Abelson, Robert, 117–119, 133–134 abortion, attitude formation concerning, 94–96 accuracy motivation, 168–171 Achen, Christopher H., 217–218n.1 adaptive rationality, pathways to, 24–26 affect. See also need for affect decision making and, 19–23 implicit partisan predictions, 195
polarization and, 143–150 rhetoric and, 145–150
Affordable Care Act, 90–94, 103–106, 135–137 algorithmic processes, dual-process framework and, 25–26 ambivalence, in partisan attachment, 44
American National Election Survey, 35, 124–130, 215n.2
American Panel Survey, 215n.2
The American Voter (Campbell), 7–8, 41–42, 136–137 associative networks
need for affect and, 74–85
reflection and, 29–30
attitude formation
need for affect and, 50–53
policy preferences and, 90–94
Barkley, Alben William, 113–115
Bartels, Larry M., 119–121, 217–218n.1
Bayesian linear regression, need for affect and cognition and, 78–82, 186–188
Bayesian ordinal factor analysis, data on individual differences and, 57–58, 78–82, 186–188
Bayes’ Theorem
facts and, 115–119
rational choice model and, 115–119
reflection and, 119–121
Bechara experiment, 20 behavior, Lewin’s model, 11–12 behavioral economics, risky choices and, 82–85 belief perseverance experiment, 121–124, 181 unemployment rate and presidential evaluation, 130 belief systems
facts and, 115–119
policy preferences and absence of, 111–112 “Big Five” personality traits affective polarization and, 143–146
need for affect and cognition and, 63–74 question wording for, 189–190 bipartisan rhetoric treatment, 147–150 bivariate correlations convergent validity analysis and, 74–85
need for affect and cognition and, 64–68 need for affect and emotional response, 71 black box model of brain function, 19–23
Box, George, 25–26
Index

brain development
black box model of, 19–23 systems model of, 21–23
Bullock, John, 103–106, 121–124
Bush, George W., 96, 117–119
Butler, Daniel, 128–130, 213n.2

Cacioppo, John, 27–29, 46–49
Camerer, Colin, 214n.3
Campaign Study of 2012, 131–133, 140–143, 177–178
Campbell, Angus, 105–110, 136–137
Cat’s Cradle (Vonnegut), 28
Center for the Study of Emotion and Attention (CSEA), 70–74
Clinton, Bill, 90–94, 103–106
Clinton, Hillary, 90–94, 163–165
Cobb, Michael, 121–124
cognition. See also need for cognition decision making and, 19–23
cognitive reflection
motivated reasoning and, 110–112
partisan attachment and, 78–82
Cohen, Arthur, 27–29, 46–49 congressional actions, reflection in political evaluation of, 119–121 conscious thought, decision making and, 19–23 Constitution of the United States partisan attachments and, 6–7 state’s rights and, 98–103, 213n.1 contextual cues, political preferences and, 8–9 covariance validity, need for affect and cognition and, 54, 74–85 Converse, Philip E., 40–41
Cooperative Campaign Analysis Project, 131–133, 177–178 correlation coefficients, need for affect and cognition and, 61–74 counterattitudinal arguments, party cues and, 100 Cronbach’s α, data on individual differences and, 96
Cultural Cognition theory, 154–155 decision theory
individual differences in reflection and, 15–17 intuition and, 4–5
overview of, 18–19
partisan attachments and, 90–94
reflection and, 119–121
social science models of, 19–23 deliberative institutions, motivated reasoning and role of, 171–173 democracy, pessimism concerning, 1–2 democratic accountability electoral outcomes and public opinion and, 9–10 limits of reflection and, 163–165 model of, 88–89
motivated reasoning and, 3–4
partisan attachments and, 6–10
policy preferences and, 90–94
principal-agent problem and, 2–3 realistic approach to, 10–12
reflection and, 12–15, 133–134, 155–162 retrospective model of, 115–119 self-governance and, 132–135 voter behavior and, 113–115 demographic variables, need for cognition and affect and, 69–70 descriptive theory of mind, behavioral economics and, 82–85 directional motivation, 168–171 discriminant validity, need for affect and cognition and, 54, 63–74 distal beliefs, 117–119, 133–134 Downs, Anthony, 7–8, 41–42, 136–137 dual-process framework, 12–15, 214–215n.6
criticism of, 23
individual differences in reflection and, 31–35
intuitionist model of partisan attachment and, 37–39 need for cognition in, 27–29, 49 partisan identity and, 15–17 pathways to rationality and, 24–26 psychological motivations and, 31–35 systems-based processing and, 21–23, 214–215n.5
economic performance electoral outcomes and, 9–10 presidential evaluations and, 124–130 economic rationality theory, risky choices and, 82–85
Elaboration Likelihood Model (ELM), 46–49
Index

electoral democracy
- economic performance and, 9–10
- partisan attachments and, 107–110
- principal-agent problem and, 2–3
- voting behavior and, 156–162
- electrodermal activity (EDA) indicator, 70–74, 178

