

Index

- adverse selection, in male sex market, 73–74
- advertisements for sex work
  - casual sex market and, 208–212
  - data analysis of, 161–163, 227–229
  - dependent variables in, 162–163
  - erotic capital in, 154–155
  - face value analysis, 57–61
  - Goffman’s presentation of self theory and, 150–152
  - Grindr profiles compared with, 211
  - hegemonic masculinity in, 286n.36
  - history of male sex work and, 27–38
  - informal enforcement of escort market and, 49–52
  - negotiation for safe sex practices and, 178–181
  - online market for male sex workers, 45–49, 231–232
  - probability of safe sex offers in, 191–195
  - racialized self-representation in, 157–159
  - safe sex practices in, 174–176, 189, 268–277
  - self-presentation in, 142–148, 150–161, 168–170
  - sexual scripting and, 152–154
  - signaling in, 53–55
  - traveling of escorts and, 76–80
  - value of evidence from, 200–201
- Advocate Classifieds*, 80–84
- age of escorts
  - differences with client age, historical trends in, 24–38
  - erotic capital and, 181–182
  - Grindr app users, 210
  - pricing and, 133–136
  - probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195
- aggression
  - black masculinity and, 130, 182–184
  - in gay masculinity, 121–126
- air traffic statistics, travel by male sex workers and, 90–91
- anti-gay organizations, sexual orientation of men in, 80–84
- applied econometrics, hedonic regression and, 287n.67
- arrest, male sex work and risk of, 171–176
- Asian sex workers
  - erotic capital of, 182–184
  - on Grindr, 210
  - pricing premiums and penalties and, 115, 137–139
  - probability of safe sex advertising by, 191–195
  - safe sex practices and, 174–176
  - self-representation by, 157–161, 168–170
  - sexualized racism and, 131–132
- asymmetric information, face value of pictures and, 57–61
- authenticity, Goffman’s presentation of self theory and, 150–152
- autonomy, for male sex workers, 148–150
- Bajari, P., 53–55
- Baldwin, J., 128–129, 157–159
- Barboe, Samuel, 22–23
- bardassa* (Italian term for male sex work), 22
- barebacking, increase in practice of, 186–187
- basic quality, face value of pictures and, 61
- Bay Area Reporter*, 28
- BBC (big black cock) acronym
  - non-commercial sex and, 207–208, 224–226
  - racialized self-representation and, 157–159

- BBC (big black cock) acronym (cont.)
   references in non-commercial market to, 219–221 white gay adoption of, 129–131
- bear culture, gay masculinity and, 123–126
- beauty standards
   absence on Grindr face pictures of, 214–215 data consistency for, 238 in face pictures, 64–68
   gay masculinity and, 123–126
- behavioral theory, socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15
- Benkard, C. L., 53–55
- Bernstein, E., 152
- Bertozi, S. M., 190–191, 268–277
- betweenness
   distance of travel and, 99–101
   travel networks for sex workers and, 88–90, 92–93
- binary perspective
   in advertisements for sex work, 162–163
   hegemonic masculinity and, 118–121, 123
- biological interpretations of male sex work, 258–263
- blackmail risk, in male sex work, 48
- black masculinity historical evolution of, 129–131, 223 non-commercial sex market and, 219–221 racialized self-presentation and, 157–159
- black sex workers
   erotic capital of, 182–184
   gay masculinity and, 129–131
   on Grindr, 210, 219–221, 224
   HIV/AIDs prevalence in, 185–186, 200–201 masculinity and, 128–129, 223
   negotiation for safe sex practices by, 178–181
   non-commercial sex and, 207–208, 219–221
   pricing premiums and penalties and, 115, 137–139
   probability of safe sex advertising by, 191–195 race-sexual position intersectionality in advertisements by, 166–168
     safe sex practices pricing and, 200–201
   self-presentation by, 146–148
- body image/body build. See also physical traits black bodies and, 128–129, 219–221 body size, 217–219
   as erotic capital, 154–155
   fetishization of black body parts and, 129–131, 157–159 gay clone culture and, 123–126, 155–157
   headless torsos on Grindr, 214
   hegemonic masculinity and, 123
   non-commercial market discipline of, 207–208, 217–221, 224–226 online sex workers presentations of, 148–150 photographic data analysis of advertisements, 163–166 in photography for advertisements, 162–163
   pricing and, 133–136
   probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195
   race and, 219–221
   selection regressions by, 266
   self-presentation of sex workers and, 142–148, 159–161, 168–170, 223 social construction of, 113–115, 139–141, 223 valuation of, 198–199, 224
- bond-posting, face picture as, 7–9, 52–53, 152–154, 207
- “bottom” sex workers
   advertisements indicating, 162–166
   Asian male stereotypes and, 131–132
   body politics and, 155–157
   branding of, on Grindr smart phone app, 217
   client value of, 195–198
   erotic capital of, 181–184
   health risks for, 258–263
   negotiation for safe sex practices by, 178–181 pricing penalties for, 114–115, 136–137, 139–141, 200–201
   probability of safe sex advertising by, 191–195
   race and pricing for, 115, 137–139
   self-representation of body image and, 168–170
- “bounded authenticity,” Goffman’s presentation of self and, 152
- Bourdieu, Pierre, 179–181
- Boy Culture* (film), 27
- The Boys in the Band*, 26–27
- Buoll, Peter, 22–23
- “butch clone” gay masculinity, 123–126
- Butler, Judith, 144, 146–147, 155–157
- buyer-seller relationship, in male sex work, 39–45
- Caligula, 20–21
- Carpenter, C., 64–68
- Cash4Class Scholarship, 3

