price, Richard, 162 |
Principles of moral and political science (Ferguson), 156, 160–1, 165 private law, 169; occupation as a matter of private law, 215, 250; occupation as a private law principle, 74. See also Gentili, Alberico, adoption of private law principles as the basis for a law of peoples, 53 proclamation of property, 11, 12, 40; association of with sinfulness, 93; Cicero’s ‘theatre seat’ analogy of property and occupation, 116; common/community property, 79, 990, 116; compact theory of, 23–6, 122, 134, 179; as created in a state of nature, 103; division of, 54 n93; and the doctrine of the sea as common property, 97; occupation of property following conquest, 245; occupation of property as a matter of private law, 215; occupation-based theory of, 27, 126 n2, 131, 139, 162; origin of, 24, 149, 247; particular property, 116; as a product of agreement, 121; as a product of civil society, 104, 131, 160, 163; and the progressive theory of history, 122; property in wild beasts as the focus of Roman law, 109; questions concerning the creation of (from compacts or individual acts?), 86; the relational meaning of property, 116; relationship between vice and private property, 95; and the release of nature’s potential as necessary to the establishment of property, 85; as a ‘right by the natural law of reason’, 139; seizure of (possesso), 93; and the theory of justification, 93; value of, 23, 26. See also De Indis (Grotius), views of property and occupation in; De jure belli ac pacis (On the law of war and peace [Grotius]), view of property in; occupation; property rights; rei nullius (nobody’s property); Smith, Adam, on property, occupation, and the four stages of human society property rights; as arising from sovereignty and civil society, 131; association of the right to property with the right to property in oneself, 158; property rights and first possession of a thing, 128; and the question of whether property rights can be established outside of state sovereignty, 27
Proudhon, Pierre-Joseph, 226, 244; on occupation, 226–7, 333; rejection of the idea of property as a natural right, 226, 244
Proverbs, book of, 95
Prussia, 118, 223, 260, 162; Prussian view of the law of the sea, 105 public opinion, 274. See also Heffter, Auguste-Willhelm, on public opinion as the arbiter of international law
Putendorf, Samuel, 6, 23, 85, 104, 115, 125, 167, 191; bleak view of human nature, 105–6, 163; on breach of the Law of Nature, 112; criticism of Aristotle, 114; critique of Hobbes’ view of the pre-civil stage of man, 106; on the dangers inherent in the pre-civil state, 106–7, 124; defence of cultural difference by, 111; denial of the natural right to consumption, 117; on discovery, 45; on the division of property, 128, 195; on the existence of property prior to civil society, 108; on the ‘fundamental Law of Nature’, 106; and the genealogy of the law of nations, 213; imprisonment of, 105; on ‘negative community’, 108; on negative community and private property, 108; on occupation as contract, 105–7, 109–10, 122; on the occupation of territory, 110–11; on the origin of property, 24, 86, 107; Oti’s criticism of, 192; on ownership and sovereignty as based on different relationships to the land, 113; on ‘positive community’, 108, 112; on possession proceeding from ‘mutual Agreement’, 128; on private property, 117; on property and compact, 109, 178; on property created in a state of nature, 103; and the ‘reconstruction of rights in terms of duties’, 114; rejection of custom as a basis for the law of nature, 114; rejection of the right of hospitality, 148; relativism of, 112; on self-preservation, 114; Smith’s criticism of, 165; and the ‘theatre seat’ analogy of property and occupation, 116; on the three types of natural states, 106 1886; Titius’ criticism of, 130; understanding of Vitoria as an apologist for empire, 112; on ‘use’ and occupation, 111–12; use of the Roman law of the ‘first taker’, 125; views on empire, 112–14
Purchas, Samuel, 62, 66; familiarity of with Vitoria’s writings, 67; indebtedness of to Acosta, 79–84; on the introduction of the Catholic mass into Mexico, 80; on Mexicans as belonging to the ‘third’ class of barbarity, 85; opinion of Virginia and Virginia Indians, 81–2; quarrel of with Pope Alexander VI, 67–8; redescription of Vitoria’s natural law assumptions in defence of Indian rights, 82; on the rights of indiels, 71–2; on Spanish dispossession of Native Americans, 67–9
Index

