

GLOBAL JUSTICE AND INTERNATIONAL LABOUR RIGHTS

Despite the growing global consensus regarding the need to ensure minimal labour standards such as adequate safety and health conditions, freedom of association, and the prohibition of child labour, millions of workers across the world continue to work in horrific conditions. Who should be held responsible, both morally and legally, for protecting workers' rights? What moral and legal obligations should individuals and institutions bear towards foreign workers in their countries? Is there any democratic way to generate, regulate, and enforce labour standards in a global labour market?

This book addresses these questions by taking a fresh look at the normative assumptions underlying existing and proposed international labour regulations. By focusing on international labour as a particular sphere of justice, it seeks to advance both the contemporary philosophical debate on global justice and the legal scholarship on international labour.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Most of the chapters in this volume were first presented at the "Global Justice and International Labor Law" workshop at the University of Haifa in 2011. We are grateful to the Israel Science Foundation and the Academic Center of Law and Business for supporting the workshop and thank all the participants for their invaluable comments on the individual chapters and suggestions for the general overall framework of the book. Our thinking about justice and labour rights has benefitted tremendously from many discussions and seminar presentations we have participated in over the past few years. In particular, we are grateful to Prakash Sethi, Mark Barenberg, and Eyal Benvenisti for challenging our views and helping us in developing the ideas that are the base of this volume.

Editing this book was supported by the Israel Science Foundation and the German-Israeli Foundation. Special thanks to Ido Lachman, for his valuable research assistance and technical help; to Dana Rothman Meshulam, for brilliant editing assistance; and to the two anonymous reviewers, for their excellent suggestions for the manuscript. Finally, we thank Finola O'Sullivan, Elizabeth Spicer, and Richard Woodham at Cambridge University Press, who were a pleasure to work with.

An earlier version of Chapter 3 was published in the Journal of Social Philosophy, Vol. 45, No. 4 (2014). A version of Chapter 6 was published in the Oxford Journal of Legal Studies, Vol. 34, No. 1 (2014). We are grateful for the permission to include these articles in the book.