- casual sex. See also non-commercial sex absence of personalizing features in, 125
 commercial vs. non-commercial sex and, 204–208
 gay masculinity and, 224–226
 non-commercial market for, 208–212 online male sex work and, 176–178
- catamati*, Greek male sex workers as, 20–21
- Cato, 20
- Christianity, history of male sex work and, 20–21
- city characteristics
 air traffic statistics, 90–91 gay population concentration and, 80–84 geographic distribution of escorts and, 84–86 independent variables in, 90–91 measures of centrality and, 88–90, 93–94, 244–246 premiums for face pictures and, 68–70 price effects of multiple markets and, 222–223 top U.S. cities for male sex workers, 93–94 travel networks for sex workers and, 87–89 wage differences for male sex workers and, 87
- class in history of male sex work, 19–38
 masculinity and, 24–26, 141
 socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15
- client characteristics heterosexual identification and, 80–84 racial preferences in non-commercial sex market and, 219–221 safe sex practices in advertisements and, 174–176
 self-presentation of sex workers and, 142–148, 150–152
- client/escort negotiations client willingness to pay for risky sex, 185–186
 client willingness to pay for safer sex, 186–187 constrained estimates of, 195–198
 model for, 268–277
 payoff functions in safe sex negotiations, 190–191, 273 safe sex negotiations and, 184–185, 195–201, 223
 sexual scripting and, 152–154
- client reviews data for, 229–231
 informal enforcement of escort market through, 49–52, 68–70, 73–74
 male sex work and, 7, 31–35
 payoff functions in safe sex negotiations, 190–191, 273
 probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195 safe sex negotiations data in, 188–189 sexual behavior preferences in, 136–137 signaling models and, 53–55
- client risks
 health risks of male sex work and, 171–176, 187
 informal enforcement in male escort market, 49–52, 222 online market male sex market, 45–49
- Collins, P. H., 81–82, 287n.56
- commercial sex work economics of, 204–208
 quantitative research on, 115–118
 safe sex practices in, 186–187
- commodification of gay desire, 115–118
 in online male sex market, 148–150
 self-presentation of sex workers and, 142–148
- compensating differentials theory risks of male sex work and, 173–174
 safe sex practices pricing and, 200–201, 224–226
- competitive market assumptions hedonic regression and, 287n.67
 for male sex market, 75–80
 online market for male sex workers, 45–49
 traveling of escorts and, 76–80
- condomless sex
 casual sex market and, 210
 client willingness to pay for risky sex and, 185–186 constrained estimates of safe sex negotiations and, 195–198 increase in, 176–178, 186–187
 premium on, 171–176, 201–203, 224–226
- condom use
 payoff functions in safe sex negotiations, 274–275
 premium on, 176, 224–226
- Connell, R. W., 118–119, 121, 144, 146–147
- constrained estimates, safe sex negotiations, 195–198

- consumer welfare, competition in male sex market and, 75–80
- contract, male sex work as, 39–45
- cost increases, illegal market of male sex work and, 39–45
- counter-hegemony
  - gay masculinity and, 121, 123–126
  - masculinity as attraction and, 121–126
  - sexualized racism and, 130–131
- Court, A. T., 132–133
- craigslist.org
  - casual sex market on, 208–212
  - data collection methods for, 294n.16
  - racial-sexual stereotypes on, 219–221
  - sexualized racism on, 207–208
- cross-dressing, history of male sex work and, 24–38
- cross-sectional analysis, safe sex negotiations and limits of, 187–189
- cultural values
  - commercial vs. non-commercial sex and, 205–206
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 119
  - self-presentation of male sex worker and, 144, 168–170
  - sex market and, 111–115
  - sexual scripting and, 152–154
- Daddy’s Reviews website, 31–35, 188–189, 258–263
- data sources for male sex work, 7
  - advertisement data, 227–229
  - client review data, 229–231
  - online escort market data, 231–232
  - safe sex negotiations and, 187–189
- dating websites, casual sex market and, 211
- degree centrality, travel by sex workers and, 88–90, 92–93, 244–246
- demand side of male escort market, 49–53
  - client willingness to pay for risky sex, 185–186
  - client willingness to pay for safer sex, 186–187
  - Grindr smartphone app and, 207
  - location factors in, 83–84
  - masculinity demand on Grindr smartphone app and, 215–217
  - safe sex practices in advertisements and, 174–176, 187–189
  - travel by sex workers and variation in, 76–80, 86–87
  - wage differences linked to, 87
- Demetriou, D. Z., 119–120, 121–126
- Department of Homeland Security, 41
- desirability, negotiation for safe sex practices and, 178–181
- deviance, male sex work characterized as, 26–31
- digital media, self-presentation by sex workers on, 142–148
- disallowance of reviews, informal enforcement through, 53–55, 68–70
- disease transmission, travel of sex workers linked to, 77–78, 90–91
- distance measurements, travel by sex workers and, 90, 99–101
- dominance
  - in advertisements for sex work, 162–163
  - black masculinity and trope of, 129–131, 182–184
  - pricing linked to, 136–137
  - racialized self-representation and narrative of, 157–159
  - safe sex practices in advertisements for, 174–176
  - self-presentation of sex workers and images of, 146–148
  - as sexualized act, 121–126
- Donaldson, M., 121
- dramaturgical theory, self-presentation in male sex work and, 150–152
- Dyer, R., 128–129
- Eaton, L. A., 186–187
- economics
  - commercial vs. non-commercial sex, 204–208
  - health risks of commercial sex work and, 171–176
  - history of male sex work and, 24–38
  - location of male sex workers and, 81–82
  - of male sex work, 1–15, 39–45, 111–115, 221–226
  - microeconomics of safe sex negotiations, 184–201
  - norms of sexuality and, 9
  - self-presentation of sex workers and, 146–148
  - sexual behavior/sexual position and role of, 176–178
  - sexualized racism and, 131–132
  - signaling models, 49–52
  - of travel by male escorts, 86–87

