INTRODUCTORY.

| | PAGE |
|--|------|
| The Iron, Bronze, and Stone Ages—Bronze in use before Iron—Persistence of Religious Rites—Use of Stone in Religious Ceremonies—Stone Antiquities not all of the same Age | 1 |

CHAPTER II.

ON THE MANUFACTURE OF STONE IMPLEMENTS IN PREHISTORIC TIMES.

| | |
|---|----|
| Pyrites and Flint used for striking Fire—The Gun-flint Manufacture—Gun-flint Production—Mode of producing Flakes—Australian Method of Making Flakes—Pressigny Nuclei—Rough-hewing Stone Hatchets—Ancient Mining for Flint—Mode of Chipping out Scrapers—Flaking Arrow-heads—Arrow-flakers—Grinding Stone Implements—Method of Sawing Stone—Methods of Boring Stone—Progress in the Art of Working Stone | 13 |
|---|----|

IMPLEMENTS OF THE NEOLITHIC PERIOD.

CHAPTER III.

CELTS.

| | |
|--|----|
| Regarded as Thunderbolts—Belief in their Meteoric Origin—Celt with Gnostic Inscription—Origin and Virtues of Celts—Their Materials and Forms | 50 |
|--|----|

CHAPTER IV.

CHIPPED OR ROUGH-HEWN CELTS.

| | |
|--|----|
| With the Edge formed by Two Facets—Numerous in many Districts—Some carefully Chipped—Some expanding at the Ends—The Common Forms—Discoveries at Cissbury—Many of the same Age as the Polished Celts—Their probable Age | 60 |
|--|----|

CHAPTER V.

CELTS GROUND AT THE EDGE ONLY.

| | |
|--|----|
| One made from a Natural Prism of Flint—The long narrow Form—Expanding at the End—Some intended for use as Adzes—Formed of other Materials than Flint | 78 |
|--|----|

CHAPTER VI.

POLISHED CELTS.

| | |
|---|--|
| A Type common in the Eastern Counties—Some show a Facet at the Edge—Of other Materials than Flint—The thin and highly finished Type—Those | |

CONTENTS.

|--|------|
| with Flat Sides—With the Edge oblique—With a narrow Butt—Not of Flint—So large as to be taken for Clubs—Of rectangular Section—Of oval Section—And with conical Butt—Of a Form found in Greece and India—Roughened at the Butt—Sharp at both Ends—Of abnormal Forms—Used in the Hand without hafting—With Depressions on the Faces—Rarely found with Objects of Bronze—Their Discovery with Objects of later Date—Their range in Time—Celts accompanying Interments—Manner in which Hafted—Found in their original Handles—Compared with Axes of Modern Savages—Mounted in Stag's-horn Sockets—In Wooden Hafts—Compared with Adzes of Modern Savages—Modern Methods of hafting Axes—Probable Uses of Celts | 89 |
| CHAPTER VII. | |
| PICKS, CHISELS, GOUGES, ETC. | |
| Pointed Picks—Small Hand Chisels—Gouges rare in Britain—Bastard Gouges | 154 |
| CHAPTER VIII. | |
| PERFORATED AXES. | |
| Those sharp at both Ends—Expanding at one End—Adze-like in character—Hoe-like in character—Cutting at one End only—Used as Battle-axes—Large and heavy—A large Form common in the North—Some for domestic use—Hammer-like at one End—Boring the last Process—Axe-hammers hollowed on the Faces—Ornamented on the Sides—Constantly found in Barrows—Perforated Axes but little used by Modern Savages | 163 |
| CHAPTER IX. | |
| PERFORATED AND GROOVED HAMMERS. | |
| Perforated Hammers, how hafted—Some of them Weapons, not Tools—Some made from broken Celts—Or from Pebbles with natural holes—Of an ornamental character—Made from Quartzite Pebbles—Those found in Ireland and other Countries—Grooved Hammers used for Mining Purposes—Hard to distinguish from Net-sinkers | 194 |
| CHAPTER X. | |
| HAMMER-STONES, ETC. | |
| With Depressions on the Faces—Made from broken Celts—Some probably used for pounding Food—Ridged at the End—Made of Flint—Saddle-querns—Pestles and Mortars—Shetland and Orkney Forms—Various Forms of Mortars—Hand-mills, or Querns | 213 |
| CHAPTER XI. | |
| GRINDING-STONES AND WHETSTONES. | |
| Used for sharpening Celts—Found in Barrows—Used for pointed Tools | 235 |
| CHAPTER XII. | |
| FLINT FLAKES, CORES, ETC. | |
| Bulb of Percussion—Occasionally very small—Numerous in Ancient Settlements—Localities where abundant—Not confined to the Stone Period—The Roman Tribulum—Flakes, &c., in other parts of the World—Their Uses—Ground at the Edge—Made into Saws—Danish serrated Instruments | 245 |

CHAPTER XIII.

SCRAPERS.

| | PAGE |
|---|------|
| Used in dressing Hides—Horseshoe-shaped—Kite-shaped—Like Oyster-shells in Form—Spoon-shaped—Evidences upon them of wear—Found with Pyrites—The Modern Forms of Strike-a-light—Scrapers used with Pyrites for producing Fire—The Flat and Hollowed Forms | 268 |

CHAPTER XIV.

BORERS, AWLS, OR DRILLS.

| | |
|---|-----|
| Found in different Countries—Some of doubtful determination | 288 |
|---|-----|

CHAPTER XV.

