

Index

-
- acculturation
 - and alienation/non-belonging 17–19
 - in Cuban American adolescents 22–23
 - adolescent males
 - acculturation and deviant behavior 22–23
 - susceptibility to radicalization 51–52
 - Aesop's fable example 1
 - Afghanistan invasion by Soviet Union, results of 143–144
 - aggression
 - cortical regions controlling 95
 - by "normal" people 81
 - see also* violence
 - Al Qaeda
 - origins of 143–144
 - terrorist groups without direct link to 160
 - alienation 18–19
 - as a result of poor acculturation 26–27
 - protective and contributive factors 23
 - social isolation leading to 21–22
 - summary 27
 - amygdala, criminal psychopaths' brains
 - reduced functional connectivity 93
 - structural impairment in 91
 - anger, philosophical perspective 12–14
 - anomie, Durkheim 19–20
 - antiterrorism operation (ATO)
 - combatants in Donbass (Ukraine), mental health study 128–129
 - discussion and conclusions 136–137
 - guidelines for mental healthcare 138
 - results 131–136
 - subjects and methods 129–131
 - Asia, historical examples 4–6
 - the Assassins, fundamentalist Muslim sect 2–4
 - Berardi, Francesco, Red Brigade member 111–112
 - bipolar-related states, link to political terrorism 104–106, 109–110
 - Blacks (Neofascists) versus Reds (Communists), political terrorists in Italy 113–114
 - brain, good versus evil 71–72
 - brain imaging studies in violent individuals 82
 - conclusions 94–95
 - functional imaging 86–88
 - frontal lobe 92
 - limbic areas 93
 - other brain areas 93–94
 - structural imaging 82–85
 - frontal lobe 88–89
 - further brain regions 91–92
 - limbic areas 90–91
 - temporal lobe 89–90
 - Breivik, Anders Behring 55
 - causes of terrorism 95
 - fighting underlying 156–157
 - group violence 58–59
 - cingulate cortex
 - functional deficits in violent offenders 93
 - structural abnormalities linked to psychopathy and violence 89
 - communist ideology, failure of 142
 - community-level support for countering terrorism 156–157

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-46776-6 — Evil, Terrorism and Psychiatry
Edited by Donatella Marazziti, Stephen Stahl

Index

More Information

170 | Index

- cooperation
 - between police, social services, and psychiatry (PSP), Denmark 146–147
 - in fight against terrorism 165–166
- counterterrorism measures 155–156
 - action manual for Western societies 167
 - analyzing root causes 156
 - delegitimizing terrorism 156–157
 - learning from defeats 160–161
 - media and social networks 157–160
 - multilevel cooperation 165–166
 - overview of general situation 167
 - resilience versus pacifism 161–163
 - summary 166–167
 - using sound judgment and patience 163–165
- cowardice of Western world 162–163
- cultural identity and acculturation 17–18
- culture conflict
 - alienation of third generation 26–27
 - link to deviance in adolescents 22–23
 - violent radicalization arising from 23–25
- Curcio, Renato, Red Brigade 110
- Daesh (Islamic State) see ISIL/ISIS
- death and life, terrorist approach to 162
- defeats in fighting terrorism, learning from 160–161
- Denmark, identification and prevention of radicalization 146–153
- deviance in adolescents, acculturation study 22–23
- DNA profiling 159–160
- Donbass war, Ukraine 129
 - features and scope of 137
- Durkheim, Émile
 - anomie 19–20
 - origins of religions 21
- East Germany, economic restructuring, effect on young men 57
- economic stagnation, youth bulges and terrorism 55–57
- education, youth bulges and terrorism risk 56–57
- emotion
 - and reason, imbalance between 38
 - suppression of in the military 54
- empathy, cortical regions associated with 95
 - frontal lobe 92
 - insula 90
 - temporal lobe 89–90
- ethno-cultural continuity 25
- eugenics, psychiatric patients during World War II 122–126
- euthanasia, psychiatric patients during World War II 117–118, 120–121
- evil brain, neurobiological perspective 71–72
- evil leaders, manipulating vulnerable brains 73–74
- existentialism 106–107, 162
- extremism/extremists see Islamist extremism
- family factors, mitigating deviance in immigrant adolescents 22–23
- fanatics 2
- Fenzi, Enrico, former Red Brigade member 107, 109
 - on “proletarian trials” 110–111
- frontal lobe abnormalities
 - functional imaging studies 92
 - structural imaging findings 88–89
- genetic factors 80–81
- good versus evil brain, neurobiological perspective 71–72
- group acculturation 25
- group violence
 - neuronal generators of 80
 - psychological and sociological theories 57–59

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-46776-6 — Evil, Terrorism and Psychiatry
Edited by Donatella Marazziti, Stephen Stahl

