Reading Latin

TEXT AND VOCABULARY

Second edition

Reading Latin, first published in 1986, is a bestselling Latin course designed to help mature beginners read classical Latin fluently and intelligently, primarily in the context of classical culture, but with some medieval Latin too. It does this in three ways: it encourages the reading of continuous texts from the start without compromising grammatical rigour; it offers generous help with translation at every stage; and it integrates the learning of classical Latin with an appreciation of the influence of the Latin language upon English and European culture from antiquity to the present.

The Text and Vocabulary, richly illustrated, consists at the start of carefully graded adaptations from original classical Latin texts. The adaptations are gradually phased out until unadulterated prose and verse can be read. The accompanying Grammar and Exercises volume supplies all the grammatical help needed to do this, together with a range of reinforcing exercises for each section, including English into Latin for those who want it. It also contains a full and detailed reference grammar at the back. For each section, a selection of Latin epigrams, mottoes, quotations, everyday Latin, word-derivations, examples of medieval Latin and discussions of the influence of Latin upon English illustrate the language's impact on Western culture.

Reading Latin is principally designed for college/university and adult beginners, but also for those in the final years of school. It is also ideal for those people who may have learned Latin many years ago, and wish to renew their acquaintance with the language. The optional Independent Study Guide provides a great deal of help to the student learning without a teacher.

The second edition has been fully revised and updated, with revisions to the early chapters including a new one on stories from early Roman history, and extensively redesigned to make it easier and clearer to navigate. The vocabulary has been moved into the same volume as the text and placed alongside it, so that the Text and Vocabulary could function as a self-standing beginner's reader independent of the whole course if desired. Moreover, a visual distinction has been made between those texts which are essential to follow the course and those which could be omitted and simply read in translation if time is very limited.

PETER JONES was Senior Lecturer in Classics at the University of Newcastle upon Tyne until his retirement. He has written many books for the student of Latin and Greek, most recently Reading Ovid (Cambridge, 2007), Reading Virgil (Cambridge, 2011) and (with Keith Sidwell) the Reading Latin textbook series.

KEITH SIDWELL is Emeritus Professor of Latin and Greek, University College Cork and Adjunct Professor in the Department of Classics and Religion at the University of Calgary. He has written on Greek drama, later Greek literature and Neo-Latin writing: his books include Lucian: Chattering Courtesans and Other Sardonic Sketches (2004) and Aristophanes the Democrat (Cambridge, 2009). As well as co-authoring the Reading Latin series with Peter Jones, he is the author of Reading Medieval Latin (Cambridge, 1995).
Reading Latin
Text and Vocabulary
Second edition
Peter Jones
and Keith Sidwell
Contents

List of illustrations vii
Preliminary remarks xiii
Acknowledgements xvii
Notes xix
Maps xx

Introduction 1

Part One  Plautus’ comedies 5
Section 1: Plautus’ Aululāria 6
Section 2: Plautus’ Amphitruō 56

Part Two  Early Roman history: from Aeneas to Hannibāl 85
Section 3  86
Section 3A: Aeneas and the Trojan War 86
Section 3B: Romulus and Remus 95
Section 3C: Sextus Tarquinius and Lucretia, 509 BC 101
Section 3D: Hannibāl 110

Part Three  The demise of the Roman Republic 121
Section 4: Provincial corruption: the Verres scandal 73–71 BC 122
Section 5: The conspiracy of Catiline in Rome 64–62 BC 166
Section 6: Poetry and politics: Caesar to Augustus 220
Section 6A: High life and high society: Catullus (c. 84–c. 54 BC) 220
Section 6B: 49: Cicero, Caelius and the approach of civil war 234
Section 6C: The end of the civil war: the battle of Pharsālus 250
Section 6D: Four Roman poets 262