- effeminate men
  - gay masculinity and attitudes toward, 123–126
  - history of male sex work and, 24–38
- eigen centrality, travel by sex workers and, 92–93, 244–246
- ejaculation by sex workers, premium pricing and, 258–263
- emasculated black gay man, black masculinity and, 287n.56
- emotional detachment, gay masculinity linked to, 123–126
- equilibrium pricing, payoff functions in safe sex negotiations, 190–191
- erotic capital theory
  - intersectionality theory and, 182–184
  - negotiation for safe sex practices and, 178–181
  - probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195
  - self-presentation by sex workers and, 154–155
  - structural aspects of, 181–182
- Europe, history of male sex work in, 22
- exoleti*, male sex work history in Greece and, 20–21
- extensive travel measures, travel by sex workers linked to, 90
- face pictures. See also photography in sex worker advertisements
  - alternative factors in value of, 61–70
  - asymmetric information in, 57–61
  - beauty premium and, 64–68
  - body image/body build vs., 148–150
  - categories of, 55–56
  - on Grindr smartphone app, 206–207
  - marginal face value, 62–63
  - in non-commercial advertisements, 212–215, 222
  - premiums by city for, 69–70
  - premiums by types of escorts, 70–74
  - signaling and, 52–53, 222
  - true quality in, 63–64
  - value of, 57–70
- FBI crime statistics, trends in sex work based on, 76
- female sex work
  - online market for, 45, 76
  - performance persona in, 143
  - power and gender theories and, 115–118
  - premium for condomless sex in, 171–176
  - safe sex negotiations in, 187–189
  - social science theories of, 115–118
  - socioeconomic aspects of, 111–115
  - working conditions in, 148–150
- femininity
  - disdain of, on Grindr smart phone app, 216–217, 224
  - early gay culture's embrace of, 123
  - gay clone culture and, 155–157, 159–161
  - gay masculinity and rejection of, 123–126
- fetishization, of black masculinity, 129–131, 157–159
- field theory. See sexual field theory
- film images of male sex work, 26–31
- fixed-effects analysis
  - constrained estimates of safe sex negotiations, 195–198
  - payoff functions in safe sex negotiations, 190–191
  - safe sex negotiations and, 187–189, 201–203
- formal enforcement, market effects of, 73–74
- Frank, Barney, 1–2, 48–49
- fraud, online market for male sex workers, 45–49
- Friedman, M., 24
- frontal nudity
  - in advertisement photos, 168–170
  - in dominance advertisements, 159–161
  - Goffman's presentation of self theory and, 150–152
  - race-sexual position intersectionality and, 166–168
  - self-presentation by male sex workers and, 146–148, 163–166
- Gagnon, John H., 152–154
- gay Clone/Muscle culture
  - historical emergence of, 123–126
  - race and, 128–129
  - self-presentation in male sex work and, 155–157
- Gay Concentration Index (GCI)
  - city level statistics, 93–94
  - geographic distribution of male sex workers and, 84–86
  - independent variables in travel by sex workers and, 90–91
  - likelihood estimates of travel and, 94–99
- gay liberation
  - commercial vs. non-commercial sex and, 205–206

- gay liberation (cont.)
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 119
  - history of male sex work and, 24–26
  - hypermasculinity and, 123
- gay masculinity
  - Asian men and, 131–132
  - black hypermasculinity and, 128–129, 157–159, 224–226
  - commercial vs. non-commercial gay sexuality and, 204–208, 224
  - erotic capital and, 181–182
  - genuine vs. posturing behavior and, 123–126
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 118–121
  - historical evolution of, 123–126, 129–131
  - male sex work and, 121–126, 223
  - non-commercial sex and, 207–208, 215–217
  - in online male sex market, 148–150
  - pricing and, 135–136
  - racial and ethnic critiques of, 127
  - social constructions of, 113–115, 139–141, 224–226
- gay population demographics
  - HIV/AIDS prevalence and, 171–176
  - home location of escorts based on, 84–86
  - online male sex work and, 176–178
  - self-identification in, 81–82
  - travel by male sex workers and location of, 80–84
  - unprotected sex increase in, 186–187
- gay social organization
  - contemporary trends in, 224–226
  - exclusion of black men from, 287n.60
- gender theory
  - embodiment in, 155–157
  - erotic capital and, 181–182
  - gay masculinity and, 224–226
  - hegemonic masculinity in, 118–121
  - male sex work and limits of, 111–115, 139–141
  - self-presentation of male sex workers and, 144, 146–148
  - sexualized racism and, 130–131
  - social constructions of sex work and, 9–11
  - social science theories of sex work and, 115–118
  - socioeconomic aspects of female sex work and, 111–115
- geographic factors
  - distribution of male sex workers and gay population location, 80–84
  - sociocultural aspects of male sex work and, 115–118
- Gertler, P., 190–191, 268–277
- gigolos, male sexworker as, 26–31
- Goffman, Erving, 144, 146–147, 150–161, 168–170, 179–181
- Greece, history of male sex work in, 19–38
- Green, Adam Isaiah, 146–147, 154–159, 179–181, 182–184, 201–203
- Griliches, Z., 132–133
- Grindr smartphone app, 205–206
  - application profile example for, 210
  - body size revealed on, 217–219
  - casual sex market on, 208–212
  - face pictures on, 206–207, 212–215
  - masculinity demand on, 215–217
  - racial-sexual stereotypes on, 294n.20
  - sexualized racism on, 219, 207–208
- Guckert, James Dale, 1–2
- gym going behavior, Grindr smartphone app and desirability of, 217–219
- Haggard, Ted, 48
- Hakim, Catherine, 154–155
- Han, C., 131–132, 182–184
- hedonic regression
  - pricing of male sex work and, 132–133
  - safe sex practices pricing and, 200–201
- hegemonic masculinity
  - defined, 118–121
  - erotic capital and, 155–157
  - gay clone culture and, 123–126
  - heterosexual identification and, 113–115
  - intersectionality in male sex work and, 126–132, 139–141
  - male sex work and, 121–126
  - pricing and, 133–136
  - racial and ethnic critiques of, 127
  - sexual behavior and, 11–12, 114–115, 136–137
  - sexualized racism and, 131–132, 182–184
- height-weight proportionate trait, Grindr smartphone app and desirability of, 217–219
- heterosexual identification
  - by clientele of male escorts, 80–84
  - gay masculinity and, 224–226
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 113–115, 118–121
  - male sex work and, 121–126