Index

More Information

	Index	171
Hassan-i-Sabbah (1034–1124), founder of Assassins order 2–4	international scenario of terrorism 142–145
hate/hatred	internet see social media
of Daesh terrorists 163	ISIL/ISIS 125
philosophy of 12–16	increased terrorist activity in Europe 50
providing a strong bond among allies 125	previous criminal record or recruits 81–82
of Western societies by terrorism 167	targeting of adolescent males 52
hedonistic component of terrorist attacks 95	Islamic culture, honor, and masculinity 54–55
heroes/heroism 53–55	Islamist extremism 49
ISIL strategy targeted at adolescent males 52	based on archaic masculinity 54–55
hippocampal formation, structural abnormalities in violent individuals 90	hypermasculinity notion 53–54
historical antecedents of terrorism 1–10	young men's susceptibility 55–56
homicide 110–113	Italy see political terrorism in Italy (1968–1988)
honor and masculinity, Islamic culture 54–55	journalists, dangers of becoming accomplices of terrorism 157–159
human body, used as a weapon 14	Kamikaze pilots, Japan 7–10
humanity, lack of in suicide terrorists 37–38	Lazagna, Giovanbattista 113
humiliation as motivating force 61–62	life and death, terrorist approach to 162
hypermasculinity 54	limbic brain areas of violent individuals
hypomanic states in revolutionary leaders 109–110	functional deficits 93
identity 17	structural abnormalities 90–91
acculturation and 17–19	lone-wolf terrorism 49
cultural identity of the third generation 26	characteristics of 59–61
group/collective 57–58	network of supporters 160
identity fusion concept, Swann 58–59	love towards humanity, terrorist ideal 108
indoctrination by Islamist ideology 61	Malabar Muslims, India 4–6
underaged boys in refugee camps 52	male alliances and group violence 57–58
Info-houses, Denmark 148–149	male identity/manhood, precariousness of 53
insula	male violence, neurobiological predispositions for 51–52
activation increased in psychopathic inmates 94	martyrdom/martyrs reduced volume in violent offenders 90	Islamist terrorism 54–55
intergroup conflict 58	Muslims of Malabar 6 suicide terrorists' lust for 37 masculinity and violence 53–55

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-46776-6 — Evil, Terrorism and Psychiatry
Edited by Donatella Marazziti, Stephen Stahl

Index

More Information

172 | Index

- media
 - role of enhancing terrorism 157–159
 - TV communication, spectator perception 14–16
- Meinhof, Ulrike, brain damage 78
- mental illness and terrorism 43
 - conclusions and perspectives 46
 - no evidence of link between 44–46
 - personality disorders 43–44
 - radicalization concerns 147–148
 - and violent behavior 24, 59–60
- migrants, stigmatization of 24–25
- militarized masculinity 54
- the Moors 4–5
- moral enhancement 74
- neuroethics 69–70
 - moral enhancement 74–75
- neuroS/T developments 74–75
- Nietzsche, Friedrich 162
 - nihilist theories 13
- non-belonging, sense of 18–19
 - turning into subgroup membership 19
- normlessness 21–22
 - and anomie 19–20
- optimism, irrational 107–108
- the “other” concept 125–126
- pacifism of Western world 161–163
- patience in fight against terrorism 163–165
- Peci, Roberto, “proletarian trial” and killing of 112–113
- peer influence, terrorist group
 - membership 43
- personality disorders of terrorists 43–44
- personality profiles, ATO combatants 131, 133, 136
- PET (Security and Intelligence Service), Denmark 148–149
 - dealing with radicalization concerns 149
 - training courses for professionals 149–151
 - use of PSP cooperation, case studies 151–153
- philosophy of hate and anger 12–14
 - perception of terrorism via TV images 14–16
- political killers, the Assassins 2–4
- political terrorism in Italy (1968–1988) 104–106
 - communists and neofascists 113–114
 - homicide and suicide 110–113
 - hypomanic states, revolutionary leaders 109–110
 - revolutionary gnosis 108–109
 - sociological theories 106–108
 - summary remarks 114–115
- posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD), war combatants 128, 136
- progressive deprivation, socioeconomic process 106–107
- propaganda 50, 125
- prosociality
 - religion promoting 71–72
 - of some terrorists 44
- PSP (police, social services, psychiatry cooperation), Denmark 146–147
 - radicalization awareness, dealing with 149
 - role in prevention of radicalization 148–149
 - on the individual case level 151–153
 - training courses 149–151
 - staff evaluation 151
- psychiatric patients in France during World War II 117–118
 - context 118
 - eugenics question 122–126
 - euthanasia policy 118–120
 - Germany’s starvation program 120–121
 - manslaughter verdict by the allies 121–122
 - post-war years 120
- psychological theories of terrorism 34–35
- psychopathology of terrorists 44–46

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-46776-6 — Evil, Terrorism and Psychiatry
Edited by Donatella Marazziti, Stephen Stahl