Purchas his pilgrimage. See Hakluytus Posthumus (Purchas his pilgrimage [Purchas])

Quedem nullius, 86

Queen Maud Land, 323

Queensland, 218

Raleigh, Walter, 77

Rationalism, Occidental, 12

Raynal, Guillaume Thomas François (Abbé), 221

Reading delivered before the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple in the year 1810 (Bowyer), 57 n.117

Recueil des traités (von Martens), 220

Reddie, James, 234, 239

Reflections previous to the establishment of a militia (Ferguson), 156

Reformation, the, 40, 51, 87, 112; Reformation theology, 95

Relation of the state of Virginia (Rolfe), 70, 82

Relatiuni universali (Bottero), 79

relativism, 137; and free human action, 137. See also cultural relativism; Pufendorf, Samuel, relativism of religion of nature delineated, The (Wollaston), 126 n.2

res in bonis nullius, 57, 72

res in nullius, 56

res natura nulli, 56

res nullius (nobody’s property), 21, 56, 148, 161, 163, 167, 244, 254, 256, 267 n.10, 295; as all territories not inhabited by Christians, 292; analyses of in the context of Roman law, 53, 259; appearance of in medieval commentaries on Roman law, 55; and civil law, 260–4; and common property, 264–5; concept of in the nineteenth century, 267; concept of in the twentieth century, 279 as a critique of colonisation, 266–7, 270; distinction between res nullius and territorium nullius, 286; as the doctrine concerning the occupation of property, 250; genealogy of, 51–8; and the grammar of classical Latin, 53–5; and international law, 267–70; Kling’s definition of, 57; in the law of nations, 258, 265; as a law created by compacts, 269; law natural conception of, 258; as a principle of Roman law, 258; as a principle that applies only outside the state, 305; problems with the scholarship concerning, 51–2; reification of in medieval civil and canon law, 52; use of in discussions of the occupation of polar regions and the Space Race, 265; use of in the eighteenth century, 256–7; Vitoria on the doctrine of, 57–8. See also Frederick William II (King of Prussia [Frederick the Great]), banishment of res nullius from his kingdom; Vitoria, Francisco de, as the source for the theory of res nullius; Wood, Thomas, exclusion of res nullius from the Roman law of the property of first occupant res quodem nullius, 86

Reynolds, Henry, 320 n.85

riches, Christian scepticism of, 40 rights: question of whether rights are created by states or belong to humans in nature, 275–6; reaction of Hobbes and Pufendorf against the universal rights, 275 n.11; rights of superior races, 275–6. See also human rights; universal rights rights of the British colonies asserted and proved, The (Otis), 191–2

Ritchie, David, 233 n.69

Robinson, Christopher, 206

Robinson, Ronald, 6

Rolfe, John, 70, 82

Rolin-Jacquemyns, Gustave, 246

Roman Antiquities; or, An account of the Manners and Customs of the Romans (Adam), 259

Roman law, 21, 33–3, 52, 111, 128; the concept of occupation in Roman law, 33, 43, 45, 60, 98, 110, 120–3, 195, 260, 264; contradictions in, 37; as the foundation of civil law, 231; influence of European vernacular grammar on, 55; and medieval Glossators, 55; property and Roman law doctrine, 96. See also law of the first taker

Rothschild, Emma, 21

Rousseau, Jean-Jacques, 6, 134, 138, 151, 201; on the connection between occupation and sovereignty, 139–40; on the idea of property, 139; on individual property rights as subordinate to community rights, 139; on occupation as the basis of property, 139; on the principles of occupation applied to states, 140; on the right of occupation in nature, 138; on the rights of the ‘first occupier’, 139–40