- hierarchies
  - erotic capital and, 182–184
  - sexualized racism and, 130–131
- hirsuteness
  - gay masculinity and, 123–126
  - pricing and, 133–136
- Hispanic sex workers
  - on Grindr, 210
  - pricing premiums and penalties and, 115, 137–139
  - probability of safe sex advertising by, 191–195
  - self-presentation by, 166–168
  - stereotypes about, 131–132
  - STI risk in, 185–186
- history of male sex work, 19–38
- HIV/AIDS
  - advances in management of, 173
  - among Grindr app users, 210
  - city level statistical comparisons, 93–94
  - condomless sex and evolution of, 176–178
  - decline in testing for, 186–187
  - in gay male population, 171–176
  - gay networking during epidemic of, 205–206
  - prevalence in male sex workers of, 27, 90–91
  - safe sex practices pricing and, 200–201
  - travel of sex workers linked to transmission of, 77–78
- home location of escorts
  - gay population concentration and, 84–86
  - likelihood estimates of travel and, 94–99
  - travel by sex workers and, 76–80
  - wage potential and, 87
- homosexuality
  - commercial sex work and, 171–176
  - cultural differences in, 115–118
  - history of male sex work and, 21–38
  - masculinity as attraction in, 121–126
  - public affirmation of, 81–82
  - social constructions of, 113–115
- Hooker, E., 80–84, 123
- Hookies awards, 2
- hook-ups. See casual sex; non-commercial sex
- “hot clone” gay masculinity, 123–126
- Hotelling location model, geographic
  - distribution of male sex workers and, 83–84
- “hotness,” erotic capital as, 154–155
- Humphreys, L., 80–84, 117–118
- hybridity, in hegemonic masculinity, 118–121, 123
- hygiene concerns in male sex work, 258–263
- hypermasculinity
  - black masculinity as, 129–131, 137–139, 182–184, 223
  - gay clone subculture and, 155–157
  - gay liberation movement and, 123
  - racialized self-presentation and, 157–159
- identity
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 127
  - self-presentation by sex workers and, 142–148
  - sexual and racial stereotypes and intersection of, 113–115
- illegal market structure
  - asymmetric information in, 39–45
  - face value analysis, 57–61
  - online market for male sex workers, 45–49
- incalls, online market for male sex workers, 45, 282n.28
- informal enforcement
  - client reviews as, 188–189
  - in male escort market, 49–52
  - signaling mechanisms and, 53–55, 68–70, 73–74, 239
- information
  - face value of pictures and, 57–61
  - pricing and quality of, 70–74, 242
  - qualitative research on, 237
  - reputation and price of male escort services, 236
  - robustness of, 240–241
  - role in illegal market structure, 39–45, 73–74
  - self-presentation of sex workers and, 145–146
  - true quality components and, 63–64
- institutionalization of male sex work, history of, 23–24
- intensive travel measures
  - distance of sex worker travel, 99–101
  - travel by sex workers linked to, 90
- inter-city links, travel networks for sex workers and, 88–90, 105–107
- intermediaries, absence in male sex work of, 5–6, 76–80, 148–150
- internet. See online male sex market
  - casual sexual encounters and, 205–206
  - racial-sexual stereotypes in sex market on, 294n.20
- intersectionality theory
  - erotic capital and, 182–184

- intersectionality theory (cont.)
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 127–128
  - in male sex work, 126–132
  - probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195
  - race and sexual behavior, 115, 132, 137–141
  - self-presentation of sex workers and, 145–148
- Japan, history of male sex work in, 21
- Jin, Ginger Z., 63–64
- kabuki commercial sex (Japan), 21
- Kane, Graeme, 155–157
- Kato, Andrew, 63–64
- Kaufman, G., 131–132, 182–184
- kinship, sexualized racism and hierarchy of, 130–131
- largeness, gay masculinity and rejection of, 123–126
- Las Vegas escort business, partial disallowance of reviews in, 68–70
- law enforcement, male sex work and, 1–2
- legalization of male sex work, market effects of, 73–74
- Levine, M. P., 135, 154, 155, 119, 121, 123–126, 128–129, 287n.60
- Lewis, Gregory, 63–64
- The Living End* (film), 27
- location factors in male sex work
  - gay population locations and travel by escorts, 80–84
  - independent variables in, 90–91
  - price effects of multiple markets and, 222–223
- Logan, T. D., 35, 38, 176, 182–184
- lust, hegemonic masculinity and, 123
- male beauty products, hegemonic masculinity and, 119–120
- male escort services
  - characteristics in selected cities, 68–70
  - client reviews of, 188–189
  - client willingness to pay for risky sex, 185–186
  - demand side of, 49–53
  - disallowance of reviews as enforcement in, 68–70
  - economics of travel for, 86–87
  - erotic capital in, 181–182
  - history of, 27–38
  - informal enforcement in, 49–52, 239
  - likelihood estimates of travel for, 94–99
  - online market for, 45–49
  - roles and behaviors adopted in, 117–118
  - self-presentation by workers in, 142–148
  - traveling distance measurements, 99–101
  - traveling within, 76–80
  - travel networks for, 88–90, 91–92
- male hustler image, history of male sex work and, 24–26
- maleness, gay masculinity and, 121
- male sex work
  - economics of, 1–15, 39–45, 111–115, 221–226
  - gay male society and, 221–226
  - history of, 6–7, 19–38
  - homosexuality and history of, 21–38
  - intersectionality in, 126–132
  - market approaches to, 5–6
  - masculinity in research on, 121–126
  - obscurity of, 1–15
  - risks of, 171–176
  - social science theories of, 115–118
  - socioeconomic forces in, 9–15
- Malin, Tom, 48–49
- Manhattan Digest*, 2
- “manhood acts,” hegemonic masculinity and, 123
- marginal face value, 62–63
- market structure for male sex work, 1–15, 27–38
  - asymmetric information and, 39–45
  - commercial vs. non-commercial sex and, 204–208
  - competition in, 75–80
  - conceptual and empirical framework, 53–55
  - demand side of, 49–53
  - face value analysis in, 57–61
  - gay population size as factor in, 80–84
  - health risks and, 171–176
  - hedonic regression and, 287–288n.67
  - information environment and, 73–74
  - online market, 45–49
  - safe sex practices and, 200–201
  - self-presentation by sex workers and, 142–148
  - social acceptability of gay culture and, 115–118
  - social norms and, 9
  - social value and, 111–115
  - travel by sex workers and, 76–80

