PUNISHING ATROCITIES THROUGH A FAIR TRIAL

International Criminal Law from Nuremberg to the Age of Global Terrorism

Over the past decades, international criminal law has evolved to become the operative norm for addressing the worst atrocities. Tribunals have conducted hundreds of trials addressing mass violence in the former Yugoslavia, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, Cambodia, and other countries to bring to justice perpetrators of genocide, war crimes, and crimes against humanity. But international courts have struggled to hold perpetrators accountable for these offenses while still protecting the fair trial rights of defendants. Punishing Atrocities through a Fair Trial explores this tension, from criticism of the Nuremberg Trials as ‘victor’s justice’ to the accusations of political motivations clouding prosecutions today by the International Criminal Court. It explains why international criminal law must adhere to transparent principles of legality and due process to ensure its future as a legitimate and viable legal regime.

Jonathan Hafetz is Professor of Law at Seton Hall University School of Law.

Acknowledgments

Many people helped make this book possible. I am indebted to the following individuals who shared their expertise and provided guidance at various stages of the project: Kristen Boon, Meg deGuzman, Megan Fairlie, Alexander K.A. Greenawalt, Fred Hafetz, Kevin Jon Heller, Aziz Huq, Michael Karnavas, Margaret Lewis, Jaya Ramji-Nogales, Alice Ristroph, Peter Robinson, Gregory Townsend, Jennifer Trahan, Jenia Iontcheva Turner, Beth Van Schaack, and Richard Wilson.

I am also grateful to the following people who generously shared their time when I conducted research at The Hague and at Nuremberg: Helen Brady, Daryl Mundis, Klaus Rackwitz, Alan Tieger, Gregory Townsend, and Alex Whiting. Several chapters in the book benefitted from presentations at the American Society of International Law Annual Meeting and Annual Research Forum, the SMU Dedman School of Law, Seton Hall Law School, and Temple University Beasley School of Law. The Program in Law and Public Affairs at Princeton University provided me with critical support in developing this book during my year there as a fellow. I would like to thank my editor, John Berger for his guidance and support, and Rebecca Jackaman and others at Cambridge University Press who assisted with the preparation and publication of the book.

Additionally, I would like to thank Hendrik van Hemmen, Daniel Hewitt, Mark Linscott, and Ryan Malloy for their invaluable research assistance, and Risa Pollack for her editorial assistance. I am grateful to Barbara Mol and Dianne Oster for their help in tracking down countless sources. I wish to express my gratitude to Seton Hall Law School for enabling me to undertake this project. Above all, I am grateful for the love and support of my parents, Fred and Myra, and my family, Martha, Ben, and Sam.