Rudmose-Brown, Robert Neal, 314; on resolving the Spitsbergen status through the Versailles negotiations, 314–15

Rulfinus, 38

Russia, 204, 311, 313; edict (‘ukase’) of 1821, 204, 206 n.156. See also Nootka crisis

Rutherford, Thomas, 165, 244; on the express agreement to create property as ‘division’, 197; on Locke’s theory of the origin of property, 197; on the obtaining of territory by a nation, 197; on the tacit agreement to create property as ‘occupancy’, 197

© in this web service Cambridge University Press

www.cambridge.org
Index

sacred things, 54 n91
Said, Edward, on the conscience of Conrad, 281 n34
Sallust, on empire, 4, 150
Salmon, Charles, 255, 268, 291; on the confusion of sovereignty with property, 293; on the extension of European sovereignty into colonial territory, 296; on the just uses of occupation, 291–2; on the legality of occupation in colonial contexts, 293; objection to the principles agreed on at the Berlin Conference, 291; on res nullius as all territories not inhabited by Christians, 292; on territorial nullius and res nullius, 291; on the theory and practice of treaties, 293; on the type of societies that possess sovereignty, 292; on the use of religion to justify conquest, 292
Sandys, Edwin, 62
Santa Catarina (ship), 91, 99
Savigny, Friedrich Carl von, 217, 241, 251; commitment of to Roman law, 240; impact of his work in England, 239
Sayre, Frances Bowes, 312 n27
Scaliger, Joseph, 99
Schmalz, Theodore, 233
Schmitt, Carl, 12, 14–15, 28 n77; on occupation, 13
School of Salamanca, 3, 40–51 passim, 100, 219; on the concept of dominion, 41–2; defence of indigenous rights by, 64–5, 73; and Western political thought, 50; See also School of Salamanca, in England;
Soto, Domingo de; Vitoria, Francisco de
School of Salamanca, in England, 59–61; knowledge of through private collections of books and writings, 62
Scotland, civil law as the foundation of the legal system in, 261
Scott, Ernest, 322; on Australia as terra nullius, 322–3; speculations of concerning Jessup’s interest in terra nullius as regards the polar regions, 323–4; on the uses of the Historical records of Australia, 322
Scott, James Brown, 312; on Spitsbergen remaining terra nullius, 312
Scottish Court of Sessions, 261–2
Scottish Enlightenment, the, 227, 247, 270; philosophical ideas of occupancy and property developed during, 249–51 Scottish historical school. See Scottish Enlightenment, the Scruggs, William, 306
Secondat, Charles-Louis de (baron de Montesquieu). See Montesquieu
Seeky, John, 30
Selassie, Haile, 297
Selden, John, 62
self-interest: elevation of self-interest in natural law, 153 n127; as universal, 159 self-perfection. See human perfectibility self-preservation, 114, 121, 154; civil society as a product of, 154 as a law, 134; See also occupation (occupation), as an act of self-preservation; sociability, and self-preservation Seneca, 95
Sepúlveda, Juan Ginés de, 41, 74
Seven Years’ War (1756–63), 5, 150, 168, 171, 262; and the argument of occupation, 183
Short introduction to moral philosophy (Hutcheson), 135
Simons, James, 310
sin/sinfulness, 95; association of private property with, 95
Sir Travers Twiss et le Congo (anonymous), 281
Skeie, John, 316; observations concerning the Eskimos, 317
Skinner, Quentin, 52
Slattery, Brian, 303 n2
slavery/slaves, 111
Smedal, Gustav, 316, 319; as an advocate for Norway’s claim to Greenland, 317; ardent nationalism of, 317
Smith, Adam, 3, 16, 107, 134, 150, 162, 215; attempt to reconcile moral philosophy with commercial society, 162; on commerce as the driving force behind societal progress, 165; criticism of Pufendorf, 165; friendship with Hume, 165; on property, occupation, and the four stages of human society, 165–6; on property as prior to civil society, 165–6; as a student of Hutcheson, 165; on territorial property, 166
Smith, John, 65; on government among Native Americans, 66
Smith, Thomas, 71
sociability, 104–5, 142, 148; Aristotelian concept of, 102; natural sociability, 133; natural sociability and the occupation theory of property, 133–2; self-interested sociability, 89; and self-preservation, 87–91, 105
socialism, 244; socialist opposition to empire, 273 society/societies: ‘advanced’ and ‘cultivated’ societies, 226; all societies as legitimate, 114; Confucian societies, 135; legal status of non-European societies, 31; settler societies, 6, 31, 322. See also civil society; commercial society; political society; Smith, Adam, on property, occupation, and the four stages of human society
Index