TRIMMED FLAKES, KNIVES, ETC.

|---|-----|
| Trimmed Flakes in different Countries—Some probably Knives—Others possibly Lance-heads—Wrought on both Faces—With one Edge ground blunt—Sharpened by grinding—Some probably Skinning-knives—Of other Materials than Flint—The so-called Picts' Knives—Daggers or Lance-heads—Blunted towards the Butt—Notched at the Sides—Curved Knives—Probably Sickles | 292 |
|---|-----|

CHAPTER XVI.

JAVELIN AND ARROW-HEADS.

| | |
|--|-----|
| When first described in Britain—Superstitions attaching to them—The Virtues ascribed to them—Their various Forms—Javelin-heads—Leaf-shaped Arrow-heads—Pointed at both Ends—Lozenge-shaped—Stemmed—Stemmed and Barbed—Found in Scotland—Localities where found—Triangular Arrow-heads—Single-barbed—The Chisel-edged Type—Found in Barrows—Irish and French Types—Swiss and Italian Types—Scandinavian and Asiatic Types—American Types—How attached to their Shafts | 321 |
|--|-----|

CHAPTER XVII.

FABRICATORS, FLAKING TOOLS, ETC.

| | |
|---|-----|
| Used for working in Flint—Their probable Uses | 367 |
|---|-----|

CHAPTER XVIII.

SLING-STONES AND BALLS.

| | |
|--|-----|
| The early use of Slings—Reasons for fashioning Sling-stones—The use of "Bolas"—Clubs with Stone Balls attached | 372 |
|--|-----|

CHAPTER XIX.

BRACERS AND ARTICLES OF BONE.

| | |
|--|-----|
| Bracers of Stone—The use of Arm-guards—Bone Lance-heads and Pins—Needles of Bone—Hammers and Axes of Stag's-horn | 380 |
|--|-----|

CHAPTER XX.

SPINDLE-WHORLS, DISCS, SLICKSTONES, WEIGHTS, AND CUPS.

| | |
|---|-----|
| Superstitions attaching to Whorls—Use of Perforated Discs—Use of Slick-stones—Stone Cups—Cups turned in a Lathe—The Pole-lathe—Gold and Amber Cups—Vessels of Stone | 390 |

| Buttons—Jet Buttons and Studs—Necklaces—Beads, Pendants, and Bracelets— Rings—Pebbles—Amulets—Conclusions as to the Neolithic Period . . . | 406 |

IMPLEMENTS OF THE PALÆOLITHIC PERIOD.

CHAPTER XXII.

CAVE IMPLEMENTS.

| | |
|---|-----|
| Compared with those from the River Drift—Formation of Caverns—Deposition of Stalagmite—Different Ages of Caverns—Their Chronological Sequence— Age of Le Moustier—Of Langerie Haute—Of Cro-Magnon—Of La Madelaine —Fauna of British Caves—Dean Buckland's Researches—Kent's Cavern, Torquay—Ovate Implements—Alteration in Structure of Flint—Trimmed Flakes—Scrapers—Flakes—Hammers—Bone Harpoons—Pins and Needles —Fauna of Kent's Cavern—Brixham Cave, Torquay—The Wookey Hyæna Den—The Gower Caves—King Arthur's Cave, Whitechurch . . . | 425 |
|---|-----|

CHAPTER XXIII.

IMPLEMENTS OF THE RIVER-DRIFT PERIOD.

|--|-----|
| The Valley of the Ouse—Bedford—The Valley of the Cam—Of the Lark—Bury St. Edmunds and Icklingham—High Lodge, Mildenhall—Valley of the Little Ouse—Thetford—Santon Downham—Bromehill, Weeting—Brandon —Shrub Hill, Felthwell—Hoxne, Suffolk—Gray's Inn Lane, London— Hackney Down—Highbury—Acton and Ealing—Valley of the Gade— Peasemarsch, Godalming—Valley of the Stort—Valley of the Cray—Dart- ford—Valley of the Medway—Reculver—Studhill—Thanington—Canter- bury—Southampton—Hill Head—Isle of Wight—Lake, near Salisbury— Bemerton—Highfield, Fisherton, Milford Hill, Salisbury—Fordingbridge— Wimborne—Bournemouth—Barton—Valley of the Axe—Colyton, Devon . . . | 477 |
|--|-----|

CHAPTER XXIV.

FORMS AND CHARACTERISTICS OF IMPLEMENTS FROM THE RIVER DRIFT.

| | |
|---|-----|
| Flakes—Trimmed Flakes—Pointed Implements—Sharp-rimmed Implements— Differ from those of Neolithic Age—Their Occurrence in other Countries— The Civilization they betoken—Characteristics of Authenticity . . . | 560 |
|---|-----|

CHAPTER XXV.

ANTIQUITY OF THE RIVER DRIFT.

|--|-----|
| Hypothetical Case of River-action—Origin of River-systems—Effects of Floods —Amount of Solid Matter in turbid Water—Nature of Flood-deposits— Transporting Power of Water—Effects of Ground-ice and Shore-ice— Action of Rivers near their Mouths—Solvent Power of Carbonic Acid— Effect of deepening Valleys—Actual Phenomena compared with the Hypo- thetical—The Basin of the Ouse—Of the Little Ouse—Of the Waveney— The Valley of the Thames—Of the Test and Itchen—Origin of the Solent Sea—Ancient Condition of the South Coast—The Ancient River Solent— The Evidence as to Climate—Evidence of the Fauna—The Presence of the Mammoth—Difficulties of the Question—Estimate of Time from Denuda- tion—From subsequent Changes in the Coast-line—Conclusion . . . | 578 |