- Marks, G., 186–187
 marriage market, economic analysis of, 204–208
 Martin, J. I., 179–181
 “masc4masc” expression, masculinity demand on Grindr smartphone app and, 215–217 masculinity. See also hegemonic masculinity economic forces in male sex work and, 9–15, 223
   gay clone culture and, 155–157
   Grindr smartphone app and importance of, 207
   history of male sex work and, 24–38
   male sex work and, 121–126
   in non-commercial sex, 207–208, 215–217
   in online male sex market, 148–150 racial and ethnic differences concerning, 127, 128–129, 139–141 self-presentation of male sex worker and images of, 142–148
   social constructions of, 9–11, 113–115
 mass media, history of male sex work imagery in, 26–31 McBride, D., 130 measures of centrality distance of travel and, 99–101
   escort wages and, 101–105
   likelihood estimates of travel and, 94–99
   travel networks for sex workers and, 88–90, 92–94, 244–246 media coverage, of male sex work, 1–15 medieval Europe, homosexuality and male sex work in, 22 mentoring relationships, professionalization of sex work and, 20–21 Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA)
   Gay Concentration Index correlation with, 84–86
   HIV/AIDS prevalence and, 90–91
 metrosexuality, 119–120
 microeconomics, of safe sex negotiations, 184–201 migration, value of, for male sex workers, 284n.24 Mimiaga, Matthew J., 148–150 mobility of male sex workers, in online market, 76–80 multiple markets
   price effects on sex work and, 222–223 travel by male sex workers for, 76–80 multiple masculinities, construction of, 126 muscularity
   black masculinity and, 128–129
   in gay clone culture, 155–157
   gay masculinity and, 123–126
   Grindr smartphone app and importance of, 207, 217–219
   pricing and, 133–136
My Hustler (film), 26–27
My Own Private Idaho (film), 27
 Napoleonic code, history of male sex work and, 23–24 national scope of male sex market, geographic distribution of workers in, 84–86 Nero, C. I., 129, 287n.56 networking
   casual sex market and, 208–212
   city-level measures of, 93–94
   commercial vs. non-commercial sex and, 205–206 measures of centrality in, 88–90, 92–93
   sexualized racism and, 182–184
   travel by sex workers and, 77–78, 87–89
 niche markets in sex work, 289n.18 “no attitude” designation, probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195 non-commercial sex market. See also casual sex body size and, 217–219
   casual sex market and, 208–212 discipline of body in, 207–208, 217–221, 224–226
   economics of, 204–208
   face pictures in advertisements for, 212–215, 222 masculinity in, 207–208, 215–217, 224 online male sex market as extension of, 148–150 quantitative research on, 115–118
   race in, 207–208, 219–221, 224
   socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15 non-market sexual behavior, 145 norms of sexuality desirability of body parts and, 123–126
   erotic capital and, 181–182
   gay masculinity and, 121, 123–126
   hegemonic masculinity and, 119
   heterosexual identification and, 113–115 homosexual complicity in, 121–126
   market forces and, 9

- norms of sexuality (cont.)
  - negotiation for safe sex practices and, 179–181
  - self-presentation of male sex worker and, 142–148, 150–159
- null hypothesis, travel measures of sex workers and, 285n.38
- objectification
  - of black masculinity, 129–131
  - intersectionality theory and, 182–184
- online male sex market
  - adverse selection in, 73–74
  - advertisement data for, 7, 161–163
  - asymmetric information in, 39–45
  - casual sexual encounters and, 205–206
  - competition in, 75–80
  - data collected from, 55–56, 231–232
  - fetishization of black masculinity in, 129–131, 157–159
  - financial incentives for, 148–150
  - location and travel as factors in, 80–84
  - for male escort services, 45–49
  - market forces in, 139–141
  - nexus of masculinity, gay sexuality and commodification in, 148–150
  - probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195
  - qualitative research on information in, 237
  - reputation and price information on, 236
  - risks of sex work and, 173–174
  - scheduling preferences in, 76
  - self-presentation in, 142–148, 159–161
  - socioeconomic perspectives on, 113, 176–178
  - traveling of escorts in, 76–80
- ordinary least squares (OLS) regression
  - advertisement data analysis and, 163
  - face value analysis, 57–61
- outcalls, online market for male sex workers, 45–49, 282n.28
- outing threats, in male sex work, 48
- paederastia* relationships, history of male sex work and, 19–38
- Parker, Brent, 48–49
- patriarchy, hegemonic masculinity and, 118–121
- payment terms, for male sex work, 39–45
- payoff functions in safe sex negotiations
  - analysis of, 190–191, 273
  - condom use and, 274–275
  - constrained estimates of, 195–198
  - escort characteristics and, 276–277
- penalty pricing
  - for “bottom” sex workers, 114–115, 136–137, 139–141
  - for condomless sex, 195–198
  - sexualized racism and, 115, 137–139
- penetrative sex
  - advertisements offering, 164
  - client value of, 195–198
  - client willingness to pay for risky sex and, 185–186
  - erotic capital and advertisement of, 181–182
  - health risks of, 258–263
  - in male sex transactions, 36–38
  - masculinity associated with, 181
  - negotiation for safe sex practices in
    - advertisements of, 178–181
  - probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195
- performance persona
  - erotic capital and, 154–155
  - Goffman’s presentation of self theory and, 150–152
  - sexual scripting and, 152–154
  - sex workers’ development of, 142–148
- personality traits
  - client valuation of sexual behavior and, 198–199
  - as erotic capital, 154–155
  - on Grindr profiles, 211
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 118
- photography in sex worker advertisements. See also face pictures
  - body type and sexual position in, 163–166
  - client reviews of, 50
  - data analysis of, 161–163, 243
  - dependent variables in, 162–163
  - in Grindr profiles, 211
  - physical traits displayed in, 146–148
  - premium of face pictures and, 57–61
  - self-presentation in, 12–13, 148–150, 152, 163–166, 264
  - sexual scripts and, 152–154
- Phua, V. C., 131–132, 182–184
- physical traits. See also thinness; specific traits, e.g., muscular physique
  - Asian male stereotypes of, 131–132
  - beauty premium and, 64–68
  - body size, 217–219