Soley, James R., 309
Soto, Domingo de., 40–2, 45–6, 50, 59, 64, 253; on natural law, 42; and religious orthodoxy, 87; on Spanish claims to dominion over the Americas, 44–5; sovereignty (state sovereignty), 1, 11, 17, 76, 97, 123, 138; as absolute, 47, 122; acquisition of, 321, 326; as the central political problem of the American Revolution, 184; of ‘civilized nations’, 305; debates among international jurists concerning sovereignty, 272; establishment of, 97; establishment of property under sovereignty, 151; existence of rights outside of state sovereignty, 300; external sovereignty, 284; importance of symbolic acts in establishing sovereignty, 324; non-European forms of sovereignty, 6, 99, 269; over the moon, 324; personal sovereignty, 17, 324; personal sovereignty in Europe, 280; personal sovereignty exercised by native peoples, 280; personal sovereignties of Africa and Asia, 7; political sovereignty, 344; in the presence of savage populations, 322; projection of European sovereignty, 290–301; and the question of whether property rights can be established outside state sovereignty, 27; rights of, 6, 300; and the rights of occupation, 27–8; territorial sovereignty, 6, 17, 216, 239, 251, 269, 280, 285, 300. See also occupation of sovereignty
Soviet Union (USSR), 30, 318, 325
Spain/Spanish Empire, 8, 71, 101, 204; claims of Spain to dominion over the Americas, 44–5; claims of Spain to the right of discovery concerning the Americas, 45–6; as the colonial ruler of Western Sahara, 145–6; conflict with the United States over Contoy Island, 306; conquests of in the Americas, 18; criticism of by English writers, 67; legal apology for the Spanish conquests, 268; and the question of occupation in Central and South America, 23; Spanish claims to the Oregon Territory based on the ‘rights’ of discovery, 206. See also School of Salamanca Spanish colonie. The (de Las Casas), 61
Spitsbergen, 23, 316; arguments concerning claims to the island of Spitsbergen, 311–12; arguments concerning Spitsbergen remaining terra nullius, 312–15, 314 n27; as ‘entirely free from occupation’, 318; and the possibility of Spitsbergen being declared a sovereign state, 315; sovereign power over Spitsbergen granted to Norway, 315. See also Rudmose-Brown, Robert Neal, on resolving the Spitsbergen status through the Versailles negotiations
St John’s College Library, 62–3
Stadl-Holstein, Lage von, 311, 318; condemnation of Hoel’s ‘imperialistic spirit’, 318
Stamp Act (1765), 189
Stanley, Henry, 288
state of nature/natural states, 85, 130, 138, 175; hypotheses of the state of nature as a state of conflict, 137; as a war against all, 178 states (modern states): civil states, 85; emergence of, 53; survival and self-interest as motivations for, 88; territorial foundation of, 123
Steinmetz, George, 334
Stiles, Ezra, 200–1
Stois, the, 89
Strachey, William, 70, 74, 78, 83; influence of Acosta’s cosmology on, 78–9; on Native Americans, 73
Suarez, Francisco, 254
Suffering Traders, 25, 194–9; land cessions of as a basis for a new colony (Indiana), 194; negotiated land cessions of with the Six Nations Iroquois, 194
Sugar Act (1764), 189
Summa Perutilis (Azo of Bologna), 37, 35
Summa Theologicae (Aquinas), 40–1
Summary of the Roman law (Taylor), 259
Summary view of the rights of British America (Jefferson), 199
Summenhart, Conrad, 41
supremacy, 45–6
Sweden, 313
Swiss Confederacy, 138
Swiss Confederation, 138
Symonds, William, 63 n33, 63, 69 n43, 74 system of moral philosophy, A (Hutcheson), 156 system of the principle of the law of Scotland, A (Wood), 264
Tacitus, 112, 143
Tartarin, Edouard, 243, 290 n68; on occupation as the ‘philosophical foundation and justification’ of the right to property, 243; on occupation as a right subordinate to sovereignty, 245; on occupation as a ‘sacred right’, 243; on the Prussian occupation of France and the right of sovereignty, 245
Taubenfeld, Howard J., 324–5

