

CONTENTS OF VOL. I

	PAGE
INTRODUCTION	I-12
Object of the present work, 1, 12; value of the different methods applied to the study of Greek religion, 2-9; evidence of the monuments as important as the literary record, 9-11.
CHAPTER I.
THE ANICONIC AGE	13-18
The religion completely anthropomorphic in the Homeric period, but on the whole still aniconic: the tree and the stone the earliest cult-objects, 13-15; meaning of βοῶπις and γλαυκῶπις , 16. REFERENCES, 16-18.
CHAPTER II.
THE ICONIC AGE	19-22
Traces of 'theriomorphism' doubtful and slight, the idol regarded as the shrine of the deity, protests against idolatry in Greek religion, 19-21. REFERENCES, 22.
CHAPTER III.
CRONOS	23-34
Cronos no abstraction, as Welcker supposed, but a real figure of very primitive religion in Greece, 23, 24; theory of his Phoenician origin doubtful, 24, 25; Cronos probably belongs to the pre-Olympian cult-period in Greece, the Titanomachy to be explained as a conflict of older and later cults, 25-27; ? Cronos a pre-Hellenic divinity of vegetation connected with the under-world, the feast of Cronos a harvest-ritual associated with a legend of human sacrifice, 27-30. REFERENCES, 32-34.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01543-1 - The Cults of the Greek States, Volume 1

Lewis Richard Farnell

Table of Contents

More information

xiv

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER IV.

ZEUS 35-101

PAGE

The Zeus-cult the most manifold, importance of cult-epithets for the study of religious ideas, 35; Zeus-cult common to all the Hellenic tribes, 36; extraneous elements in the Cretan cult, the Zeus of Crete akin to Dionysos, 36-38; Elean worship of Sosipolis to be compared, 38; primitive Hellenic cult at Dodona, Zeus associated there with the Earth-mother, 38-40; cults and cult-titles of the oracular god, 40; Arcadian cult on Mount Lycaean, human sacrifice to Zeus Lycaeus, the god of the wolf-clan, 40-42; human sacrifice at Alus and elsewhere, 42; cult-epithets of physical meaning, 42-48; Ὀλύμπιος, Ἀμάριος, Λευκαῖος, 43; his cult scarcely connected at all with sun-worship or star-worship, 44; the god of the rain, wind, and thunder, 44-46; Zeus Καππώτας, 46; omnipotence of Zeus in the physical world, Ζηνο-Ποσειδῶν, Zeus Γεωργός, Zeus Εὐβουλεύς, 46-48; Zeus rarely regarded either in cult or literature as the creator, 48-50; cults on the mountain-tops, Zeus Ὀλύμπιος, 50-52; titles referring to social life and the state, 52-64; Πατρῶος, Γαμήλιος, Γενέθλιος, Ἐρκεῖος, Φράτριος, 52-56; Zeus Πολιεύς, ritual at Athens, explanations of the 'ox-murder,' 56-58, cf. 88; Βουλαῖος, Ἀγοραῖος, 58; Zeus as god of war, 59, 60; Zeus Soter, 60, 61; Ἐλευθέριος, Πανελλήνιος, 61-63; Zeus the god of the city, par excellence: titles of moral significance, 64-75; the cult of Μειλίχιος, ritual and significance, Παλαμναῖος, Ἰκέσιος, Καθάρσιος, 64-67; primitive conception of sin, shedding of kindred blood, 67-69; perjury, Zeus Ὀρκιος, 69, 70; extended conception of sin, Zeus in relation to Dike, 71; Zeus the god of grace, 72, 73; Xenios and Philios, 73-75; doctrine of retribution in Greek religion, 75-77; protests against the current belief, 77, 78; relation of Zeus to Moira, Zeus Μοιραγέτης, 78-82; tendencies towards monotheism in Greek cult very slight, but certain principles of order and unification in the polytheism: the circle of the twelve deities, 83, 84; Zeus as Θεός, 85, 86; little influence of Greek philosophy on cult, 86, 87.

