

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

PREFACE PAGE xiii.

INTRODUCTION.—Era of the beau idéal in music—
Cimarosa—Paisiello—History of the inter-regnum
between Cimarosa and Rossini, from 1800 to 1812
—Mayer—critical view of his talents and principal productions—Paër—account of his principal works
—Mozart in Italy—anecdote of the method taken to introduce there a taste for his works—remarks on the style of Mozart—difference between the style of Mozart, Cimarosa, and Rossini. page xix.

CHAPTER I.—Rossini's family—born at Pesaro, 1792
—an Italian education—studies under Angelo Tesei—Goes on his musical tour—composes a cantata in 1808, and the operas of Demetrio e Polibio, in 1809; La Cambiale di Matrimonio, 1810; L'E- quivoco Stravaganti, in 1811; L'Inganno Felice, in 1812; Ciro in Babilonia, an oratorio—Rossini
accepts an engagement at Venice—La Scala di Seta
—anecdote of this opera—L'Occasione fa il Ladro;
Il Figlio per Azzardo, all in the same year. page 1

viii.

CONTENTS.

- CHAP. II.—1813. Rossini at Venice—Tancredi, Rossini's first opera seria—anecdote relative to the air "Di tanti palpiti"—Harmony sustains the same part in music, that description does in the romances of Sir W. [Scott—reply of a critic—remarks on Tancredi—Rossini and the prima donna . . . page 13
- CHAP. III.—1813. Rossini at Venice continued—L'Italiana in Algeri—remarks on this opera—the libretto (book of the opera)—political allusions— anecdote of Rossini's indolence . . . page 27
- CHAP. IV.—1813. Rossini at Milan—La Pietra del Paragone (the Touchstone)—an Italian impresario (director)—plot of La Pietra del Paragone —it obtains the name of Sigillara, and why— anecdote of Marcolini and her successful rival—situation of Lombardy, in 1813—account of La Pietra del Paragone concluded—the journalist— anecdote of Marcolini—Rossini steals the idea of his crescendo from the composer Mosta . . . page 39
- CHAP. V.—1813. Rossini revisits Pesaro—remarks on his character—escapes the conscription, in consideration of his talents—the critics of Bologna— Rossini's reply to their observations—Envy—M. Berton of the Institute—his remarks on Rossini— laconic reply to them—Rossini's adventure with the Princess C—, of Bologna . . . page 53
- CHAP. VI.—The impresario and his theatre—mode of getting up an opera—Rossini's reading—his mode of life—his singular hours for composition— anecdote of his quickness in taking a useful hint— his hatred of pedantry— anecdote of Rossini and

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-06379-1 - Memoirs of Rossini: By the Author of the Lives of Haydn and Mozart
Stendhal

Table of Contents

More information

CONTENTS.

ix.

the Cardinal—picture of an Italian green-room—Italian singers—comedy of Sografi on their peculiarities of character — Marchesi — Crivelli — La prima sera (the first evening of a new opera)—
Rossini's mode of travelling—his waggery. page 61

CHAP. VII.—1814. Rossini accepts an engagement at Milan—Aureliano in Palmira—the progress of taste—Harmony versus Melody—period of musical revolutions—date of the eras of the principal Italian composers—a comparison—probability of the union of the Italian and German schools—On musical science—Rossini marks his errors of grammar with a \times —On the present state of the musical grammar
—M. Lavoisier—On musical rules—complicated accompaniments intrude on the province of song—
those of Rossini offend rather by their quantity than quality—Family of the Monbelli—Theatre at Como —Demetrio e Polibio—account of this opera, the first composed by Rossini page 77

CHAP. VIII.—Rossini at Milan continued—Il Turco in Italia—anecdote of the buffo Paccini—Galli the bass—account of Il Turco in Italia concluded—
not successful on the first representation. page 97

CHAP. IX.—1815. Rossini accepts an engagement at Naples—Anecdotes of M. Barbaja—King Ferdinand—Signora Colbran—loses her voice—how received by the Neapolitans—L'Elisabetta, Regina d'Inghilterra—plot of this opera—Signora Colbran's powers in this character—remarks of the Neapolitan critics on Rossini's style—his reply—hack overture—comparison between the Scala and

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-06379-1 - Memoirs of Rossini: By the Author of the Lives of Haydn and Mozart
Stendhal

Table of Contents

More information

x.

CONTENTS.