Part Four  Additional reading for Sections 1B to 5G 283

Total Latin–English Learning Vocabulary 329
Illustrations

Maps
1 The Roman world c. 44 BC xx
2 Asia Minor and the East xxi
3 Greece xxii

Figures
1 Romulus and Remus suckled by the she-wolf. Roman silver didrachm 269–266 BC. Photo © The Trustees of the British Museum, London (BMCRR Romano-Campanian 28). 1
3 Model of a stage building. Terracotta relief, found in southern Italy; c. 300 BC. Museo Nazionale, Naples (inv. 60). 8
4 Comic actor as slave. Terracotta statuette, made and found at Myrina, Asia Minor; second century BC. Museum of Fine Arts, Boston. Purchased by contribution (01.7679). Photo: Bridgeman Art Library. 9
5 Household shrine in the ‘House of Menander’ (House of Quintus Poppaeus), Pompeii (1.10.4); first century BC – first century AD. Photo: © 2012, Scala, Florence – courtesy of the Ministero Beni e Att. Culturali. 12
6 A Lar, the tutelary god of hearth and home, roads and crossroads. Bronze statuette; first century AD. Musée du Louvre, Paris (Br. 686). Photo: Giraudon/Bridgeman Art Library. 15
7 South Italian vase, probably illustrating a Greek comedy: old woman and old man. Apulian red-figure bell-krater by the McDaniel Painter, found at Taranto; c. 400–375 BC. Harvard University, Department of the Classics, Alice Corinne McDaniel Collection, Cambridge, MA. Photo: Bridgeman Art Library. 20
viii  List of illustrations

8  Comic actors as old man, woman and slave. Wall-painting from the ‘House of the Dioscuri’ (House of the Nigidii), Pompeii (VI.9.6); first century AD. Akademisches Kunstmuseum, Bonn (Inv. B. 341). Photo: W. Klein. 27

9  Sale of cushions. Marble relief, most probably from a funerary monument; first century AD. Florence, Galleria degli Uffizi (Inv. 313). Photo © 2012, Scala, Florence – courtesy of the Ministero Beni e Att. Culturali. 29

10 South Italian vase, probably illustrating a Greek comedy: cooks taking roast meat to a feast, preceded by a girl playing the pipes. Apulian red-figure bell-krater by the Dijon Painter; c. 375 BC. State Hermitage Museum, St Petersburg (Inv. 2074). Photo © The State Hermitage Museum/photo by Vladimir Terebenin, Leonard Kheifets, Yuri Molodkovets. 37

11 South Italian vase, probably illustrating a Greek comedy: Philotimides and Charis eating dainties, Xanthias the slave stealing cake. Apulian red-figure bell-krater, found at Ruvo; 400–375 BC. Museo Archaeologico, Milan (Inv. AO.9.285). 40

13 Roadway with shrines. Wall-painting from the ‘House of the Small Fountain’, Pompeii (VI.8.23); first century AD. Museo Nazionale, Naples (H 1557). Drawing: from Daremberg and Saglio s.v. compitum. 45

14 Row of theatrical masks. Roman lamp made in Egypt; first century AD. Musée du Louvre, Paris (MNB469). Photo: © RMN-Grand Palais (Musée du Louvre)/Hervé Lewandowski. 56

16 Booty carried in a triumphal procession. Section of a marble frieze from the temple of Apollo Sosianus, near the theatre of Marcellus, Rome; c. 20 BC. Musei Capitolini, Centrale Montemartini, Rome (Inv. No. MC 2777). Photo: Cologne Digital Archaeology Laboratory, University of Cologne/Barbara Malter. 65

17 Two comic actors. Handle statuettes from the lid of a bronze box (cista), from Praeneste; third century BC. Photo © The Trustees of the British Museum, London (B 742). 68

18 Mercury. Roman bronze statuette, found at Augst, Switzerland; first century AD. Römerhaus und Museum, Augst (A 1757). Photo: © Augusta Raurica, Augst/Susanne Schenker. 69

19 Amphitruo and a thunderbolt. Apulian red-figure calyx-krater by the Painter of the Birth of Dionysos, found at Taranto; 400–390 BC. Museo Nazionale,
List of illustrations

20 The infant Hercules strangling serpents. Bronze statuette, said to have been found at Ephesos. Roman Imperial period. Photo: © The Trustees of the British Museum, London (97.7–28.2). 81

21 The judgement of Paris. Wall-painting from Pompeii, fourth style, Museo Archeologico Nazionale, Naples (Inv. 119691). Photo: akg-images/Electa. 87

22 The arrival of Aeneas and his Trojan companions in Italy. Marble relief found in Rome, c. 140–150 BC. Photo © The Trustees of the British Museum, London (1927, 1212.1). 93