Emotional Processing Study components of, 178
- need for affect and cognition and, 70–74
- emotions
  - consciousness and, 21–23
  - need for affect and, 30–31
  - need for cognition and, 71
  - partisan attachment and, 44
  - psychological motivations and, 71
  - endogenous preferences, voting behavior and, 115
- errors-in-variables problem, data on individual differences and, 57–58
- Esse, Victoria, 50
- Evans, Jonathan, 21–23
- evolutionary psychology, brain development in, 21–23
- facts, beliefs and, 115–119
- federalism, party cues on, 98–103
- Ferejohn, John, 113–115, 133–134
- Franklin, Benjamin, 1–2, 213n.1

Gaines, Brian, 117–119
- Gerger, Alan, 113–119
- Gigerenzer, Gerd, 214–215n.5
- Governor Evaluation Study, 122–124, 177–178, 187–188
- Green, Donald, 115–119
- Greenwald, Anthony, 75–82
- Groenendyk, Eric, 42–43, 107
- group references, partisan attachments and, 35

- health care reform
  - partisan attachments and, 90–94, 103–106
  - polarized polity and, 135–137
- Health Security Act, 90–94
- heuristics
  - intuitionist model of partisan attachment and, 37–39
  - partisan attachment and, 8–9
  - policy preferences, 90–94
- high salience issues, party cue experiments on, 103–106, 184–185
- Hobbs, Thomas, 213n.2
- Hovland, Carl, 96–97
- Hume, David, 214n.1
- hyper-partisanship, polarization and, 147–150
- identity, partisan attachment and, 170–171
- Implicit Attitude Test (IAT), partisan attachment and, 75–82
- incumbent evaluations, economic conditions and, 127–130, 156–162, 217–218n.1, 218–219n.5
- individual differences in reflection
  - emotional arousal ans, 70–74
  - need for cognition and affect and, 59–62
  - patterns in, 15–17, 27–35, 119–123
  - political reasoning and, 11–12, 54–63
  - voting behavior and, 130–133
- individual mandate in health care, 90–94
- information-processing pathways
  - multi model information-processing framework, 41–42
- need for affect and, 50–53
- opinion formation and, 19–23
- reflection and, 12–15
- International Affective Picture System (IAPS) database, 70–74
- intuition
  - associative networks and, 29–30
  - decision making and, 4–5
  - pathways to rationality and, 24–26
- Intuitionist Model of Political Reasoning attitude formation and, 94–96
- components of, 40–45, 152–155
- democratic accountability and reflection in, 155–162
- economic conditions and political evaluations and, 127–130
- future research issues for, 168–174
- limits of reflection and, 163–165
- partisan attachments and, 35–40, 107–110
Index

Intuitionist Model of Political Reasoning (cont.)
polarization and, 139–145
psychological foundations and, 168–171
reflection and, 119–121, 134 scope and limitations of, 165–168
voting behavior and, 155–162
IQ tests, dual-process framework and, 25–26
Iraq War, 117–119
Issue Polarization Study, 131–133, 140–143, 179 issue salience boundary conditions, partisan attachments and, 94–96 Iyengar, Shanto, 139–145

John Q. Public model of motivated reasoning, 11, 154–155 information processing and, 42–43 joint distribution, needs for affect and cognition, 58–62

Kahan, Dan M., 154–155
Kahneman, Daniel, 24–25, 78–85, 90–94
Kramer, Gerald H., 124–130
Kunda, Ziva, 34, 168–171

Lakatos, Imre, 154–155
Lau, Richard, 35, 41–42
Lavine, Howard, 44
Lenz, Gabriel, 111–112
Levendusky, Matt, 138–139
Lewin, Kurt, 11–12
low salience issues, party cues on, 98–103, 182–183

Maio, Gregory, 50
Markov chain Monte Carlo algorithms, data on individual differences and, 57–58, 186–188
Maslow, Abraham, 27–29
McGee, Devvie, 75–82
McGraw, Kathleen M., 122–124
Mechanical Turk (MTurk), 131–133, 177–178
Medicaid program, 103–106
Medicare, 135–137