- client valuation of sexual behavior and, 198–199
- as erotic capital, 154–155
- erotic capital and, 181–182
- in escort advertisements, 31–35
- fetishization of black masculinity and, 129–131, 157–159
- gay clone culture and, 123–126
- on Grindr profiles, 207, 211
- hegemonic masculinity and, 119–120, 121–126
- photographic data analysis of advertisements, 162–166
- pricing and, 133–136, 261
- probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195, 270
- selection regressions by, 266
- self-presentation of sex workers and role of, 142–148, 168–170, 264
- socioeconomics of, 113–115, 139–141
- travel by male sex workers and role of, 90–91, 105–107
- wages and distance in escort travel and, 101–105
- pictures of male escorts
  - Goffman's presentation of self theory and, 150–152
  - self-presentation in, 146–148
- political economy theories, commodification of gay desire and, 115–118
- Polybius, 20, 28
- pooled equilibrium, market structure for male sex work, 53–55
- population demographics
  - geographic distribution of male sex workers and, 80–84
  - socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15
- porneia*, history of male sex work and, 19–38
- pornography, sexualized racism in, 130
- power
  - erotic capital and, 181–182
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 118–121, 123
  - social science theories of sex work and, 115–118
- preexposure prophylaxis
  - health risks of male sex work and, 176–178
  - HIV/AIDS transmission and use of, 173
- premium pricing
  - beauty premiums, 64–68
  - city characteristics, 69–70
  - for condomless sex, 171–176
  - face value of pictures and, 57–61, 243
  - race and, 115
  - sexual behavior and, 114–115, 136–137
  - for “top” workers, 114–115, 136–137, 139–141, 258–263
- presentation of self theory, 150–159
- pricing
  - alternative factors in face value and, 61–70
  - asymmetric information and, 39–45, 222, 242
  - beauty premium in face pictures, 64–68, 238
  - competition in male sex market and, 75–80
  - constrained estimates of safe sex practices and, 195–198
  - data limitations concerning, 139–141
  - face value of pictures in, 57–61
  - intersectionality of race and sexual behavior in, 137–139
  - location of male sex workers linked to, 83–84
  - for male sex work, 36–38
  - marginal face value, 62–63
  - online market for male sex workers, 45–49, 236
  - payoff functions in safe sex negotiations, 190–191
  - physical traits and, 133–136, 261
  - qualitative research on, 237, 242
  - quality components and, 61
  - quantitative research on, 132–133
  - race and, 115, 263
  - robustness of, 70–74, 240–241
  - safe sex practices and, 200–201, 277
  - selection effects in, 72
  - sexual behavior and, 262, 136–137
  - socioeconomics of, 113–115, 223
  - of “top” and “bottom” sex work, 114–115
  - travel by sex workers linked to, 76–80, 86–87, 90, 101–105
- “prison gym build,” black body image and, 128–129
- probit model of safe sex advertisements, 189
- product differentiation, self-presentation of sex workers and, 144–145
- promiscuity, erotic capital and norms of, 181–182
- prostitution
  - differences in male vs. female work in, 148–150
  - as exchange, 111–115
  - risks of, 171–176

- Pruitt, M., 176
 public health research on casual sex market, 208–212
   health risks of male sex work and, 176–178 history of male sex work in, 20–21
pueri delicata, Greek male sex workers as, 20–21 purchasing on faith, in online sex market, 73–74 qualitative research information and pricing of male escort services, 237
   male sex work and limits of, 111–115
   negotiation for safe sex practices and, 178–181 quality components beauty as complement to, 64–68
   face value of pictures and, 61 true quality components, 63–64 quantitative research
   hegemonic masculinity and, 121–126
   on male sex work, 115–118, 139–141
   pricing of male sex work and, 132–133 queer theory, self-presentation of male sex worker and, 144, 168–170 race. See also sexualized racism
   in advertisements for sex work, 162–166
   Asian male stereotypes and, 131–132
   client willingness to pay for risky sex and, 185–186
   diversity in male sex work and, 31–35 escort characteristics and travel distance and, 99–101
   gay masculinity and, 129–131
   hegemonic masculinity and, 128–129
   hierarchy of, in male sex work, 130–131 negotiation for safe sex practices based on, 178–181
   in non-commercial sex market, 207–208, 219–221
   pricing premiums and penalties and, 115, 133–136, 263
   probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195
   safe sex practices pricing and, 200–201, 271
   selection regressions by, 267
   self-presentation of sex workers and, 146–148, 157–161, 166–170, 265 sexual behavior/sexual position and, 115, 132, 137–139, 166–168, 263, 266, 271
   sexualized racism and, 129–131
   socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15 stereotypes in sex work of, 113–115 “top” sex workers and, 127–128
   unprotected sex increase and, 186–187
   wages and distance in escort travel and, 101–105 rear nudity, in advertisement photos, 155–157, 162–170
 Reeser, T. W., 119 regression analysis likelihood of sex travel and, 94–99, 247–257
   self-presentation in male sex work, 265–266
 relational aspects of sex work, 145–148, 176–178
   commercial vs. non-commercial sex and, 204–208
 Rentboy.com, 1–15, 141
   Department of Homeland Security, 41 reputation, measures of online male sex market, 236
   pricing and, 70–74
   safe sex advertisements and, 272
 risks in male sex work blackmail risk, 48
   client willingness to pay for risky sex, 185–186
   health risks, 171–176
   negotiation for safe sex practices in advertisements and, 178–181
   socioeconomic perspectives on, 176–178
   violence risks, 171–176
 Robinson, B. A., 131–132, 182–184, 217–219 role-playing, Goffman’s presentation of self theory and, 150–152
 Rome Empire, male sex work in, 19–38
 Rosen, S., 132–133
 Sadownick, D., 123
 safe sex practices
   advertisements for sex work and, 174–176, 189, 268–277 client-escort gamesmanship concerning, 184–185, 223, 224–226, 268–277
   client willingness to pay for safer sex, 186–187
   erotic capital and negotiation for, 178–181, 182–184