24 Rape of the Sabine Women. Oil painting by Pietro da Cortona, 1629. Musei Capitolini, Rome. Photo: akg-images/Erich Lessing. 100

26 Reverse of a coin showing Brutus as consul with two lictors and accensus (attendant). Photo: Australian Centre for Numismatic Studies, Macquarie University (RRC-433-1). 106

29 Battlefield at Cannae, Puglia. Memorial stone of the battle that took place there during the Second Punic War, 2 August 216 BC. Photo: © 2012 DeAgostini Picture Library/Scala, Florence – courtesy of the Ministero Beni e Att. Culturali. 117

30 Hannibal’s suicide. Illumination from Plutarchi historiographi Graeci liber de viris clarissimis, Flemish, fifteenth century. University Library, Gent (Ms. 109, fol. 176r). Photo: akg-images. 119

31 The province of Sicily. 122

32 Grainfields of Sicily (Selinus hinterland). Photo: © Roger Wilson. 123

34 Mater Magna drawn by lions. Bronze group found at Rome; Hellenistic, 2nd half of second century AD. Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York (97.22.24).
List of illustrations

35 Great Altar of Zeus Eleutherios, Syracuse, second half of third century BC. Photo © Roger Wilson. 133

36 Young woman standing. Terracotta statuette, made and found at Myrina, Asia Minor; 250–200 BC. Musée du Louvre, Paris (MYR 230). Photo: © RMN-Grand Palais (Musée du Louvre)/Hervé Lewandowski. 136

37 Revel. Roman tomb-painting from the columbarium of the Villa Pamphili, Rome; mid first century AD. Photo: © The Trustees of the British Museum, London (1873,0208.1) 138

38 Two wine cups, a ladle and pitcher, and six spoons. Roman silverware from Italy; first century BC. Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York (20.49.2–9, 11,12), Rogers Fund. Photo: © 2012 The Metropolitan Museum of Art/Art Resource/Scala, Florence – courtesy of the Ministero Beni e Att. Culturali. 141

40 Jug, ladle, spatula, bowl and strainer. Roman silverware, from Arcisate, near Como; c. 75 BC. Photo © The Trustees of the British Museum, London (1900.7–30.3–7). 146

41 Naval engagement. Roman silver denarius, issue of Q. Nasidius, Sextus Pompeius’ moneyer; 44–43 BC. Photo: Nationalmuseet, Copenhagen. 148

42 The Euryalus fort, west of Syracuse; begun c. 400 BC. Photo: akg-images/DeAgostini Picture Library. 153

44 The stone quarries at Syracuse. Photo: Alinari Archives, Florence. 157

47 Sulla (138–78 BC). Roman silver denarius, issue of Q. Pompeius Rufus, Sulla’s grandson; c. 54 BC. Photo: American Numismatic Society. 170

48 The senate house (curia) at the Forum Romanum, Rome. Photo: Michael Sharp. 172

49 Couple embracing on a couch. Campanian terracotta group from Tarquinia; second–first century BC. Photo © The Trustees of the British Museum, London (D 213). 175
List of illustrations

50 Dancing girl. Sicilian terracotta statuette, from Centorbi; second century BC. Photo © The Trustees of the British Museum, London (D 11). 178

52 Head of a Gaul. Roman silver denarius, issue of L. Hostilius Saserna; c. 48 BC. Photo: Staatliche Münzsammlung, Munich. 185

53 The West end of Forum Romanum, Rome. Photo: Michael Sharp. 188

54 Still-life with writing materials (tablet, inkpot and reed pen). Wall-painting from Pompeii; first century AD. Museo Nazionale, Naples (9822). Photo: Fotografia Foglia. 189

55 The Mulvian bridge, north of Rome, carrying the Via Flaminia over the Tiber; rebuilt in 109 BC. Photo: Alamy. 190

56 Temple of Concord, Rome, as rebuilt in the reign of Tiberius. Roman bronze sesterii of Tiberius; c. AD 36. Photo © The Trustees of the British Museum, London. 194

59 The Vesta temple, Rome, showing curule chair with urn and tablet, and A for ‘absoluo’ and C for ‘condemno’. Roman silver denarius, issue of Q. Cassius (Longinus); 55 BC. Photo: © The Trustees of the British Museum, London. 203