Mencken, H. L., 1
Michigan model of partisanship, 137–139, 139–145 Mooney, Chris, 85–86
motivated reasoning. See also psychological motivations Intuitionist Model and, 154–155 party politics and, 5–4 political decision making and, 5–6 political evaluation and, 122–124 psychological foundations for, 168–171
realistic approach to, 10–12
multi model information-processing, 41–42 need for affect affective polarization and, 143–146

bivariate correlations in, 64–68
cognitive reflection task and, 80–81 construct validity of, 54 cognitive refection task, 80–81
data on individual differences in, 54–63
discriminant validity of, 54, 63–74
Emotional Processing Study and, 70–74 emotional response and, 71
image-level correlations, 191–193
Implicit Partisan Affective Attachment and, 78–79 individual differences in, 31–35, 49–53
motivated reasoning. See also psychological motivations Intuitionist Model and, 154–155
measurement and model estimation strategy, 186–188
partisan attachment and, 78, 107–110
reflection and, 30–31, 53–85, 114
reflective and nonreflective need, 59–62
risk optimization and, 82–85
voting behavior and, 130–133

need for cognition
affective polarization and, 143–146
bivariate correlations in, 64–68
cognitive reflection task and, 80–81
discriminant validity of, 54
data on individual differences in, 54–63
realistic approach to, 10–12
emotional response and, 71
image-level correlations, 191–193
Index

Implicit Partisan Affective Attachment and, 78–79
individual differences in, 31–35, 46–49
intuitionist model of partisan attachment and, 38–40
measurement and model estimation strategy, 186–188
partisan attachment and, 78–82, 107–110
reflection and, 30–31, 53–85, 134
reflective and nonreflective need, 59–62 research on, 27–29
risk optimization and, 82–85
voting behavior and, 130–133 need for cognitive closure, 53 need to evaluate, need for affect and, 50–53 negativity, partisan attachments and, 107–110 neuroscience, decision making models in, 19–23 normative values
limits of reflection and, 163–165
policy preferences and, 111–112
Nyhan, Berndan, 121–124 observational studies, policy preferences and, 96–97, 217n.4 openness, need for cognition and, 68 opinion
events as influence on, 9–10 health care reform and, 90–94
information processing and, 19–23 unemployment rate and shifts in, 128–130 optimal cut point analysis, 217–218n.3 partisan attachments
affective polarization and, 143–146
associative networks and, 29–30
Bayes’ theorem and, 115–119 belief perseverance and, 121–124 convergent validity analysis of, 74–85 democratic accountability and, 6–10
economic conditions and, 124–130
events as influence on, 9–10 implicit affect test predictions, 195 Implicit Attitude Test of, 75–82 incivility and, 135–137
increase in, 137–139
Intuitionist Model of Political Reasoning and, 35–40, 107–110, 132–133
Iraq war facts and, 117–119
motivated reasoning and, 3–4
need for cognition and affect and, 63–74, 107–110
polarization and, 137–139
policy preferences and, 90–94
rational choice model and, 37–39, 105–110 reflection and rationality and, 12–15, 85–86, 119–121 social psychology and, 105–110 variation in, 105–110
voting behavior and, 130–133, 156–162
Party Cues Study
affective polarization and, 143–146
cognitive reflection task and, 80–81 experiments in, 96–105
high salience issues, 103–106, 184–185
low salience issues, 98–103, 182–183 methodology, 178–179
need for affect and cognition and, 58–62 nonpartisan cues in, 217n.2
partisan attachments and, 85–86
polarization and, 147–150 policy preferences in, 97, 110–112 random assignment in, 217n.1 risky choices and, 82–85 voting behavior in, 159–162 persuasion
Elaboration Likelihood Model of, 46–49
partisan attachments and, 90–94
Petty, John, 27–29, 46–49
polarization
affective roots of, 137–139, 143–146
increase in, 135–137
issue polarization, 140–143
reflection and, 139–145, 150–151 rhetoric experiments, 145–150, 181 polarized rhetoric treatment, 147–150
policy preferences
high salience issues, 103–106, 184–185
issue polarization, 131–133, 140–143
low salience issues, 98–103, 182–183
partisan attachment and, 7–8, 90–94 party cue experiments and, 96–105 polarization over, 118–139
reflection and, 94–96, 119–121
Index

