

Contents

Preface	page ix
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Paul at the End of the Fourth Century	2
1.2 About Pauline Reception	7
1.3 About the Present Study	16
2 Catechesis and the Catechumenate: A Historical Sketch	20
2.1 (No) Catechesis in the New Testament	22
2.2 A Quiet Beginning: The Second Century	25
2.3 A Burst of Activity: The Early Third Century	34
2.4 The Flowering of Catechesis in the Fourth Century	59
2.5 Conclusion	64
3 Narrating the Catechist in the Acts of Paul	66
3.1 Textual Matters	67
3.2 Acta Pauli : A Plot Summary	74
3.3 Not Baptizing Thecla: Two Alternatives	78
3.4 Thecla, Initiation, and Self-Control	82
3.5 Paul Baptizing Others	90
3.6 Conclusion	91
4 Clement's Pedagogical Interpretation: Milk and Meat	93
4.1 Clement's Catechumenate: Structure and Terminology	94
4.2 Pedagogical Problems and Pauline Solutions	102
4.3 Paul's Catechetical Activity in Clement's Writings	118
Excursus : Paul's Catechesis in Irenaeus?	121
4.4 Conclusion	125

5	Cultivating the Soul: Origen's Catechetical Paul	126
5.1	Origen's Catechumenate	130
5.2	Homilist and Theologian: Origen's Institutional Contexts	139
5.3	Origen's Paul	151
5.4	Conclusion	168
6	Paul the Catechist, Chrysostom, and the Fourth Century	170
6.1	Chrysostom's Catechumenate	172
6.2	Chrysostom and Paul the Catechist	182
6.3	Chrysostom's Catechist in the Fourth Century	196
7	Textual Resources and a Catechetical Paul	201
7.1	A Catechetical Paul: Resources and Implications	203
7.2	Reading the Old with the New	211
7.3	Conclusion	248
8	Conclusion: Reception as Iteration – A Sketch	251
8.1	Iterative Reading: A Sketch	255
8.2	(Non-)Final Thoughts	269
	Appendix: Chart of Chrysostom's Catecheses	273
	Bibliography	275
	Indexes	309
	Reference Index	309
	Modern Author Index	321
	Subject Index	329