© in this web service Cambridge University Press
www.cambridge.org
Index

Terra nullius (land belonging to no one), 20, 58; as an ‘accepted legal means of acquiring sovereignty’, 316; and arguments dismissing the rights of indigenous people, 309; as a branch of Roman law, 52–3; as a ‘cardinal condition of valid occupation’, 316; and the critique of colonisation, 310; lack of mention of in the debates over the Oregon Territory, 305; as a ‘legal term of art employed in connection with “occupation,”’ 316; regarding outer space, 314; as shorthand for occupation, 310; and the theory of occupation in international law, 305; use of in Canada, 303 n2; use of to describe the Roman and civil law of occupation, 304; use of prior to the 1890s, 304–6; use of in relation to the law of nations, 302–3, 305. See also Australia, as terra nullius; Keller, Arthur, on the meaning of terra nullius as land not under any sovereignty; terra nullius, and Guiana/Venezuela; terra nullius, and the polar regions debate; terra nullius, and the Western Sahara and Australia

Terra nullius, and Guiana/Venezuela, 306–10; arbitration decision awarding the contested territory to England, 307; arguments favouring Venezuela made during arbitration, 309–10; and the discovery of gold in the Orinoco Basin, 306; introduction of the term terra nullius into the debate concerning, 308; and the issue of ‘adverse holding’, 307; and the Monroe Doctrine, 306–7; origin of in boundary disputes over the uninhabited area between the Orinoco and Cuyuni Rivers, 306

Terra nullius, and the polar regions debate, 322 passim; 310–19; and the Christiania Conference (1910), 315; competition between Northern European powers for the polar regions, 315; increasing use of terra nullius in international law due to the polar debates, 310; initial exploration of the polar regions by European and North American nations, 310; and the Norwegian National Socialist’s use of terra nullius in describing Eastern Greenland, 329; and the scientific ‘intend’ of polar discovery and occupation, 312; and the understanding of terra nullius as territory that should be left common, 312–13; unsettled legal arguments due to the lack of actual land beneath the ice caps, 310. See also Greenland; Spitsbergen; Waulfrin, René, on effective occupation as a test for title in the polar regions

Terra nullius, and the Western Sahara and Australia, 325–31; Australia as not terra nullius, 328; Australia as terra nullius, 323–2– debate concerning the status of the Western Sahara, 325–7; and the ‘enlarged’ concept of terra nullius, 329–30; parallel of with the East Greenland case, 329–30; Spanish claim that the Western Sahara was terra nullius, 326. See also Coe v. The Commonwealth (1993)

Territorium nullius (land belonging to no one), 28, 58, 255, 269, 285, 290, 294, 308, 319, 321; application of to African peoples, 286; concept of as a species of rights argument, 300; creation of the concept of, 274; and the denial of rights of territorial sovereignty, 287; distinction between res nullius and territorium nullius, 286; as the doctrine for the occupation of sovereignty, 250, 302–7; as the equivalent in international law as res nullius is in private Roman law, 231; terminology and semantics of, 302–4; use of the canon law concept of territorium nullius in international law, 278; use of in the debate over Africa, 321; use of in the justification of colonisation, 302, 303 n2; use of in the justification of empire, 302. See also Jefe, Gaston, on the conditions necessary for a territory to be a territorium nullius; Martitz, Ferdinand, on regions considered to be territorium nullius