60 Altar and tombstones of the Mamertino Prison (today Chapel of St Peter in Prison), found under the church of St Joseph of the Carpenters in Rome, seventh century BC. Photo: Alinari Archives, Florence. 205

61 Map showing places of interest in the final phase of Catiline’s conspiracy. 209

62 Fight of armoured warrior against naked opponent. Roman marble relief from the Basilica Aemilia in the Forum Romanum, Rome; 34 or 14 BC. Antiquarium del Foro, Rome. Photo: Deutsches Archäologisches Institut, Athens. 217

63 Still-life with a plate of eggs, jugs, a spoon and bottle, thrushes and a napkin. Wall-painting from the property of Julia Felix, Pompeii (11.4.3); first century AD. Museo Nazionale, Naples (8598 C). Photo: Fotografia Foglia. 221

64 Still-life with writing materials (tablet and scroll, scraper, inkpot and reed pen), from Pompeii; first century AD. Museo Nazionale, Naples (4676). Photo: Fotografia Foglia. 225

65 Young couple kissing (Cupid and Psyche). Marble statue group, from Rome; Roman Imperial copy of a second-century BC original. Musei Capitolini, Rome (inv. 408 H 1434). Photo: akg-images. 227
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>List of illustrations</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>66</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>68</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>71</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>72</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>73</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>74</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>75</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>76</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>77</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>78</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>79</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Preliminary remarks

The course: time to be taken and principles of construction

Reading Latin (Text and Vocabulary and Grammar and Exercises) is aimed at mature beginners in the sixth form (11th–12th grade), universities and adult education who want to learn classical or medieval Latin. Trials were carried out between 1981 and 1984 at a number of schools, summer schools, universities (at home and in the United States, Canada, New Zealand and Denmark) and adult education centres, and the final version of the first edition was given to the Press in September 1984.

This second edition has benefited from twenty-five years’ experience with the first edition. In that time it has become clear that there was too much Plautus, and the transition from the Plautus to the Ciceronian prose of Section 4 was too abrupt. As a consequence, we have cut Plautus’ Bacchides (old Section 2), whose plot was also found to be excessively complicated, and moved Amphitruo, appropriately re-written and slightly extended, back from old Section 3 to replace it; and created a brand new Section 3, concentrating on the early history of Rome. Here we tell the stories of Aeneas, Romulus and Remus, the rape of Lucretia and Hannibal, all of which played a vital part in constructing the Romans’ sense of their own identity.

We have also introduced the ‘momentum’ principle into the Text, i.e. some portions of a passage appear with their translation appended, but with their full vocabulary still in the vocabulary list. This will enable the reading of the Text to be speeded up without depriving the teacher of the chance to home in on any lexical or grammatical features judged to need attention. However, the teacher needs to be warned that the test exercises may cover material found in the momentum sections.

We also decided to move the Running and Learning vocabularies, previously placed in the accompanying Grammar, Vocabulary and Exercise volume, onto the facing pages of the Text. Each double-page spread now contains Latin text and the vocabulary needed to translate it; and the total Latin–English vocabulary to be learned now appears at the back of the Text volume as well as of the Grammar volume. As a result, the two volumes are now called Reading Latin: Text and Vocabulary and Reading Latin: Grammar and Exercises.

Our experience strongly suggests that it takes longer to develop a reading ability in Latin than it does in Greek. Consequently, in schools and adult education, where time is restricted, Reading Latin should be treated as a two-year course.
Preliminary remarks

In universities, on a timetable of three to four hours a week, the first year’s target should be the end of Section 4, by which time most of the major grammar will have been covered, though better classes may be able to get well into Section 5.

