

Contents

	Acknowledgments	page ix
	A Note on the Texts	xii
	Introduction	1
1	Metaphysical Foundations	13
	Account of Human Nature	13
	The Process of Human Action	21
	Necessitation and Freedom	29
2	Evil as Privation	36
	The Ontological Status of Evil	36
	Objections to the Privation Theory	45
	Moral Goodness and Moral Appraisal	52
	Return to Privation	65
3	Aquinas's Account of Moral Wrongdoing: General Points and Defects in the Intellect	74
	Some General Distinctions	75
	The Roles of Will and Intellect in Wrong Actions	81
	Account of Voluntariness	87
	Wrongdoing That Originates in the Intellect	91
4	Aquinas's Account of Moral Wrongdoing: Defects in the Sensory Appetite	100
	Wrongdoing That Originates in the Sensory Appetite	101
	Practical Reasoning in Wrongdoing Originating in the Passions	107
	Weakness of Will	111
5	Aquinas's Account of Moral Wrongdoing: Defects in the Will	116
	Wrongdoing That Originates in the Will	117
	The Underlying Mechanism of Deliberate Wrongdoing	123
	Distinguishing between Evil and Ordinary Wrongdoing	128
	Is Aquinas's Account of Deliberate Wrongdoing Too Broad?	135
	Can Human Beings Perform Evil Simply for the Sake of Evil?	140
		vii

viii	Contents
6	The Vices in Aquinas's Moral Psychology	148
	The Nature and Acquisition of Habits	148
	The Vices in Summa theologiae	155
	The Tradition of the Capital Vices	160
	The Capital Vices and Deliberate Wrongdoing	167
	Conclusion	174
	Bibliography	179
	Index	195