Tertullian, 95
textbook of Roman law from Augustus to Justinian, A (Buckland), 259
Thirty Years’ War (1618–48), 10, 105, 232
Thomtaxis, Christian, 127
Thoughts on the origin and nature of government (anonymous), 193
Tierney, Brian, 41 nt3
Titius, Gottlieb Gerhard, 23, 126, 133, 167, 201; attack of on Pufendorf’s understanding of the state of nature, 130–1, 153; influence of on Carmichael, 132; support of Locke’s labour theory, 127–8
Tocqueville, Alexis de, 1
Tomlins, Christopher, 24, 60 nt2; on the references to res nullius in Grotius’ Mare liberum and De jure belli ac pacis, 257 nt3
Towards perpetual peace (Kant), 145
Tracey, Benjamin F., 309
Traité de l’occupation (Tartarin), 243, 290 n68 treasure troves, 39 n126, 54 nt9
Index

Congo, 280; specific response to Mounier’s question of the legal status of the Congo, 280; on territorial sovereignty as the necessary condition for peace in the Congo, 280; vision of European sovereignty over Africa, 283–4

Two introductory lectures on the science of international law (Twiss), 232, 234

Two treaties of government (Locke), 115, 122, 127, 182

United Nations General Assembly, 325

United States, 8, 30, 204–5, 245; conflict with Spain over Contoy Island, 306; sovereignty of, 214, 305

United States Congressional Committee on Foreign Relations, 287

United States Department of State, ambiguity of concerning claims to sovereignty, 324

Universal Declaration of Human Rights (1948), 217 universal rights, 217, 222, 227–5, 299; as having universal moral force, 274; national and positivist understanding of, 299; natural law theories of, 217, 299

universalism, 13, 137

unsociability, 133

usury, 40

Utopia (More), 60

Valla, Lorenzo, 101

Vandall, 194

Vattel, Emer de, 1, 7, 134, 138, 197; on American Indians as nomads, 225; citation of Vattel in support of Davis’ claims regarding discovery and possession, 211; on the claims of individuals in the law of nations, 214; on the claims to occupation by nations as superior to those of individuals, 237; comparisons to Locke, 141; and the concept of ‘erratic nations’, 190; on the conquest of Mexico and Peru as a ‘notorious usurpation’, 143; education of, 140; influence of on eighteenth-century American colonists, 190–1; influence of on Twiss, 209; on the right of the first occupier, 142, 214; on the rights of American Indians, 144; on the rights of nomadic peoples, 143–4, 213; on the rights of sovereign nations, 144; scepticism concerning the pretensions of colonising powers, 142–3; on self-preservation and self-perfection, 140–1; on separate families possessing sovereignty, 141; on territory open to appropriation by others, 225

Venice, 43

Villey, Michel, 33 ni

treaties, 16; justification of empire through the use of treaties, 8; treaties signed by Congolese tribes with European powers, 288

Treaty of Florida (1819), 211

Treaty of Fort Stanwix (1768), 194

Treaty of Tordesillas (1494), 8

True declaration of the estate of the colonie in Virginia (anonymous), 69–70

Tuck, Richard, 90 n18; on the distinction between ‘modern’ and ‘ancient’ natural law traditions, 231–2; on Grotius and Pufendorf’s exegesis of self-interest in natural law, 153 n27; on Pufendorf’s relativism, 112 n124

