

Contents

List of Illustrations [page xi]

Preface [xvii]

- 1 Approaching Nemrud Dağ [1]
  - 1.1 Between Alexandria, Rome and Antioch [1]
  - 1.2 Understanding Late Hellenistic Commagene [14]
    - 1.2.1 A Global Hellenistic World [20]
    - 1.2.2 An Archaeology of Intra-Cultural Connectivity [24]
    - 1.2.3 Beyond Representation [29]
  - 1.3 The Structure of the Book [33]
- 2 Commagene: A Historical Geography [38]
  - 2.1 Earlier Research [41]
  - 2.2 The Historical Background [46]
  - 2.3 The Region and Its Archaeology [52]
    - 2.3.1 Dynastic Monuments [52]
    - 2.3.2 Cities [82]
    - 2.3.3 Villages [91]
    - 2.3.4 The Great Cult Inscription [101]
  - 2.4 Evaluating the (Archaeological) Sources [104]
- 3 Identity [108]
  - 3.1 An Analysis of the Bildprogramm: What Did Antiochos I Demonstrate? [111]
    - 3.1.1 A Hilltop Sanctuary [111]
    - 3.1.2 A Temple Tomb (Hierothesion) in the Form of a Tumulus [115]
    - 3.1.3 Colossal Statues [120]
    - 3.1.4 A Canonical Text: The Great Cult Inscription and the Nomos [124]
    - 3.1.5 Dexiosis Reliefs and Other Sculptural Decorations [127]
    - 3.1.6 Ancestor Galleries [130]
  - 3.2 Monumentality, Visibility, Ideology and Eclecticism [135]
  - 3.3 In Search for the Social Context [137]
  - 3.4 Inventing Traditions in the Hellenistic World [141]
    - 3.4.1 Ethnic Manoeuvring in Hellenistic Egypt [142]
    - 3.4.2 Inventing Hasmonean Kingship [148]
    - 3.4.3 “Client Kings”: Herod the Great and Juba II [151]

3.5	Structuring Identity	[155]
3.5.1	Looking back: From Mausollos to the Seleucid Kings	[160]
3.5.2	Looking Forward: A Friend of the Romans?	[165]
3.6	Ideology, Social Order and Canon Building	[168]
3.7	Questions	[172]
3.7.1	The Elusive Ancestors	[172]
3.7.2	Bricolage as Historical Evidence	[178]
3.7.3	Beyond the Dynastic Mise en Scène	[182]
4	Style	[185]
4.1	“The Achievements of Hellenised Barbarians”: How to Describe the Antiochan Style	[191]
4.1.1	Humann, Puchstein and the Four Topoi	[191]
4.1.2	Twentieth-Century Explorers and Summarisers	[193]
4.1.3	Archaeological Interpretation and the Antiochan Style	[199]
4.1.4	Bricolage and the Juxtaposition of Discrete Elements	[201]
4.2	What Is It That We Call Greek and Persian?	[207]
4.2.1	Hellenisation, Hellenism and Diversities of Doing Greek	[209]
4.2.2	Persianism in the Ancient World	[213]
4.3	Three Case Studies on Bricolage in the First Century BC	[219]
4.3.1	Mixtum Compositum : Material Culture in Late Republican and Augustan Rome	[221]
4.3.2	Parthian Royal Ideology	[229]
4.3.3	Religious Monumental Building in the Eastern Mediterranean	[232]
4.4	Cultural Scenarios	[241]
5	Postscript: Between East and West?	[249]
	Appendix: Antiochos’ Nomos: Translation	[255]
	References	[261]
	Bibliography	[263]
	Index	[307]