- San Carlo*—anecdote of a Neapolitan family—
cause of Rossini's errors in style . . . page 103
- CHAP. X.—1816. Rossini at Rome—Torvaldo e Doriska unsuccessful—Il Barbiere di Seviglia— —anecdote of the libretto—Rossini brought into competition with Paisiello—writes to this composer
—his reply—account of the Barbiere di Seviglia—
condemned on the first representation—Rossini's adventures at Rome—Cardinal Golzalvi—anecdote relative to the bust of Cimarosa—concluding observations on the Barbiere page 125
- CHAP. XI.—1816. Rossini returns to Naples—
San-Carlo—Signora Colbran—L'Otello—remarks on this opera—Romance in the last scene—The jettatura at Naples—story of Stradella and Hor-tensia page 141
- CHAP. XII.—1817. Rossini returns to Rome—Ce-nerentola—Rossini proceeds to Milan—La Gazza Ladra—remarks on this opera—the cavatina “Di piacer”—observations on it—Madame Bellocchi—Waltz at the conclusion of the Gazza Ladra—
—anecdote of Rossini and Galli page 159
- CHAP. XIII.—1818. Rossini returns to Naples—
Armida—Adelaide di Borgogna—Adina, ossia il Califfo di Bagdad—Mosè in Egitto—remarks on this opera—absurdities in the manner of representation—Anecdote of Rossini and the poet Tottola—Powerful effect produced by the prayer “Dal tuo stellato soglio”—Comparison between Rossini and Goëthe—Observations page 170

CONTENTS.

xi.

CHAP. XIV.—Of the revolution caused by Rossini in song—on describing the characteristic traits of different singers—strong feeling indispensable in the Fine Arts—Canova—requisites in order to enjoy the true beautiful in music—disappointed composers turn critics—state of singing when Rossini began his career—Rossini and Velluti—Rossini and Colbran—Operas in Rossini's second manner, page 184

CHAP. XV.—1819. Ricciardo e Zoraide—account of this opera—Ermione—remarks on this opera—Odoardo e Cristina—anecdote of this opera—La Donna del Lago—unsuccessful on the first representation, but succeeds on the second—Gasconism of Rossini—Remarks on the Donna del Lago—Rossini composes a mass at Naples . page 204

CHAP. 16.—1820. Rossini goes to Milan—Bianca e Faliero—Decoration of the Scala—Rossini returns to Naples—produces his Maometto Secondo—unsuccessful—goes to Rome for the carnival of 1821, and gives his Matilda di Shabran—returns to Naples in the spring of 1822, and produces his Zelmira—account of this opera—writes a pastorale, entitled La Riconoscenza, performed for his benefit at San-Carlo—goes to Bologna—marries Signora Colbran—remarks—accepts an engagement at Vienna—makes his debüt with Cenerentola—anecdote—opinions of the Germans relative to Rossini—honours shown him at Vienna—whimsical anecdote—Rossini returns to Venice—dispute with the managers—Maometto condemned—an enraged audience—Rossini makes his peace with the public by the

Cambridge University Press

978-1-108-06379-1 - Memoirs of Rossini: By the Author of the Lives of Haydn and Mozart
Stendhal

Table of Contents

More information

xii.

CONTENTS.

new opera of Semiramide—difficulty of forming an opinion of the relative merits of Rossini's operas—the cause of this difficulty—Rossini borrows from himself—decisive failure necessary to teach him humility—Rossini in London—Hint to the manager of the King's Theatre page 219

CHAP. 17.—On the style of Rossini—he does not paint with truth the passion of love—circumstances that made him change his style—errors of the public in forming their opinions—Rossini encroaches upon the province of the singer—remarks on some of the principal great singers—their relative capacities—impossible for a master to invent ornaments equally suited to every voice—a due latitude should be left to the taste and feelings of the singer—Madame Pasta—peculiarities of her voice—hints to Rossini respecting it—The arie di baule (baggage airs)—Rossini's music being composed for particular voices, loses much of its effect in other theatres page 242

CHAP. 18.—Opinions of Rossini relative to contemporary composers—Cimarosa—Cherubini—Mayer—Pavesi—Fioravanti—Guglielmi—observations—Mozart—Orgitano—Paisiello—Rossini's conversation—anecdotes—Rossini's talent at mimicry—anecdote of his facility in composing—his character—concluding observations page 299

A CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF ROSSINI'S WORKS,
&c. page 274