- intersectionality theory and, 182–184
- microeconomics of negotiations for, 184–201
- payoff functions in transactions involving, 190–191, 273
- pricing and, 200–201, 277
- probability of advertising for, 191–195
- reputation-based predictors, 272
- researchers, 201–203
- sexual behavior predictors, 191–195, 270–271
- sexual field theory and, 184
- sex worker traits and valuation of, 198–199, 270
- socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15
- same sex couples, identification in population studies of, 81–82
- sampling techniques, Grindr profile data, 293n.11
- scams by male sex workers, 48
- scheduling of sex work
  - cell phone use for, 283n.2
- screening on smartphone apps, face pictures as tool for, 212–215
- self-identification of homosexuality
  - gay masculinity and, 123–126
  - gay population demographics and, 81–82
  - negotiation for safe sex practices and, 178–181
  - social science research and, 117–118
- self-presentation in male sex work
  - body type and, 265
  - descriptive statistics, 264
  - erotic capital in, 154–155
  - “gay clone” subculture and, 155–157
  - Goffman’s presentation of self theory and, 150–152
  - in Grindr profiles, 211
  - nexus of masculinity, gay sexuality and commodification in, 148–150
  - online sex workers presentations, 148–150
  - overview of, 142–148, 223
  - predictions concerning, 159–161
  - racialized presentations, 157–159, 265
  - sexual positioning and, 265
  - sexual scripting theory and, 152–154
  - stigmatization in non-commercial and, 207–208
  - theoretical framework for, 150–159, 168–170
- Sension, Nicholas, 22–23
- sensitizing concepts, Goffman’s presentation of self theory and, 150–152
- serosorting, increase in practice of, 186–187
- service quality, pricing and, 61
- sexual adventurousness, probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195
- sexual behavior/sexual position. See also
  - “bottom” sex workers; “top” sex workers
  - advertising data analysis including, 162–166
  - body politics and, 155–157
  - branding of, on Grindr smart phone app, 217
  - casual sexual encounters and, 205–206
  - client reviews of, 188–189
  - constrained estimates of safe sex negotiations, 195–198
  - health risks linked to, 171–176
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 11–12, 127–128
  - of heterosexually identified clientele, 80–84
  - in male sex work, 36–38
  - negotiation for safe sex practices and, 178–181
  - non-market behaviors, 145
  - payoff functions in safe sex negotiations, 273
  - pricing and, 262, 136–137
  - race intersectionality with, 115, 132, 137–139, 166–168, 219–221, 263, 266, 271
  - safe sex advertising predictors and, 191–195, 270–271
  - selection regressions by, 267
  - self-presentations including, 265
  - social constructions of, 113–115, 176–178, 224–226
  - travel by male sex workers and, 77–78, 90–91
- sexual field theory
  - commercial vs. non-commercial sex and, 204–205
  - intersectionality in, 182–184
  - negotiation for safe sex practices and, 178–181
  - racialized self-presentation and, 157–159
  - research on male sex work using, 11, 115–118
  - safe sex advertisements and, 184
  - self-presentation of sex workers and, 144–145, 159–161, 168–170
  - socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15
- sexual gratification, male sex workers’ experience with, 148–150