APPENDIX TO CHAPTER IV: The rites of the Diipolia, Robertson Smith's and Frazer's theory discussed, 88-92; other instances of the 'theanthropic' animal in the Zeus-cult, 93, 94; sacrificial animals, the ram (Zeus-Ammon), the bull, 95; Zeus Αἰγοφάγος and the goat-sacrifice, meaning of the aegis, 96-100; higher view of sacrifice, 101.

CHAPTER V.

THE CULT-MONUMENTS OF ZEUS 102-121

Aniconic period, 102, 103; earliest iconic, the triple Zeus, Τριόφθαλμος, 103-105; representations of the thunder-god, 106, 107; of Zeus Κρηταγενής, 108, 109; Zeus of Dodona and Aetnaeus, 109, 110; type of Zeus Polieus doubtful, 111, 112; Zeus Αρειος and Νικηφόρος, 112-114; Zeus Γαμήλιος, doubtful meaning of the veil, 115; Zeus Ἐλευθέριος, Πανελλήνιος, Ὀμαγύριος, 116; monuments of Zeus Μειλίχιος and Φίλιος, 117-119; Μοιραγέτης, 119, 120.

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01543-1 - The Cults of the Greek States, Volume 1

Lewis Richard Farnell

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

xv

CHAPTER VI.

	PAGE
(i) THE IDEAL TYPE OF ZEUS	122-127
Standing and seated types, 122, 123; arrangement of drapery and treatment of the face in the pre-Pheidian period, 124; the youthful Zeus, 125; Zeus on the Bologna relief, on the friezes of the Theseum and the Parthenon, 126, 127.
(ii) THE STATUE OF ZEUS OLYMPIUS	128-139
REFERENCES FOR CHAPTERS IV-VI	140-178

CHAPTER VII.

HERA	179-204
----------------	---------

Prevalent throughout Greece, 179; in the earliest period Hera regarded as the wife of Zeus, and not as a personification of any part of nature, 180, 181; Welcker's theory discussed that Hera was the earth-goddess, Argive and Euboean cults, Hera the mother of Typhoeus, 181-184; prevalence and meaning of the ἱερός γάμος in Greece, not to be interpreted as physical symbolism, but as a consecration of human marriage, with survival of primitive marriage forms, 184-192; ritual at Samos, Argos, Falerii, the feast of Daedala at Plataea, 185-190; Hera Παρθένος, Τελεία, Χήρα, 190-192; very few of the ordinary characteristics of an earth-goddess found in Hera, 192-194; Hera merely the married goddess and the goddess of marriage in Greek cult, 195-198.

APPENDIX A: Discussion of the theory that the earliest cult of Hera did not recognize Zeus and belonged to a period of gynaeocracy, 199, 200.

APPENDIX B: The Corinthian cult of Hera Acraea and the legend of Medea, 200-204.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE CULT-MONUMENTS OF HERA	205-219
--------------------------------------	---------

Aniconic period, type in Samos, 205, 206; Hera Τελεία of Praxiteles, 207; monuments of the ἱερός γάμος, terracotta group from Samos, metope of Selinus, Pompeian wall-painting, relief in Villa Albani, 208-211; Hera Lakinia, 212, 213; Polycleitean statue of the Argive Hera, as illustrating Argive cult, 213-219.

CHAPTER IX.

IDEAL TYPES OF HERA	220-240
-------------------------------	---------

Difficulties in recognizing the representations of Hera, no special and peculiar attribute, 220-223; the Homeric ideal falls short of the ideal of Hera in art, 223, 224; earlier fifth-century works, Farnese head not inspired by the Homeric conception of Hera Βωπίης nor at all connected with Polycleitus' work, 225-230; the work of Pheidias, 231, 232; head of Hera on Argive coin, 232, 233; probably inspired by the work of

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-01543-1 - The Cults of the Greek States, Volume 1

Lewis Richard Farnell

Table of Contents

More information

xvi

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Polycleitus, who created the ideal type, 233-236; fourth-century representations of Hera, Ludovisi head, 237-239; works of the later period, 239, 240.
REFERENCES FOR CHAPTERS VII-IX	241-257

CHAPTER X.