The principles on which we constructed the course are broadly those of Reading Greek, with three important exceptions. First, it became clear early on that Latin needs more exercise work than Greek does, and that English into Latin restricted to the level of the phrase or single verb has an important part to play (there are also English into Latin sentences and simple prose work for those who want them). Secondly, we became convinced that if students are ever to read Latin with any confidence they must be encouraged from the very beginning to understand it, word by word and phrase by phrase, in the same order as it was written. A large number of exercises are devoted to this end. In particular, we encourage students to analyse out loud their understanding of a sentence as they translate it and to indicate what they anticipate next. Thirdly, the role of the Latin language in the development of English in particular and Western civilisation and romance languages in general is ineradicable. If we ignored that tradition, and concentrated narrowly on classical Latin, we felt that we would be depriving students of an understanding of Latin’s true importance for the Western world. Consequently, while the course teaches classical Latin, the sections of Deliciae Latinae take the students into the worlds of pre-classical, post-classical, Vulgate and medieval Latin and explore Latin’s influence upon English vocabulary today. All the reading material which was attached in the first edition to these Deliciae Latinae sections in the Grammar, Vocabulary and Exercises volume has been moved in the second edition to the end of the Text and Vocabulary volume, pp. 283–328. But the word-building and derivation exercises remain under the Deliciae Latinae from Sections 1B to 4E.

Methodology

Users of Reading Greek will be familiar with the methodology that we propose. There are two working volumes: Text and Vocabulary (TV) and Grammar and Exercises (GE), and a support-book for those working mostly on their own (Peter Jones and Keith Sidwell, An Independent Study Guide to Reading Latin [second edition, Cambridge 2017]).

Note: teachers are advised to mark in their texts the new syntax and accidence that is being introduced in each section.

Step one: with the help of the running vocabularies in the Text, or with the teacher prompting, read and translate the appropriate section of the Latin Text. In the course of the translation, the teacher should draw out and formalise on the board only the grammar that is set to be learned for that section (this can, of course, be done before the Text is tackled, if the teacher so desires, but our experience suggests it is far better to let the students try to see for themselves, under the teacher’s guidance, how the new grammar works).
Preliminary remarks

Step two: when that is done, students should learn thoroughly the Learning vocabulary for the section. Words set to be learned will not be glossed in running vocabularies again, unless they occur in the Text with a different meaning. On p. 329 there is a total vocabulary of all words set to be learned with their full range of meanings given in this course, and a note of where they should have been learned (teachers should use this information when devising their own tests).

Step three: the grammar of the section should be reviewed and learned thoroughly from the GE volume, and a selection of the exercises tackled. It is extremely important to note that the exercises should be regarded as a pool out of which the teachers/students should choose what to do, and whether in or out of class. Teachers will note that we now regularly offer Either/Or options. Some of the simpler exercises we have already split into necessary and optional sections, but this principle should be applied to all of them. Most of these should be done and graded out of class (this saves much time), but the Reading exercises should all be done orally and the students encouraged to analyse out loud their understanding of the passage as they read it. This technique should, in time, be passed on to the reading of the Text. It will help you to learn if you read out the Latin of the Text and exercises as much as possible.

We are aware that some teachers of the first edition of the course have created online interactive exercises which have proved a success with their students, and we hope that these might eventually be made more widely available through Cambridge University Press once suitably updated. Any further developments in this respect will be announced through the webpage of the Grammar and Exercises volume.

Step four: use as much Déliciae Latīnae (or extra reading: see note after step five below) as time allows or personal taste dictates.

Step five: on to the next section of the Text, and repeat.

Déliciae Latīnae

Note that in the second edition, we have moved all extra reading material (real Latin – and sometimes unreal Latin – except the word-building and derivation exercises) from the Grammar volume to the end of this Text. This material includes Déliciae Latīnae from sections 1B to 4C, passages of Rēs Gestae Dīūi Augustī and other writers in sections 4D–G, and passages of Virgil’s Aeneid and other writers in section 5A–G. This now appears as ‘Additional reading for sections 1B to 5G’, pp. 283–328 of the Text.

Students who want to have more practice with real Latin can now flip directly to these passages, which are equipped with vocabulary and notes at the level of the sections to which they are linked. Once more, it must be stressed that these readings are not an integral part of the course, though, naturally, using them will help develop and strengthen the student’s reading abilities.
Preliminary remarks

After Reading Latin

A note for medieval Latinists

Since classical Latin is the foundation on which medieval developed, and to which medieval writers consistently looked back, it is essential to start Latin studies with classical Latin. The Deliciae Latinae section offers plenty of contact with later Latin, especially the Vulgate (probably the most important Latin text ever written). You should aim to get into, and preferably complete, Section 5 of Reading Latin, before moving on to Keith Sidwell, Reading Medieval Latin (Cambridge, 1995). This consists of selections of Latin, in historical sequence in four sections, from the first to the twelfth century AD, with commentary on the cultural changes of the times. The texts are accompanied by extensive linguistic notes and, at the back, a working reference grammar of medieval Latin, and a vocabulary (or spellings) of words not found in standard classical Latin dictionaries.
Acknowledgements

