

REVIVING ROMAN RELIGION

Sacred trees are easy to dismiss as a simplistic, weird phenomenon, but this book argues that, in fact, they prompted sophisticated theological thinking in the Roman world. Challenging major aspects of current scholarly constructions of Roman religion, Ailsa Hunt rethinks what sacrality means in Roman culture, proposing an organic model which defies the current legalistic approach. She approaches Roman religion as a ‘thinking’ religion (in contrast to the ingrained idea of Roman religion as orthopraxy) and warns against writing the environment out of our understanding of Roman religion, as has happened to date. In addition, the individual trees showcased in this book have much to tell us which enriches and thickens our portraits of Roman religion, be it about the subtleties of engaging in imperial cult, the meaning of numen, the interpretation of portents or the way statues of the divine communicate.

AILSA HUNT is Lecturer in Classics at the University of Cambridge and a Fellow of Newnham College, Cambridge.

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-15354-7 — Reviving Roman Religion
Ailsa Hunt
Frontmatter
More Information

---

CAMBRIDGE CLASSICAL STUDIES

General editors

R. L. HUNTER, R. G. OSBORNE, M. J. MILLETT, G. BETEGH, G. C. HORROCKS, S. P. OAKLEY,
W. M. BEARD, T. J. G. WHITMARSH

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-15354-7 — Reviving Roman Religion
Ailsa Hunt
Frontmatter
More Information

---

---

REVIVING ROMAN RELIGION

Sacred Trees in the Roman World

---

AILS A HUNT
University of Cambridge

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

University Printing House, Cambridge CB2 8BS, United Kingdom

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning, and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781107153547

© Ailsa Hunt 2016

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2016

Printed in the United Kingdom by Clays, St Ives plc

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloguing in Publication Data

Names: Hunt, Ailsa, author.

Title: Reviving Roman religion : sacred trees in the Roman world / Ailsa Hunt.

Description: New York : Cambridge University Press, 2016. | Series: Cambridge classical studies | Includes bibliographical references and index.

Identifiers: LCCN 2016021106 | ISBN 9781107153547 (hardback)

Subjects: LCSH: Rome—Religion. | Trees—Religious aspects.

Classification: LCC BL805 .H86 2016 | DDC 292.2/12—dc23

LC record available at <https://lcn.loc.gov/2016021106>

ISBN 978-1-107-15354-7 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party Internet Web sites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such Web sites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-15354-7 — Reviving Roman Religion
Ailsa Hunt
Frontmatter
More Information

---

for James Edward

CONTENTS

List of figures	page x
Acknowledgements	xi
1 Rooting in: why give time to sacred trees?	1
2 A brief history of tree thinking: the enduring power of animism	29
3 How arboreal matter matters: rethinking sacrality through trees	72
4 Arboriculture and arboreal deaths: rethinking sacrality again	121
5 Confronting arboreal agency: reading the divine in arboreal behaviour	173
6 Imagining the gods: how trees flesh out the identity of the divine	224
7 Branching out: what sacred trees mean for Roman religion	292
Appendix	295
Bibliography	302
Index	328

FIGURES

1	Tiberian sestertius, Tarraco.	page 221
2	Fresco from the calidarium , villa di Poppaea , Oplontis.	225
3	Detail from the Anaglypha Traiani , Rome.	256
4	Fresco from the oecus of casa VII.9.47, Pompeii.	257
5	Detail from the Arch of Constantine, Rome.	267
6	Fresco from the garden of casa VI.7.23, Pompeii.	272
7	Fresco from the Red Room, Villa at Boscotrecase.	273
8	Fresco from the eklesiasterion , Temple of Isis, Pompeii.	274
9	Fresco from the eklesiasterion , Temple of Isis, Pompeii.	275
10	Fresco from the eklesiasterion , Temple of Isis, Pompeii.	276
11	Fresco from the villa Arianna , Stabiae.	278
12	Drawing of fresco from cubiculum b, casa IX.2.16, Pompeii.	279
13	Detail of relief from the amphitheatre at Capua.	281
14	Relief depicting the Temple of Vesta.	282
15	Relief depicting a sacrificial procession for Cybele, Cyzicus.	283
16	Detail from wooden furniture leg, villa dei Papiri , Herculaneum.	285
17	Detail from wooden furniture leg, villa dei Papiri , Herculaneum.	287

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I grew up in a house called Yggdrasil in a remote North Yorkshire village, and whilst I spent far more of my childhood climbing trees than thinking about them, it was perhaps inevitable that it would one day come to this. I would like to start by thanking my family for all their love over the years and for their support of my academic work, caring about both successes and failures.

Transplanted from Yorkshire to Corpus Christi, Oxford, I discovered a brave new world of classicists, who all helped to transform my own intellectual world: in particular I am grateful to Stephen Harrison, Ewen Bowie, Neil McLynn, Martin Goodman, Anna Clark, John Ma, Tim Whitmarsh and Jaś Elsner. From Oxford to Cambridge, I then had my intellectual world blown apart by John Henderson, who supervised my MPhil research: his unique ability to see something interesting in everything was both infectious and inspiring. For my doctorate I was supervised by Mary Beard, to whom I am also deeply indebted. Mary takes no prisoners in intellectual terms, and I have learned so much from the sharpness of her thinking and her knack for bulldozing through irrelevancies and homing in on the pertinent question.

As this doctorate turned from a thesis into a book, I have been guided and encouraged by my examiners, Catharine Edwards and Andrew Wallace-Hadrill, and by Robin Osborne and Stephen Oakley, who read and improved the final manuscript. I am also grateful to Michael Sharp and the editorial team at Cambridge University Press, and to all the library staff in the Faculty of Classics. I wrote the book whilst I held an Isaac Newton Research Fellowship in Classics at Fitzwilliam College, Cambridge, and I will remember with fondness this my most recent academic home, the friendliness of the fellowship and the peacefulness of the college gardens and their old trees.

Acknowledgements

Last but not least, I want to thank my husband Richard. Throughout the years that have gone into this book I have leaned on him for strength, and he has been endlessly patient with my antisocial hours and frequent failures to see the wood for the trees. I have not always been easy to live with. I once dragged him and our unborn child to Tarraco just so I could see the home of my favourite palm tree.

This book is dedicated to baby James, who endured it both in and out of the womb. I am sorry it isn't a lift-the-flap book.