

REGULATORY INTEGRATION ACROSS BORDERS

This book deals with a key feature of globalisation: the rise of regulation beyond the state. It examines the emergence of transnational regulatory cooperation between public and private actors and pursues an inquiry that is at once legal, empirical and theoretical. It asks why a private actor and an international organisation would regulate cooperatively and what this tells us about the material meaning of concepts such as ‘expertise,’ ‘authority’ and ‘legitimacy’ in specific domains of global governance. Additionally, the book addresses the structures and patterns in which cooperation evolves and how this affects the broader global order. It does so through an investigation of two public–private cooperative agreements: one between the International Standards Organization, the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, the Global Compact and the International Labor Organization; and one between the International Olympic Committee and the United Nations Environment Programme.

REBECCA SCHMIDT is Assistant Professor at Dublin City University. She obtained a PhD from the European University Institute and an LLM in International and Legal Studies from New York University. Before starting her current position, she held a two-year postdoctoral fellowship at University College Dublin and a one-year postdoctoral fellowship within the Transnational Business Governance Interactions Project (at Osgoode Hall Law School and at the Baldy Center at SUNY Buffalo). She was also a visiting fellow with the GlobalTrust Project at Tel Aviv University.

CAMBRIDGE STUDIES IN TRANSNATIONAL LAW

Transnational Law establishes itself as a unique area of legal research, practice, and education, domestically and internationally. As a label for the norms governing border-crossing commercial exchange, it has long been considered as central to a globalizing legal profession. Today, as a conceptual framework that captures the interaction of law with a host of human sciences, from anthropology to geography, from sociology to political science, Transnational Law illustrates the inescapable openness of law and legal norms. Implicated in fundamental societal transformations, law is both driver and driven. Transnational Law as such functions as a methodological perspective through which to identify and conceptualize the emergence, contestation and diffusion of law through newly emerging constellations of actors, norms and processes. Established in 2017, the series will publish monographs in a range of doctrinal areas as well as on the intersection between law, legal theory and the humanities.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book is a revised and updated version of my PhD thesis which I defended in Spring 2015 at the European University Institute (EUI) in Florence. I am indebted to my supervisor, Nehal Bhuta, for our discussions, his valuable input and his support. I also would like to thank my defense committee members, Nico Krisch, Hans-Wolfgang Micklitz and Neil Walker, for agreeing to review and comment on my thesis and to sit on my defense panel. I wish to thank Fabrizio Cafaggi who first pointed to the possibility of writing a PhD at the EUI while I was still a master's student at New York University, and who provided input and inspiration during my first years in Florence. My work at the EUI was funded by the German Academic Exchange Service (DAAD) and the EUI Department of Law, whom I would like to thank for the financial support. A more inspiring environment for research of this type than Fiesole is hardly imaginable. Yet, more important than the beautiful Tuscan landscape were the many hard-working people at the Institute who facilitated my research in every way possible. My special thanks go to them.

I would also like to thank my colleagues at the GlobalTrust Project at Tel Aviv University, where I spent four months in the aftermath of my PhD defense. Further thanks go to the Baldy Center at the State University of New York Buffalo Law School and Osgoode Hall Law School for providing me with the space and means to continue this research and to present my work, while I was a post-doctoral researcher for the Transnational Business Governance Interactions Project, funded by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. The late and most time-consuming phase of this project coincided with my fellowship at Sutherland School of Law, University College Dublin (UCD). My gratitude goes to my colleagues at UCD for their encouragement and support.

I am very grateful to staff and representatives of the international organisations who agreed to be interviewed for my research. Their insights were indispensable for this book. I would also like to thank Stepan Wood and Petros C. Mavroidis who helped me to establish contact with the respective institutions.

This book has benefitted greatly from comments, helpful suggestions and critical advice at various stages of my research. I would particularly like to thank Ken Abbott, Lucila de Almeida, Tiago Andreotti e Silva, Julia Black, Lynsey Black, Eyal Benvenisti, Richard Collins, Stephen Coutts, Burkard Eberlein, Federico Fabbrini, Kasia Granat, Javier Habib, Errol Meidinger, Colin Scott, Justin Simard, Stepan Wood and the anonymous reviewers for their valuable feedback.

I am particularly grateful to Peer Zumbansen for encouraging my work, supporting the publication of this book, and kindly accepting it for inclusion in his series. Special thanks go to Tom Randall, Emma Collison, Fred Goykhman, Saritha Srinivasan, and the editorial staff at Cambridge University Press for their continuous support throughout this process.

Parts of this book, particularly found in Chapters 2 and 5, are based on a previous publication: R Schmidt, Protecting the Environment through Sports? Public-Private Cooperation for Regulatory Resources and International Law, 28 (4) European Journal of International Law (2017),

Last but not least, I am very grateful to Andreas and my family for their love, support and for never failing to believe in me. Throughout the many years that this project developed you always stood by my side. This book would have not been possible without you. I dedicate this book to Ware Marie for being my role model in steadfastness and persistence.