- sexuality
  - commercial vs. non-commercial gay sexuality and, 204–208
  - cultural differences in, 115–118
  - history of male sex work and, 24–38
  - self-presentation of sex workers and, 146–148
  - socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15
- sexualized racism
  - Asian masculinity and, 131–132
  - black masculinity and, 129–131
  - gay masculinity and, 224–226
  - Hispanic sex workers and, 131–132
  - intersectionality theory and, 182–184
  - in non-commercial sex market, 207–208, 219–221
  - pricing and, 115, 137–141
  - safe sex practices pricing and, 200–201
  - self-presentation in male sex work and, 157–159
- sexually transmitted infections (STIs)
  - among Grindr app users, 210
  - client willingness to pay for risky sex and, 185–186
  - likelihood estimates of travel and, 94–99
  - male sex work and risk of, 171–176
  - travel by sex workers and prevalence of, 77–78, 90–91, 105–107
- sexual networks, travel by sex workers and, 77–78
- sexual orientation, biological markers for, 80–84
- sexual scripting theory
  - health risks of sex work and, 176–178
  - self-presentation in male sex work, 152–154, 159–161, 168–170
- sex worker labor force, male sex workers portion of, 5–6
- Shah, M., 31–35, 188–189, 190–191, 268–277
- signaling models
  - alternative factors in face value and, 61–70
  - conceptual and empirical framework for, 53–55
  - identification of, 52–53
  - informal enforcement in male escort market, 49–52, 239
  - lack of informal enforcement and, 68–70
  - price robustness and, 70–74, 240–241
  - simple example of, 233–236
  - travel by sex workers linked to, 86–87
- Simon, William, 152–154
- smartphone technology
  - casual sexual encounters and, 205–206, 208–212
  - online sex market and use of, 283n.1
  - racial-sexual stereotypes in sex market using, 294n.20
- social acceptability of gay culture
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 119–120
  - market responses to, 115–118
- social context of sex work, 9–11
  - economic gains of sex workers, 111–115
  - Gay Rights movement and, 24–26
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 118–121
  - market forces and, 221–226
  - risks of sex work and, 173–174
  - self-presentation of sex workers and, 142–148
  - sexual behavior and, 176–178
  - sexualized racism and, 131–132
- social groups, clients of male sex workers from, 113
- social learning theory, self-presentation in male sex work and, 152–154
- social science theories
  - of male sex work, 115–118, 139–141
  - safe sex negotiations between client and escort and, 184–185, 201–203
- Spence, Craig, 48–49
- Spence, Michael, 53–55
- spillover effects in pricing, travel by sex workers and, 77–78
- spot price
  - for male sex work, 31
  - robustness of, 70–74
- stereotypes
  - of Asian males, 131–132
  - of black masculinity, 129–131
  - erotic capital and, 182–184
  - ethnic-sexual stereotypes, 127–128
  - fetishization of black masculinity and, 129–131, 157–159
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 127
  - non-commercial sex and use of, 219–221
  - self-presentation of sex workers and, 146–148, 149–150, 159–161
  - sexual and racial intersectionality of, 113–115
- stigma, self-presentation of male sex worker and concepts of, 144
- street-based sex work
  - market structure for, 76

- online sex work compared with, 148–150
- qualitative research on, 112
- scheduling of, 76
- traveling for, 76–80
- submissiveness
  - in advertisements for sex work, 162–163
  - Asian sexualized racism and trope of, 131–132
  - branding of, on Grindr smart phone app, 217
  - erotic capital of, 182–184
  - pricing linked to, 136–137
  - racialized self-representation and, 157–159
  - self-presentation of sex workers and images of, 146–148, 159–161
  - sexualized racism and, 130
- supply of male sex workers
  - Grindr smartphone app and, 207
  - location factors in, 83–84
  - masculinity demand on Grindr smartphone app and, 215–217
  - wage differences linked to, 87
- syphilis, male sex workers and prevalence of, 90–91
- taxation on sex work earnings, history of, 20–21
- television images of male sex work, 26–31
- temporary migration, value of, 284n.25
- theft by sex workers, 48
- thinness
  - feminized persona and, 159–161
  - in gay clone culture, 155–157
  - gay masculinity and rejection of, 123–126
  - pricing and, 133–136
- “top” sex workers
  - advertisements indicating, 162–166
  - biological interpretation of, 258–263
  - branding of, on Grindr smart phone app, 217
  - erotic capital of, 181–182
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 127–128
  - negotiation for safe sex practices by, 178–181
  - premiums in pricing of, 114–115, 136–137, 139–141
  - probability of safe sex advertising by, 191–195
  - race and pricing for, 115, 137–139
  - racialized self-representation and, 157–159
  - safe sex practices in advertisements for, 174–176
  - self-representation of body image and, 155–157, 159–161, 168–170
- transaction data on male sex work, 27–38
- asymmetric information and, 39–45
- payoff functions in safe sex negotiations, 190–191
- safe sex negotiations and, 184–185, 187–189
- transgender sex workers, history of male sex work and, 24–38
- travel by male sex workers
  - city-level networking measures, 93–94
  - distance measurements, 90, 99–101
  - economics of, 86–87, 105–107
  - independent variables in, 90–91
  - likelihood estimates of, 94–99
  - location factors in, 80–84
  - market forces and, 75–80, 105–107
  - measures of network centrality and, 88–90, 92–93, 244–246
  - measuring effects of, 90
  - networks for, 87–89
  - pricing and, 76–80, 86–87, 90, 101–105
  - regression analysis of, 247–257
  - value of temporary migration and, 284n.25
- “twink” bodies, 155–157, 159–161, 163–166
- two-mode travel network, travel by sex workers and, 87–89
- United States, history of male sex work in, 22–23
- unprotected sex
  - increase in, 176–178, 186–187
  - premium on, 171–176
- unprotected sex work, client willingness to pay for risky sex and, 185–186
- urbanization, history of male sex work and, 24–38
- value, theory of
  - economic gains of sex workers, 111–115
  - face value analysis, 57–61
  - hegemonic masculinity and, 121–126
  - illegal market and asymmetric information and, 39–45
  - male sex market and, 223
  - safe sex practices pricing and, 200–201
  - sexual and racial stereotypes and, 113–115
  - signaling mechanisms and, 53–55
  - socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15

- versatile coding
  - advertisements indicating, 162–163
  - client value of, 195–198
  - probability of safe sex advertising and, 191–195
  - self-presentation of sex workers and, 168–170
- Victorian era, history of male sex work in, 22
- Village Voice*, 2
- violence, male sex work and risk of, 171–176
- wage factors, travel by male sex workers and, 86–87, 101–105, 247–257
- weight of escorts
  - Grindr smartphone app and importance of, 217–219
  - pricing and, 133–136
- white sex workers
  - gay Clone/Muscle culture and, 128–129
  - negotiation for safe sex practices by, 178–181
- non-commercial sex market and preference for, 208–212, 219–221
- prevalence in casual sex market of, 208–212
- pricing premiums and penalties and, 137–139
- probability of safe sex advertising by, 191–195
- safe sex practices pricing and, 200–201
- sexualized racism and dominance of, 131–132
- STI risk in, 185–186
- “top” sex workers and, 127–128
- unprotected sex increase among, 186–187
- within-gender relations, socioeconomic forces in male sex work and, 9–15
- Wolitski, R. J., 186–187
- women
  - black sexuality and, 128–129
  - hegemonic masculinity and power over, 119–120