CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services
Donna McAuliffe
Table of Contents
More information

Contents

Acknowledgements xi

Introduction 1

1 Ethics in professional practice: an interprofessional perspective 6
Introduction 6
Negotiating working together 7
Ethical difference: tensions between the professions 8
What makes a profession? 10
Professional 'sea change' 11
Value clashes across the professions 12
Making the case for interprofessional education 14
Defining the interprofessional space 15
Interprofessional ethics education: providing a clear rationale 17
Ethical literacy: a prerequisite for professional practice 20
Conclusion 22

2 Moral philosophy and ethical theory: setting the foundations 24
Introduction 24
Tracing the history of moral philosophy: influences on ethics education 26
Western philosophies 29
Eastern philosophical traditions 29
Hindu philosophy 30
Ethics in Buddhist philosophy 31
Ethics in Chinese philosophy 32
Middle Eastern philosophy 32
Ethics in Judaism 33
Indigenous worldviews 35
Ethical codes within non-geographical groups 36
Towards a global ethics 37
Exploring ethical theories 38
Ethical pluralism 43

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services
Donna McAuliffe
Table of Contents
More information

Knowing oneself ethically 44
Why it matters 44
Conclusion 45

3 Ethical activism: exploring human rights and social justice in the interprofessional space 46
Introduction 46
Exploring the history of human rights 48
A matter of definition 48
Three generations of human rights 50
Human rights contested 51
A human rights practice approach 51
Understanding power and the role of advocacy 52
Connecting human rights to social justice 54
Towards a socially just allocation of resources 55
The complexity of resource allocation 56
The politics of sharing 57
Ethical activism 58
Micro forms of activism 60
Activism in practice: examples from the field 62
Interprofessional activism: strength in numbers 63
Conclusion 65

4 Regulation of the professions: codes of ethics and standards of practice 66
Introduction 66
The nature of professions: a recap 67
Professional associations: developing professional culture and identity 69
The development of ethical codes and practice standards 74
Exploring and using professional codes of ethics 76
Regulating professional practice 78
The case of social work: a 'self-regulated' profession 80
Responding to complaints: a framework of natural justice 83
Conclusion 84

5 Ethical decision-making 86
Introduction 86
Exploring personal decision-making styles 88
Structural influences on ethical decision-making: understanding defensive practice 90
Ethical decision-making in the professions: a plethora of models 93
The inclusive model of ethical decision-making: moving to the interprofessional context 96
The process of ethical decision-making in the inclusive model: five stages 100

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services
Donna McAuliffe
Table of Contents
More information

Ethical decision-making: watching out for traps 103
Conclusion 104

6 Ethical principles in practice 105
Introduction 105
Understanding autonomy: maximising liberty and agency 106
Autonomy: making our own choices 107
Self-determination in practice: questions of capacity 108
Paternalism: moral offensiveness or justifiable action? 109
Informed consent: a legal obligation 112
Informed consent in practice 113
Privacy and confidentiality: defining 'the right to know' 114
Privacy and confidentiality: is there a difference? 115
Privacy in practice 117
Confidentiality and its limits 117
Challenges to upholding privacy and confidentiality 120
Online platforms: the challenge to privacy and confidentiality 121
The 'duty of care' and 'duty to warn': how far should we go? 122
Documentation and client records: collaborative information sharing 125
Conclusion 127

7 Professional integrity and e-professionalism 128
Introduction 128
The personal and professional: are they inseparable? 129
Overlap between the professional and personal: caution required 130
Managing relationships: establishing clear boundaries in practice 131
Dual relationships: harmful or helpful? 134
Personal self-disclosure: to tell or not to tell? 136
What do we tell? 138
Competence: understanding scope of practice 140
The imposition of personal values 142
Spiritual dimensions in practice 144
E-professionalism: professional integrity in online communications 146
Risks on the rise 146
Constructing a professional online persona, or 'managing digital dirt' 149
Engaging in online practice: further considerations 150
Conclusion 152

8 Ethics in the workplace 153
Introduction 153
Different workplaces, different experiences 154
Interprofessional collaboration: identifying possibilities and tensions for teams 155
Contesting territory: clarifying roles 156

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org

CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge University Press
978-1-107-65046-6 - Interprofessional Ethics: Collaboration in the social, health and human services
Donna McAuliffe
Table of Contents
More information

Workplace responsibilities: colleagues and managers 157
Competing values: when organisational and professional values collide 161
Blowing the whistle 162
Regulating the professions 164
Impaired practice and fitness to practice: ethical responsibilities of self-care 164
Staying fit to practice 165
Caring for ourselves well 170
Ethics consultation, advice and information 172
Conclusion 173

9 Keeping ethics on the agenda: strategies for future practice 174
Introduction 174
Being ethically literate: speaking the language of ethics 176
Being ethically congruent: knowing oneself ethically 177
Being digitally aware 178
Being collegial: rhetoric or reality? 179
Being wise, brave and human 181
Conclusion 183

References 184
Index 195

© in this web service Cambridge University Press www.cambridge.org