

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services

Donna McAuliffe

Frontmatter

More information

Interprofessional Ethics

Collaboration in the social, health and human services

Organisations in the social, health and human services sectors employ a range of professionals to provide dynamic and quality service and care to people across the lifespan. Interprofessional Ethics recognises that multidisciplinary teams exist in many health, government and community-based workplaces. It explores the ethical frameworks, policies and procedures of professional practice, in order to equip readers with the knowledge and skills to work within collaborative teams, and to better understand and consider the perspectives, approaches and values of others.

Each chapter features:

- Reflection points – reflective activities to encourage readers to focus on their own experiences and values
- Through the eyes of a practitioner – reflections from practitioners on their professional experiences
- Learning objectives – encourage readers to engage with core ideas and concepts

As the professional practice context has become more complex and concerned with risk management, there is an increasing need for practitioners to be skilled in ethical decision-making. Interprofessional Ethics provides a sound introduction to moral philosophy and ethical theory, professional regulation, ethical decision-making, activism, e-professionalism, and personal and professional responsibilities.

Donna McAuliffe is Associate Professor, School of Human Services and Social Work at Griffith University, Queensland.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services

Donna McAuliffe

Frontmatter

More information

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services

Donna McAuliffe

Frontmatter

More information

Interprofessional Ethics

Collaboration in the social, health and human services

Donna McAuliffe

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services

Donna McAuliffe

Frontmatter

More information

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

477 Williamstown Road, Port Melbourne, VIC 3207, Australia

Cambridge University Press is part of the University of Cambridge.

It furthers the University's mission by disseminating knowledge in the pursuit of education, learning and research at the highest international levels of excellence.

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781107650466

© Cambridge University Press 2014

This publication is copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2014

Cover designed by Marianna Berek-Lewis

Typeset by Integra Software Services Pvt. Ltd.

Printed in Singapore by C.O.S Printers Pte Ltd.

A catalogue record for this publication is available from the British Library

A Cataloguing-in-Publication entry is available from the catalogue of the National Library of Australia at www.nla.gov.au

ISBN 978-1-107-65046-6 Paperback

Reproduction and communication for educational purposes

The Australian Copyright Act 1968 (the Act) allows a maximum of one chapter or 10% of the pages of this work, whichever is the greater, to be reproduced and/or communicated by any educational institution for its educational purposes provided that the educational institution (or the body that administers it) has given a remuneration notice to Copyright Agency Limited (CAL) under the Act.

For details of the CAL licence for educational institutions contact:

Copyright Agency Limited
Level 15, 233 Castlereagh Street
Sydney NSW 2000
Telephone: (02) 9394 7600
Facsimile: (02) 9394 7601
E-mail: info@copyright.com.au

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party internet websites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such websites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services

Donna McAuliffe

Frontmatter

More information

To Lesley Chenoweth – my mentor and colleague –
‘wise, brave and human’

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services

Donna McAuliffe

Frontmatter

More information

Contents

Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	1
1 Ethics in professional practice: an interprofessional perspective	6
Introduction	6
Negotiating working together	7
Ethical difference: tensions between the professions	8
What makes a profession?	10
Professional 'sea change'	11
Value clashes across the professions	12
Making the case for interprofessional education	14
Defining the interprofessional space	15
Interprofessional ethics education: providing a clear rationale	17
Ethical literacy: a prerequisite for professional practice	20
Conclusion	22
2 Moral philosophy and ethical theory: setting the foundations	24
Introduction	24
Tracing the history of moral philosophy: influences on ethics education	26
Western philosophies	29
Eastern philosophical traditions	29
Hindu philosophy	30
Ethics in Buddhist philosophy	31
Ethics in Chinese philosophy	32
Middle Eastern philosophy	32
Ethics in Judaism	33
Indigenous worldviews	35
Ethical codes within non-geographical groups	36
Towards a global ethics	37
Exploring ethical theories	38
Ethical pluralism	43

Knowing oneself ethically	44
Why it matters	44
Conclusion	45
3 Ethical activism: exploring human rights and social justice in the interprofessional space	46
Introduction	46
Exploring the history of human rights	48
A matter of definition	48
Three generations of human rights	50
Human rights contested	51
A human rights practice approach	51
Understanding power and the role of advocacy	52
Connecting human rights to social justice	54
Towards a socially just allocation of resources	55
The complexity of resource allocation	56
The politics of sharing	57
Ethical activism	58
Micro forms of activism	60
Activism in practice: examples from the field	62
Interprofessional activism: strength in numbers	63
Conclusion	65
4 Regulation of the professions: codes of ethics and standards of practice	66
Introduction	66
The nature of professions: a recap	67
Professional associations: developing professional culture and identity	69
The development of ethical codes and practice standards	74
Exploring and using professional codes of ethics	76
Regulating professional practice	78
The case of social work: a 'self-regulated' profession	80
Responding to complaints: a framework of natural justice	83
Conclusion	84
5 Ethical decision-making	86
Introduction	86
Exploring personal decision-making styles	88
Structural influences on ethical decision-making: understanding defensive practice	90
Ethical decision-making in the professions: a plethora of models	93
The inclusive model of ethical decision-making: moving to the interprofessional context	96
The process of ethical decision-making in the inclusive model: five stages	100