ATHENA	258-320
------------------	---------

The worship aboriginal in Greece, and widely prevalent, 258-260; survival of primitive practices, human sacrifice, washing of the idol, 260-262; but the worship comparatively advanced, physical explanations of Athena erroneous, though she had some connexion with parts of the physical world, Athena 'Ανεμῶτις, Ναρκαία, 262-265; her association with water, meaning of 'Τριτογενεία, 265-270; Athena and Poseidon, rivalry of cults at Athens (Poseidon-Erechtheus) and at Troezen, 270-273; Athene Alea, Hellotis, Amaria, 'Οφθαλμίτις, 273-279; the 'physical theory' of the birth of Athena improbable, 280-283; possible explanations of the story of Metis in Hesiod, 283-286; Gorgon-myth throws no light on Athena's original nature, for she has no original connexion with the Gorgon, 286-288; Athena associated occasionally with the earth-goddess, 'Αγλανρος, Πάνδροςος, 288-290; Athena's sacrificial animals, 290; agricultural festivals, Πλυντήρια, 'Ωσχοφόρια, Προχαριστήρια, Athena Sciras and the Σκιρρά, 291-293; her political character more prominent than her physical, the Panathenaea, 294-298; Athena Polias in the Greek cities, 299; 'Ομολαίς, 'Ογγα, 'Ιτανία, 300, 301; Athena connected with the clan and the family, Athena Φρατρία, Μήτηρ, 302, 303; Βουλαία, 303, 304; Athena connected with the law-courts and a more advanced conception of law, 304, 305; Athena Πρόνοια and Προναία, 306, 307; character and cult-titles of the war-goddess, 308-311; Athena-Nike, 311-313; the goddess of the arts, associated with Hephaestus, 313-316; Athena Hygieia, 316-318; general character of the worship, 318, 319. Note on ritual, Homeric reference to the Panathenaea, 320.

CHAPTER XI.

MONUMENTS OF ATHENA-WORSHIP	321-352
---------------------------------------	---------

The earliest reveal her not as a nature-goddess, but as a goddess of war and the city, 321, 322; monuments associating her with Poseidon and the sea, 322-326; with Dionysos, the deities of vegetation and the underworld, 326-328; no monumental evidence that Athena was ever identified with the moon or thunder-cloud, Athena Sciras, Auge, Alcis, Gorgo, 328-331; Athena Polias, two types, the Athena Polias of Athens probably of the erect and warlike type, 331-337; the same type in vogue in many other states, 337, 338; cult-form of Athena-Nike, 338-342; 'Αρχηγέτις, Σταθμία, 'Αγοραία, Κουροτρόφος, 342-344; representations of the art-goddess, 344-346; of Athena Hygieia, 346-348; monuments illustrating her connexion with the Athenian state, Parthenon frieze, mourning Athena on relief in the Acropolis, relief referring to alliances of Athens and to the civic life, 348-352.

CONTENTS.

xvii

CHAPTER XII.

PAGE

IDEAL TYPES OF ATHENA	353-382
Pre-Pheidian types, 353-355; Portici bronze, 355, 356; earlier Pheidian works, Athena 'Promachus,' 356-360; statue of Athena Parthenos, examination of the literary records and surviving copies, 360-370; Albani Pallas, 370-372; Lemnian Athena, 371-374; distinct type of Athena with Corinthian helmet, 375, 376.
APPENDIX A: Discussion of Dr. Furtwängler's theory concerning the Athena Promachus, 377, 378.
APPENDIX B: Concerning the Lemnian Athena, 378-382.
REFERENCES FOR CHAPTERS X-XII	383-423