

The Political Writings of Alexander Hamilton

Few of America's founders influenced its political system more than Alexander Hamilton. He played a leading role in writing and ratifying the Constitution, was de facto leader of one of America's first two political parties, and was influential in interpreting the scope of the national government's constitutional powers. This comprehensive collection provides Hamilton's most enduringly important political writings, covering his entire public career, from 1775 to his death in 1804. Readers are introduced to Hamilton – in his own words – as defender of the American cause, as an early proponent of a stronger national government, as a founder and protector of the American Constitution, as the nation's first secretary of the treasury, as President George Washington's trusted foreign policy advisor, and as a leader of the Federalist Party. Presented in a convenient two-volume set, this book provides a unique insight into the political ideas of one of America's leading founders; a must-have reference source.

CARSON HOLLOWAY is Professor of Political Science at the University of Nebraska at Omaha. His articles have appeared in The Review of Politics, Interpretation: A Journal of Political Philosophy, Perspectives on Political Science, First Things, and Public Discourse. He is the author of Hamilton versus Jefferson in the Washington Administration: Completing the Founding or Betraying the Founding? (Cambridge University Press, 2015).

BRADFORD P. WILSON is Executive Director of the James Madison Program in American Ideals and Institutions, Lecturer in Politics, and Faculty Fellow of Butler College at Princeton University. He is the author/editor of five books on American political and constitutional thought. His writings have appeared in the Review of Metaphysics, American Political Science Review, and Academic Questions, and as chapters in edited volumes.

Acknowledgments

We wish to express our gratitude to Cambridge University Press for publishing this work. We must particularly thank our editor, Robert Dreesen, his assistant, Brianda Reyes, and content manager, Claire Sissen, for guiding us through the process of preparing these volumes for publication. Our thanks are also due to those scholars who acted as reviewers for the project and who offered us their support and helpful suggestions for improvement. In addition, we wish to thank Hamilton scholars Ron Chernow and Joanne Freeman for encouraging us to undertake this project when we were first considering it, and our friends Darren Staloff and Matthew Franck for being an ongoing source of insight into Hamilton, his time, and the issues he confronted. Finally, we gratefully acknowledge the efforts of earlier editors and compilers of Hamilton's writings, whose work has inspired and helped to guide our own.

Carson Holloway would like to thank the Heritage Foundation for its support for his work. During the 2014–2015 academic year he held a fellowship in American political thought at Heritage's B. Kenneth Simon Center for Principles and Politics. This fellowship provided him with much needed time to work on this project. He also thanks the Center's director, David Azerrad, and its associate director, Arthur Milikh, for their intellectual companionship and friendship. He also wishes to express his gratitude to his colleagues at the University of Nebraska at Omaha for their friendship and encouragement, and to graduate student Bryan Brooks, who provided valuable assistance in compiling the materials for this work. Finally, he is grateful to his wife, Shari, and his daughters – Maria, Anna, Elizabeth, Catherine, Jane, and Emily – for their love and support.

Bradford Wilson wishes to thank Robert P. George for his friendship and learned advice as this project matured, and the James Madison Program in American Ideals and Institutions at Princeton University for providing such an hospitable home for scholarly work on the political thought of American statesmen. He thanks Duanyi Wang for her assistance with our preparation of the manuscript. He also wishes to express his love and gratitude for his understanding and ever supportive family – Elle, Lauren, Darren, Julia, Nathan, and his beloved grandchildren.