Ethical decision-making: watching out for traps	103
Conclusion	104
6 Ethical principles in practice	105
Introduction	105
Understanding autonomy: maximising liberty and agency	106
Autonomy: making our own choices	107
Self-determination in practice: questions of capacity	108
Paternalism: moral offensiveness or justifiable action?	109
Informed consent: a legal obligation	112
Informed consent in practice	113
Privacy and confidentiality: defining 'the right to know'	114
Privacy and confidentiality: is there a difference?	115
Privacy in practice	117
Confidentiality and its limits	117
Challenges to upholding privacy and confidentiality	120
Online platforms: the challenge to privacy and confidentiality	121
The 'duty of care' and 'duty to warn': how far should we go?	122
Documentation and client records: collaborative information sharing	125
Conclusion	127
7 Professional integrity and e-professionalism	128
Introduction	128
The personal and professional: are they inseparable?	129
Overlap between the professional and personal: caution required	130
Managing relationships: establishing clear boundaries in practice	131
Dual relationships: harmful or helpful?	134
Personal self-disclosure: to tell or not to tell?	136
What do we tell?	138
Competence: understanding scope of practice	140
The imposition of personal values	142
Spiritual dimensions in practice	144
E-professionalism: professional integrity in online communications	146
Risks on the rise	146
Constructing a professional online persona, or 'managing digital dirt'	149
Engaging in online practice: further considerations	150
Conclusion	152
8 Ethics in the workplace	153
Introduction	153
Different workplaces, different experiences	154
Interprofessional collaboration: identifying possibilities and tensions for teams	155
Contesting territory: clarifying roles	156

Cambridge University Press

978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services

Donna McAuliffe

Frontmatter

More information

Workplace responsibilities: colleagues and managers	157
Competing values: when organisational and professional values collide	161
Blowing the whistle	162
Regulating the professions	164
Impaired practice and fitness to practice: ethical responsibilities of self-care	164
Staying fit to practice	165
Caring for ourselves well	170
Ethics consultation, advice and information	172
Conclusion	173
9 Keeping ethics on the agenda: strategies for future practice	174
Introduction	174
Being ethically literate: speaking the language of ethics	176
Being ethically congruent: knowing oneself ethically	177
Being digitally aware	178
Being collegial: rhetoric or reality?	179
Being wise, brave and human	181
Conclusion	183
References	184
Index	195

Acknowledgements

The process involved in writing any book is long and arduous and involves many people deserving of thanks. This particular interprofessional ethics text was written during a period of study leave supported by Griffith University, and my appreciation is extended to my colleagues for shouldering my teaching and administrative load while I was writing off-campus. Special thanks must go to Dr Lyndal Greenslade, my co-educator in ethics, who willingly read each chapter as the book progressed, gave invaluable feedback and incisive edits, and contributed many ideas about how to make the content more accessible for students. Her knowledge of eastern philosophies was particularly useful. I also extend thanks to Kathryn Beard, who painstakingly formatted the chapters and checked references for accuracy. Her attention to detail is unmatched. I was fortunate to have many people whom I could approach to contribute practitioner stories that are found in each chapter. Of the 24 who generously assisted, some are practitioners and former students who have studied ethics with me in the past; others are colleagues whom I respect and admire within academia and practice. Their contributions bring life to the chapters and inject a taste of reality into what can at times be a dense subject. My ethics colleagues at the AASW, Kym Daly, Sharlene Nipperess, Kerryn Pennell and Fran Hardcastle, have provided inspiration through their commitment to exemplary ethical practice. Thanks also to Isabella Mead and Tara Peck from Cambridge University Press, who have been exceedingly patient as the chapters slowly emerged, and to Katy McDevitt for making what could have been a painful copyediting task quite enjoyable.

Outside work, there is the support system of family and friends that sustains any writer. My sincere thanks to Sallyanne, Jaida and Reuben for keeping my feet on the ground and reminding me that I am 'mum' first and everything else second. Thanks to my bootcamp companions for training me to stay focused and consistent in body, mind and spirit. Finally, thanks to all my students, who are not afraid to ask the hard questions and rightly expect that I will give responses that uphold professional ethical practice, even if most times my response is simply 'it depends'.