CHAPTER I.

OF THE VESTMENTS IN USE IN THE CHURCH UP TO THE REIGN OF EDWARD VI.

The change from woollen to linen garments in the ministrations of the Jewish Church is thus described by Ezekiel:—“And it shall come to pass that when they (the priests, the Levites) enter in... at the gates of the inner court they shall be clothed with linen garments, and no wool shall come upon them whilst they minister in the gates of the inner court and within. They shall have linen bonnets upon their heads, and shall have linen breeches upon their loins; they shall not gird themselves with anything that causeth sweat. And when they go forth into the utter court, even into the utter court to the people, they shall put off their garments wherein they ministered and lay them in the holy chambers, and they shall put on other garments, and they shall not sanctify the people with their garments.” In commenting upon which S. Jerome observes—“Per quas dicimus, non quotidians et quibuslibet pro usu vitae communis polluta vestibus non ingredi debere in sancta sanctorum sed mundi conscientia et mundis vestibus tenere domini sacramenta.”

During the persecutions in the three first centuries of the Christian era, when the rites of the Church and its Holy Mysteries required to be performed in secret, we can expect to meet with few notices of peculiar habits used by the clergy during the divine offices.

In the so-called Clementine Liturgy, perhaps the most ancient of the liturgies of the East, written not later than the early part of the fourth century, (by some considered to have been written much earlier), the following remarkable rubrical direction occurs, after the dismissal of the Catechumens:—“Then the Bishop, after having prayed secretly, and likewise the Priests, and having put on his splendid vestment, and standing at the altar, and signing himself with the sign of the cross upon his forehead, let him say," &c." It was early believed by many that as in the Old Testament there was a Divine command that the priests should in their sacred functions use certain appropriated vestments, so also were sacerdotal vestments appropriated to the Church, whence the sacred office of the Priesthood amongst the faithful might be had in greater esteem. And it can hardly be doubted but that originally the names and fashion of the sacred vestments were the same as, or derived from, those worn in civil life,—with this difference, that they were whiter and of a better quality. Pope Stephen, who died circa A.D. 257, is said to have decreed that priests and deacons should not wear the sacred vestments in common daily use, but in the church alone.⁴

Eusebius of Cæsarea, in his panegyric on the building of the churches, circa A.D. 315, alludes to the tunic reaching to the feet and worn by the priests as a sacred habit; and this, I presume, was that afterwards known as the alb.⁵

The alb indeed as an ecclesiastical vestment is mentioned in the Canons of the supposed Fourth Council of Carthage, said to have been held A.D. 399.

⁴ Εξεχίσμενος αὐν καθ’ ἐπιτόν ὁ ἄρχων ὁ ἅγιος ἀµα τοῖς ἱερεῖσι καὶ λαμπρῶν ἱσθήμα τετυγγυνό ὑπὸ τοὺς πρό τῆς θυσιαστηρίῳ τὸ τρίτσαν τοῦ στειροῦ κατὰ τοῦ μετάπου τῇ χείρι πουξύμενος εἰς τόν τάντα, εἰσάγω.

⁶ Amici Dei et sacerdotes qui sacra tunica talui induti. Thomassini vetus et nova ecclesiae disciplina.
VESTMENTS IN USE

When, as Dupin tells us, Christians began in the reign of Constantine, early in the fourth century, to perform Divine service publicly, and with solemnity, there can hardly be a doubt but that the ancient ecclesiastical ceremonies were then perfected, and new ones added to them, to render the celebration of the Holy Mysteries more venerable to the people.

By the 22nd and 23rd Canons of the Council of Laodicea, held between A.D. 360—370, ministers and readers were forbidden to carry the stole.

S. Jerome, who flourished A.D. 345—420, informs us, in his Commentary on Ezekiel, that the habit worn in religious ministrations was different to that worn in ordinary life. Regio alterum habitum habet in ministerio, alterum in suo vituque communi. He also adverts to the use of white vestments: “If the Priest, the Deacon, and others of Ecclesiastical Order proceed to the administration of the Sacrifice in a white vestment.”

In the Leonine Sacramentary, circa A.D. 488, we have little of rubrical directions. In the Galasian Sacramentary, circa A.D. 492, the vestments are but generally alluded to, “They proceed to the church, and entering the vestry they vest themselves according to custom.”

Procedunt ad ecclesiam et ingregandur in Sacarium et indumenta vestimentis sicut non est.

The Ordo Romanus, compiled as it is said by Gelasius, circa A.D. 497, but altered by S. Gregory the Great,⁴

⁴ Si Episcopus, sive Presbyter Diaconus et reliquis ordo Ecclesiasticus in administratione sacrificariorum candida vesta processerint.—Com. Fel. 1. 1.