Tully, James, 48, 174 n5, 182 n47, 182, 196 n105

Tunisia, 254

Twiss, Sir Travers, 209, 229, 232, 240, 245, 276, 282, 285, 298; arguments of for the need for treaties in order to occupy territrium nullius, 287; as the authority on territrium nullius, 278 n9; as chair of the commission of the Berlin Conference, 283; in the development of theories of international law, 233–4; dismissal of Kant as a Utopian, 234; drafting of the constitution of the Congo Free State, 283 n40; enthusiasm of for the civilising mission, 239; on individuals engaged in establishing colonies, 210; on individuals’ occupation of vacant territory in order to establish property rights, 210; influence of Vattel on Twiss’ approach to occupation, 209; international law as the central concern of after the 1870s, 277; lack of the term territrium nullius in the writings of, 305; marriage scandal of, 277, 279; as a member of the Doctors Commons, 230; on the primary role of natural law, 235; on ‘Primitive Acquisition’ as occupation, 237; as Queen’s Advocate General, 230; and the reinvigoration of civil law, 229; on the right of occupation, 238; scepticism concerning the idea of a state of nature, 234–5; on the supremacy of sovereignty in his view of occupation, 237; on the two great branches of the law of nations (natural law and positivism), 233; use of the canon law concept of territrium nullius in international law, 278.

See also Twiss, Sir Travers, justification of for the occupation of the Congo

Twiss, Sir Travers, justification of for the occupation of the Congo, 277, 282, 300; dismissal of Portugese claims on the
Index

Virginia colony, 59
Virginia Company, 7, 60 n2, 61, 71, 100, 173; defence of its right to colonise, 65; and the problems of dispossession, 69; promoters of, 61–4; redescription of under the influence of Acosta’s writings, 77
Virginia Council, 63–5
Virginia Indians, 78; Purchas’ opinion of, 81
Virginia (state), 194
virtue, and human behaviour, 87; primitive virtue, 112. See also Earl of Shaftesbury, on virtue as innate to humans Vitoria, Francisco de, 94

West Bank, the, 32
West Indies, 92
West Papua, 32
Westlake, 217
Western Sahara. See terra nullius, and the Wharton, Samuel, 194, 196 n105; on all American colonisation as unjustified, 194; on both division of property and occupation as origins for property, 195; cynical reason of for arguing for native rights, 198; failure of to understand Locke’s theory of property, 196; on the fundamental role of occupation in the origin of property, 196 influence of Blackstone on, 198; on occupation and the right to land in North and South America, 194; on the right of territory as founded on self-preservation, 195; treatise of outlining his argument for lands granted to him in cession from the Six Nations Iroquois, 194–6; use of the Roman law of occupation to support his claims, 195

What is property? (Proudhon), 216

Wheatley, Henry, 221, 233, 305 n8, 305

Whigo, 159; concerns of over luxury and empire, 275; concerns of over property and corruption, 160

Whitaker, William, 63
White, Richard, 188
William of Ockham, 33 n1, 56
Williams, Robert A., 48
Winthrop, John, 173

Winthrop, Robert, 208

Wiradjuri people, 328

Wolcott, Roger, 173

Wolff, Christian, 134, 195, 197; on adventitious rights, 142; on the centrality of ‘use’ in the understanding of property, 136; critique of seventeenth- and eighteenth-century colonial practices, 136; embrace of historical progress and the virtues of civilisation, 135; on ‘free families’ and the formation of states, 142; and the genealogy of the law of nations, 232; human perfectibility as the central concern of his political philosophy, 135; impact of the human perfectibility concept on other philosophers, 138; on separate families dwelling together in a specific territory, 136; on sovereignty among colonisers as invalid, 137

Wollaston, William, 126 n2

Wood, Thomas, 264; exclusion of res nullius from the Roman law of the property of first occupant, 264

Zouch, Richard, 232

Wahunsonacock (‘Powhatan’), 66, 75
Waldron, Jeremy, 118 n51
Wallace, George, 264 wars of religion, 40, 87, 122, 124, 137
Washington, George, 4, 187
Waultrin, René, 311; on effective occupation as a test for title in the polar regions, 318–19 wealth, as a cause of corruption, 4
Webster, Richard, 309
Welwood, William, 94

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org