This book provides a new legal-sociological account of contemporary democracy. This is based on a revision of standard positions in democratic theory, reflecting the impact of global legal norms on the institutions of national states. Chris Thornhill argues that the establishment of fully democratic, fully inclusive governance systems in national societies was generally impeded by inner-societal structural factors, and that inclusive patterns of democratic citizenship only evolved on the foundation of global legal norms that were consolidated after 1945. He claims that this process can be best understood through a transposition of key insights of classical legal sociology onto the form of global society. Extensive analysis of select case studies in different regions illustrate these claims. Thornhill offers a sociological theory of global law to explain contemporary processes of democratic integration and institutional formation and contemporary constructions of citizenship and political rights. This title is also available as Open Access.

CHRIS THORNHILL is Professor in Law at the University of Manchester. He is the author of several books on the sociology of law, especially on the sociology of constitutions. His books and other writings have been translated into many languages. He is a member of the Academia Europaea.
GLOBAL LAW SERIES

The series provides unique perspectives on the way globalization is radically altering the study, discipline and practice of law. Featuring innovative books in this growing field, the series explores those bodies of law which are becoming global in their application, and the newly emerging interdependency and interaction of different legal systems. It covers all major branches of the law and includes work on legal theory, history, and the methodology of legal practice and jurisprudence under conditions of globalization. Offering a major platform on global law, these books provide essential reading for students and scholars of comparative, international and transnational law.

Series Editors
M.E.A Goodwin Tilburg University
Randall Lesaffer Tilburg University
David Nelken King's College London
Han Somsen Tilburg University

Books in the Series
Intimations of Global Law Neil Walker
Legalized Families in the Era of Bordered Globalization Daphna Hacker
Transnational Sustainability Laws Phillip Paiement
The Sociology of Law and the Global Transformation of Democracy Chris Thornhill
Authority and the Globalisation of Inclusion and Exclusion Hans Lindahl
THE SOCIOLOGY OF LAW AND THE GLOBAL TRANSFORMATION OF DEMOCRACY

CHRIS THORNHILL
University of Manchester
For Atina, Grace and John
CONTENTS

Acknowledgements ix

Introduction 1

1 The Paradox of Democracy and the Sociology of Law 39
2 National Democracy and Global Law 134
3 Before the Law? 203
4 Politics Becomes the Law 277
5 The Reconstruction of Democratic Agency 420

Conclusion 497

Bibliography 503
Index 569
Research for this book was very generously funded by the European Research Council (ERC) (Advanced Grant 323656-STC). I owe a great debt of gratitude to the ERC for this funding, which made it possible for me to conduct extensive research in different countries and in some of the world's great cities, notably Bogotá, Brasília, Frankfurt, La Paz, London, Moscow, Nairobi and Saint Petersburg. Additionally, I wish to thank everyone who has assisted me with my research in connection with this book. In particular, my thanks are due to Maria Smirnova and Carina Calabria, who for several years provided both excellent company and extensive information concerning Russian law and the legal systems of different Latin American countries. All analysis of Russian law set out in the book is indebted to Maria Smirnova, who has been a truly magnificent co-researcher over recent years. Some aspects of Chilean and Colombian case law were explained to me by Rodrigo Cespedes, and Dominic Dagbanja and Elizabeth O'Loughlin helped me with questions concerning Ghanaian and Kenyan law. In Bogotá, Juan Barrero, Jorge González and Julieta Lemaitre showed great generosity in taking time to clarify for me the finer points and broader implications of Colombian constitutional law. Colleagues at the Institute of Legislation and Comparative Law under the Government of the Russian Federation in Moscow were extremely helpful in sharing their knowledge of the complexities of Russian public law. Also very fruitful were discussions in which I participated at conferences and colloquia held in Aarhus, Bogotá, Bremen, Cardiff, Edinburgh, Moscow and Tel Aviv, and I am grateful to all participants in these events. Discussions in my postgraduate seminars at the University of Brasilia in October 2016 will stay in my mind for a long time, and I am grateful to all the students there for their intellectual company. Students who took my course on the Sociology of Law at Manchester University in 2017 also contributed immeasurably to the book, as their questions forced me to rethink many of my claims. In November 2016, I spent a month at the
Acknowledgements

Max-Planck-Institut für europäische Rechtsgeschichte in Frankfurt, where I wrote some of the historical sections of the book. The Institute in Frankfurt was always a wonderful place to work, and I am grateful for the opportunities it offered me over many years, up to 2016. More informal discussions with Guilherme de Azevedo, Paul Blokker, Hauke Brunkhorst, Emilios Christodoulidis, Jean d'Aspremont, Pierre Guibentif, Gorm Harste, Poul Kjaer, Aldo Mascareño, Ben Morris, Jiri Priban, Darrow Schecter, Gunther Teubner and Neil Walker were also very enlightening, and they fed into the book indirectly. Atina Krajewska discussed many of the ideas in the book with me, and she put me right on many points. As ever, I am extremely grateful to Finola O'Sullivan and other colleagues at Cambridge University Press for supporting my research.