⁵ Omnis Pontifex ex hominibus assuntus, pro hominibus constitutur in his quae ad Deum sunt. Quod intelligens S. Gregorius, max ut Pontificatum ininit, de Litteras robustus sacris vite disponendis cogitavit. Ordincontains the earliest enumeration of the vestments I have met with. It notices the pall; the maniple; the alb; the girdle; the stole; the dalmatic; the amice; the chesible; and the cope. The mode of vesting an archbishop by the subdeacons of the district according to their order was as follows:—one vested him with the amice; another with the alb; another with the girdle;
another with the dalmatic; another with the stole;
another with the chesible; then one of the deacons took from the hand of a subdeacon the pall, and put it on the archbishop, and affixed it by a pin to the chesible behind and before, and on the left shoulder.'

According to this Ordo, when deacons were ordained there were given to them stoles and dalmatics; and when priests were ordained they received stoles and chesibles.

The different Ecclesiastical Orders are defined: the Doorkeeper; the Reader; the Exorcist; the Acolyte;
the Subdeacon; the Deacon; the Priest; the Bishop.

It is then, I think, to S. Gregory the Great, at the close of the sixth century, that the development of the vestments of the Church in their entirety may be ascribed.

nem iliae Romanae a Galasio I. quibusdam aut additis, aut immutatis, meliori forma donavit.—S. Gregorii Papa vita l. III. c. iii.

/ Subdeaconi regionaril secundum ordinem suum accipient ad inden-dam pontificem ipsa vestimenta, alias linear, alias amblogiam id est amictum quod dicitur humeral, alias lineam dalmaticam quae dicitur albem, alias singulum, alias dalmaticam, alias orarium, alias planum et sic per ordinem induunt pontificem. Novissime autem cum jussisset Dominus pontificex diaconibus sumit de manu subdeaconi sequenti pallium, et super pontificem induit, et illud cum acu in planeta retro et ante et in humero sinistro confugit.
Albinus Placens Alcuinus, who flourished in the latter part of the eighth century, (he died A.D. 804), in his book, De Divinis Officiis, treats of the episcopal vestments, and is the earliest writer I have met with who assigns to them severally a mystical meaning. He commences with the episcopal sandals, Sandalia episcoporum; after which follows the Superhumerale, that is the amice, which he states was to be made of fine linen, Quod fit ex lino purissimo; then follows the episcopal alb, Postea sequitur puderis, qua vulgo alba dicitur. . . . Tunica usque ad talum; after that the girdle, Deinde sequitur zona, qua cingulum dicitur, qua restringitur puderis ne laxe per pedes diffusat; then follows the stole, Sequitur orarum. Orarium id est stola; then the dalmatic, Dalmatica quae sequitur, ob hoc dicitur, quod in Dalmaticas sit reperta. Usus autem Dalmaticorum a B Silvestro Papa institutus est; then the maniple, Mappula quae in sinistra parte gestatur; then the chesible, Casula quae super omnia indumenta pontiiur; lastly, the Archiepiscopal pall, Pallium Archiepiscoporum super omnia indumenta est, ut laminis in fronte pontificis. I omit the mystical significations he adduces to each of the above. Such were the vestments worn by an archbishop preparatory to his celebration of the Eucharistic Rite.

Amalarius, Archbishop of Treves, who flourished in the early part of the ninth century, (he died A.D. 837), wrote four books on the offices of the Church, De Eclesiasticis Officiis. In the second book he treats of the vestments, assigning to them mystical significations. He first notices the amice as worn about the neck. Amicitia est primum vestimentum nostrum quo collum un-diique cingimus; next the alb, Postea camisiam induimus quam Albam vocamus,—he describes it as a long linen tunic fitting tight to the body, with close-fitting sleeves, Ex tino tunic, est poderis id est talaris. Haec adheret corpori, et ita arcta est, et strictis manibus, ut nulla omnino in veste sit ruga, et usque ad crura descendat; then, though out of its proper course, he takes the chasuble, Casulam, quaes et generale indumentum sacrorum ducum ante caderas vestes quae sequuntur, praepoetimus; then the stole; after which the dalmatic; then the tunic, which the priest wore over the alb, De tunica quam sacerdos induit super camisiam; then the pall, De pallio quo utuntur Archiepiscopi; lastly, the maniple, which he describes as carried in the left hand, De sudario. In manu sinistra portatur. He also treats De vestimento cantorum. Though he mentions the vestments severally he does not so consecutively in order as the priest was vested.