Index

More Information

Index | 173

- psychopaths
 - frontal lobe deficits 92
 - limbic areas 93
 - not recruited by terrorist
 - groups 32–33
- purposelessness 21–22
- radicalization
 - adolescent males' susceptibility to
 - 51–52
 - anomie and 19–20
 - identification and
 - prevention of 146–147
 - Danish prevention
 - approach 148–153
 - Islamist ideology a predominant
 - factor 61
 - mental health issue 147–148
 - prevention programs 25–27
 - of returnees 155
 - and social integration 23–25
- rationality of terrorists 38
- Red Army Faction (RAF), Germany
 - 78, 163
- Red Brigades (RBs) see political terrorism
 - in Italy (1968–1988)
- religion/religiosity
 - association with violence, hate, and
 - rage 13–14
 - controversies over 68–69
 - and development of human beings 71
 - effect on susceptible individuals 33–36
 - leading to extremism 21
 - manipulation of by evil leaders 73–74
 - neuro-anthropological
 - framework 69–70
 - neurobiological perspective on good
 - versus evil brain 72
 - neuroethics and moral
 - enhancement 74–75
 - and prosociality 71–72
 - and shaping of a good brain 72–73
- religious fundamentalism/extremism
 - 20–21
 - threatened by Western ideologies 53–54
 - and violent radicalization 24–25
- resilience versus pacifism, fight against
 - terrorism 161–163
- revolutionary gnosis 108–109
- right-wing extremists
 - hypermasculinity of 53–54
 - notion of archaic masculinity being
 - threatened 55
 - and violent offenses, Germany 57
- Rosso, Roberto, Prima Linea leader 112
- Samson, Biblical example 1
- Sartre, Jean-Paul 107
- scapegoating of the mentally ill 125
- security authorities, competition with
 - terrorists 160–161
- Security and Intelligence Service,
 - Denmark see PET
- smartphones, using proactively to
 - combat terrorism 159
- social/collective identity 58–59
- social integration and
 - radicalization 23–25
- social isolation
 - leading to alienation 21–22
 - lone-actor terrorists 60
 - and radicalization 25
- social media
 - as instrument of counterterrorism
 - 159
 - terrorists' use of as a weapon 157–158
- sociological theories of terrorism 34–35
- sound judgment needed in fight against
 - terrorism 163–165
- Soviet Union invasion of Afghanistan
 - (1979), terrorist groups arising
 - from 143–144
- spectator perspective, television
 - communication 14–16
- starvation of psychiatric patients during
 - World War II 118–120
- eugenics question 122–124
- judgment of involuntary
 - manslaughter by the Allies
 - 121–122

Cambridge University Press
978-1-108-46776-6 — Evil, Terrorism and Psychiatry
Edited by Donatella Marazziti, Stephen Stahl

Index

More Information

174 | Index

- suicide
 - Durkheim's anomic 19–20
 - of terrorists 110–113
- suicide as a weapon
 - Aesop's fable example 1
 - the Assassins 2–4
 - Kamikaze pilots, Japan 7–10
 - the past two centuries 6–7
 - Samson, Biblical example 1
 - South East Asia 4–6
 - zealots 2
- suicide terrorists 30–31
 - explanations/theories for
 - behavior of 33–36
 - history of South East Asia 4–6
 - Kamikaze pilots, Japan 7–10
 - profile of 32–33
 - psychological features 30–31
 - summary remarks 36–38
- survival instinct, reversal of in terrorists 37
- television
 - images of terrorism and spectator perception 14–16
 - see also* media
- temporal lobe 80, 89–90
- temporal pole, structural abnormalities 90–91
- terrorism
 - definitions 42
 - different typologies of 42
 - ideology of 155–156
 - international scenario 142–145
 - key aspects 49–51
 - male phenomenon 51
 - “otherness” justifying 125
 - possible neurobiological basis 51
 - recent history 6–7
 - research difficulties 42–43
 - theories of 33–36
 - see also* counterterrorism measures
- terrorists
 - neurobiological predisposition 80–82
 - personality of 43–44
 - profile of 32–33
 - psychopathology of 44–46
 - suicide in 110–112
 - see also* suicide terrorists
- third generation, alienation of 26–27
- Tuti, Mario, fascist militant 113
- Ukraine, Donbass war see Donbass war, Ukraine
- violence
 - and masculinity 53–55
 - neuronal correlates 79–80
 - of right-wing extremists, Germany 57
- violent individuals
 - brain imaging studies 82–94
 - pattern of brain dysfunctions 94–95
- vulnerability to deviance, family conflict creating 23
- Wagner, Ernst, brain lesion 78–79
- war in Donbass, Ukraine 128–129
 - discussion and guidelines 136–139
 - PTSD study of ATO combatants 129–136
- war, waging against terrorism, failure of 165
- warrior, symbol of masculinity 54–55
- Whitman, Charles, brain abnormality 79
- youth bulges and extremism, Germany 55–57
- zealots 2