political evaluation, reflection and, 119–121 political parties, history of, 6–7 political psychology attitudes vs. preferences in, 110–112 belief perseverance experiment and, 121–124 “Big Five” personality traits and, 63–74 emotional arousal and, 70–74
motivated reasoning and, 11–12, 168–171
need for cognition and, 46–49
Positive and Negative Affect Schedule, 148–150 posterior means distribution Bayesian analysis and, 115–119
need for affect and cognition and, 58–62 presidential evaluations, economic conditions and, 124–130, 206 principal-agent problem, electoral democracy and, 2–3 proattitudinal arguments, party cues and, 100 probability, rational choice model and, 115–119 psychological motivations conservatism and, 85–86 discriminant validity analysis and, 69–70 dual-process framework and, 31–35 Emotional Processing Study and, 70–74 emotional responses and, 71
individual differences in, 15–17, 27–35, 213–214
need for cognition and affect and, 34–35 racial attitudes, Implicit Attitude Test of, 75–82 rational choice model
Bayes’ Theorem and, 115–119
decision making and, 19–23
multi model information-processing framework, 47–42
partisan attachment and, 37–39, 105–110
risk choices and, 82–85
voting behavior and, 156–162
rationality group attachment and, 35
John Q. Public model of motivated reasoning and, 42–43 pathways to, 24–26
principal-agent problem and, 2–3
reflection and, 12–15, 133–134
varying degrees of, 23–35
Reagan, Ronald, 96
Receive-Accept-Sample (RAS) model of attitude formation, 11, 40–41, 154–155, 170 Redlawsk, David P., 35, 41–42 reflection attitude formation and, 94–96
democratic accountability and, 12–15, 133–134, 155–162
individual differences in, 15–17, 27–35 interactionist model of, 165–168 issue polarization and, 131–133, 140–143 limits of, 165–168
measurement of, 173–174 minimizing importance of, 171–173
need for affect and, 53–85
need for cognition and, 27–29, 53–83
partisan attachments and, 12–15, 85–86, 107–110
polarization and, 139–145, 150–151
political decision making and, 5–6, 119–121 reasonableness and, 12–15, 117–119, 133–134 risk choice management and, 82–85 strategies for motivation of, 171–173 System 1/System 2 information processing and, 32–33 reflective processes, dual-process framework and, 25–26 Reifer, Jason, 121–124
The Republican Brain (Mooney), 85–86 retrospective voters
democratic accountability and, 115–119
policy preferences and, 113–115 rhetoric, polarization and, 145–150, 181 risk choices, reflection and, 82–85
Romney, Mitt, 94–96
Rumsfeld, Donald, 20, 213n.4
scale reliability, data on individual differences and, 56 Schattschneider, E. E., 6–7
Schwartz, Jordan, 75–82
Shapiro, Ian, 172
shirking by voters, models of, 136–162, 218–219nn.1–5 single-process mind model, 23, 214n.2 social psychology decision making in, 19–23
partisan attachment and, 105–110
voting behavior and, 41–42
split-brain research, 23, 2140.3 spreading activation, associative networks and, 29–30 Stanovich, Keith, 21–23, 25–26, 49, 2140.4 state’s rights, party cues on, 98–103 statistical modeling of party cues, 101–103
summary of, 180
tables used for, 196–204 Stotland, Ezra, 27–29, 46–49 straight-ticket voting, need for affect and cognition and, 131–133 Systems 1 and 2 processing models algorithmic and reflective processes, 25–26
associative networks and, 29–30 brain development and, 21–23, 2140.4, 2150.2, 2150.5, 2150.6
high salience issues, 103–106 influences on reflection, 31–35
Intuitionist Model of Political Reasoning and, 40–45, 152–155 measurement of reflection in, 173–174
motivated reasoning and, 168–171
need for cognition and, 27–29
partisan attachment and, 37–39
pathways to rationality and, 24–26
reflection and, 32–33
testable beliefs, 117–119, 133–134
The American Panel Survey (TAPS), 127–130 thinking, democratic accountability and, 4–5 Trump, Donald, 163–165
Tversky, Amos, 78–82, 90–94, ?? unemployment rate
partisan attachments and, 117–119, 124–130, 206 presidential evaluation and, 128–130, 145–150, 217–218n.8
Vonnegut, Kurt, 28
voting behavior
democratic accountability and, 113–115, 217–218n.1
economic conditions and, 124–130
Intuitionist Model and, 35, 156–162
multi model information-processing framework, 41–42 party line voting, 130–133 party preferences and, 7–8 reflection and rationality and, 12–15, 119–121, 218–219n.1
Washington, George, 6–9 Watterson, Bill, 5–6
wedge issues, partisan attachment and, 111–112
West, Richard F., 49
Wilson, Joe, 135–137, 145–150
Wolfe, Donald, 27–29, 46–49
YouGov, 131–133, 177–178
Zaller, John, 40–41, 154–155, 170