Rabanus Maurus, Bishop of Mentz, who flourished in the early half of the ninth century, (he died A.D. 850), wrote three books, De Institutione Clericorum. In the first book he treats of the sacerdotal vestments, assigning to each a mystical meaning. He commences with the Amice. De superchamerali. Primum ergo eorum indumentum est Ephod Bad, quod interpretatur superchamerali lineum. Secondly, the Alb. De podere id est tunica linea. Secundum est linea tunica quae Grecce ποδόσκορ, Latine talaris dicitur, eo quod ad talos usque descendat. Thirdly, the Girdle. Tertium vestimentum est cingulum sive balteum, quo utuntur, ne tunica ipsa defluet, et gressum impediat. Fourthly, the Maniple or Fanon. De phanone, Quadrum vero mappula, sive manile sacerdotis indumentum est, quod vulgo phænom vocant, quod ob hoc eorum tune manibus tenetur. Fithily, the Stole. De orario, id est stola. Quinimum quoque est quod orarium dictur, licet hoc quidem stolam vocent. Sixthly, the Dalmatic. Sextum namque est, quod Dalmatica Greciae provincia, in qua primum texta est, noncupatur. Hæc vestis in modum est crucis facta, et passionis Domini indicium est. Habet quoque et purpureos traminet ipsa tunica, a summo usque ad ima, ante ac retro descendens, necnon et per utramque manicam. Seventhly, the Chesible. Septimum sacerdotale indumentum est, quod casulam vocant, dicta est autem per diminutiosem a casa, eo quo totum hominem tegat, quasi minor casa, hanc Greci planetam nominant. Hæc supremum omnium indumentorum est, et oterba omnia numeris per omum muniment tegit et servat. Then succeeds a notice of the Sandals, and of the Archbishoppal Pall.
8

VESTMENTS IN USE

Walfredus Strabo, who flourished about the middle of the ninth century, wrote De exordiis et incrementis verum ecclesiasticorum liber unus. He treats, however, very concisely of the vestments, which he enumerates in the order following:—dalmatica, alba, mappa, orarium, cingulum, sandalia, casula, et pallium.

Ivo, Bishop of Chatres, who flourished in the latter part of the eleventh and early part of the twelfth centuries, (he died A.D. 1115), in his third sermon or discourse treats upon the mystical significations of the sacerdotal habits. De significacionibus indumentorum sacerdotalium.

Hugh of St. Victor, who died A.D. 1142, also treats of the vestments of the church, both in the second book of his work De Sacramentis, as also in his work Speculum de Mysteris Ecclesiæ; giving to each its mystical signification.

But it is to Durandus, Bishop of Mende, who flourished in the thirteenth century, (he died A.D. 1296), that we are indebted for a work better known than any of the preceding works, his Rationale of Divine Offices. Rationale Divinorum Officiorum Guiliæmi Minacensis Ecclesie Episcopi. The first published edition of this work is one of the earliest printed books of the fifteenth century, and several editions of it have since been published. As a ritualistic work it is perhaps the most complete and valuable we possess, written on that subject in the Middle Ages. In the third book he treats of the vestments with their mystical significations. An archbishop, Pontifex, about to celebrate, put off his ordinary garments and put on those which were clean and sacred. And first he put on his Sandals. 2nd, the Amice. 3rd, the Alb, reaching to the ankles. 4th, the Girdle. 5th, the Stole. 6th, the Tunic. 7th, the Dalmatic. 8th, the Gloves. 9th, the Ring. 10th, the Chesible. 11th, the Maniple. 12th, the Pall. 13th, the Mitre. 14th, the Pastoral stuff, Baculum. These the writer likens to the spiritual armour spoken of by the Apostle. He tells us that six of the above were common alike to priests and bishops, namely, the Amice, Alb, Girdle, Stole, the Maniple and Chesible; and that nine were specially worn by those of Episcopal rank, namely, Stockings, Sandals, the episcopal Girdle, sucutactorium, the Tunic, Dalmatic, Gloves, the Mitre, Ring, and Pastoral Staff.

Then he treats of the six sacerdotal vestments severally, and at length with regard to their mystical significations, and first of the Amice, worn about the neck and over the shoulders, called also the super-humeralis—this was fastened in front of the breast by two bands or cords. After the amice came the Alb, a linen garment or tunic fitting close to the body, reaching to the ankles, and girt about the body with a Girdle, sona seu cingulum. Over the alb was worn the Stole, orarium sive stola, hanging down from the neck, right and left, crossed in front of the body, and fastened beneath the girdle. This was worn in a different fashion by a deacon to what it was by a priest. Next came the Maniple, anciently carried in the left hand, but subsequently worn over the left wrist—this was also called the fanon, and sudarium. Over all these the Chasuble was worn, cæula seu planeta—this was the principal vestment, and without this no celebration could take place.

Besides the six vestments above described as common to priests and bishops, nine others were specially appropriated to bishops and archbishops. These were the stockings and sandals, caliga et sandalia, the episcopal sash, succinctorium, anciently worn by all bishops in addition to the girdle, now only worn by the Pope.
The tunic worn over the stole, the dalmatic worn over the tunic, the episcopal gloves, the mitre with its infulse, the episcopal ring, and the pastoral staff. In addition to these, archbishops were entitled to wear the pall.
Durandus also tells us that the colours of the vestments were four: white, red, black, and green. Besides the above we have other articles of ecclesiastical apparel:
the surplice, the cope, the tippet, the hood. Of these subsequent notice will be taken.