We give our warmest thanks to all our testing institutions, both at home and overseas. In particular, we should like to thank I. M. Le M. DuQuesnay (then of the University of Birmingham, now of Newnham College, Cambridge) and Professor J. A. Barsby (University of Otago at Dunedin, New Zealand), who both gave up wholly disproportionate amounts of their time to the early drafts of the course; Janet Cann† and Professor David West† (University of Newcastle upon Tyne), who suffered with the course from its very beginnings, and can have learned nothing through their suffering, though they both taught us very much; J. G. Randall (University of Lancaster), whose Parua Sagácī taught us much about the technique of reading Latin as it comes and who put at our disposal his index of Latin sentences; Professor E. J. Kenney (Peterhouse, Cambridge), who took the tortured Latin of the trial text and put it skilfully out of its suffering; Dr J. G. F. Powell (University of Newcastle upon Tyne, now Professor of Latin at Royal Holloway, London), who ran an expert eye at the last minute over the whole course and saved us from much error of fact and judgement and whose notes on Latin word-order are the basis for section W of the Reference Grammar; Dr R. L. Thomson (University of Leeds) for contributing the essays on the Latin language in the Appendix; Sir Desmond Lee† for the comedy and prose translations; Professor West† for the Lucretius and Virgil translations; J. J. Paterson (University of Newcastle upon Tyne) for work on the historical introductions to Sections 4 and 5; Professor E. Phinney† (University of Massachusetts) for scrutinising the whole text for solecisms; our patient indefatigable typist Ms (now Dr) Janet Watson (University of Newcastle upon Tyne); Professor B. A. Sparkes (University of Southampton), who brought to the illustrations the same scholarship and imagination which so graced the pages of the Reading Greek series.

Finally, we gratefully acknowledge a loan of £750 from the Finance Committee of the J.A.C.T. Greek Project and a grant of £3,000 from the Nuffield ‘Small Grants’ Foundation which enabled the three-year testing programme to begin.

The generous support of these institutions and the selfless commitment of the individuals mentioned above have been indispensable ingredients in the production of this course. Responsibility for all error is to be laid firmly at our door.

Second edition

We owe especial thanks to Professor David Langslow (University of Manchester) for thoroughly revising the grammatical Glossary and the whole Reference
Acknowledgements

Grammar, adding an important new linguistic and comparative philological element to the original descriptions.

We are extremely grateful to Professor Alison Sharrock of the University of Manchester for sharing with us the online interactive exercises she has created for her students. We hope these might eventually be made available to all users of the course through Cambridge University Press.

Peter Jones
Newcastle upon Tyne, UK

Keith Sidwell,
Emeritus Professor of Latin and Greek, University College Cork, and Adjunct Professor, Department of Classics and Religion, University of Calgary

Notice

To avoid confusion, especially amongst users of Reading Greek (Cambridge 2nd edition 2008), it must be made clear that Reading Latin is the authors’ private venture and has no connections with the Joint Association of Classical Teachers.
Notes

1 All dates are BC, unless otherwise specified.
2 Linking devices are used throughout the Text to indicate words that should be taken together. ̃ links words next to each other, ͡ links words separated from each other. Such phrases should be looked up under the first word of the group in the running vocabularies. Where verse passages appear, that is Sections 6A and 6D of the main text and sporadically in the Additional Readings (e.g. p. 287), the linking device for separated words is not necessarily backed up by an entry in the vocabularies.
3 All vowels should be pronounced short, unless they are marked with a macron (e.g. ¯e), when they should be pronounced long (see pronunciation guide, p. xiv of Grammar and Exercises volume).
4 Throughout the Text are slightly adapted extracts, relevant to the section in hand, drawn from The World of Rome: An Introduction to Roman Culture (Cambridge, 1997), edited by Peter Jones and Keith Sidwell.
Map 1 The Roman world c. 44 BC
Map 2 Asia Minor and the East
Map 3 Greece